During the noon hour the sun came out and the players got their first glimpse of Old Sol since coming to Youngstown. The afternoon proved bright and warm, and the Blount men were back in action at Wright Park at 1.30 o'clock. Batting practice was the order for the afternoon, and with Manager Blount and Sid Tirrell, the young Rochester semi-pro. pitcher on the rubber, the Petes had their first opportunity of the season to step into the ball. The twirlers, of course, put nothing on the Spalding but their fingers, merely lobbing the ball over the plate to give the batters a chance to get their lamps brightened up. Most of the squad showed good form at the plate, and Manager Blount took advantage of the opportunity to point out a few defects in style on the part of some of the recruits. The majority met the ball nicely however, although it is of course too early in the game to tell very much about the men. There were about twenty players out in uniform, three or four of the local semi-professional players turning out with the Blountmen for the afternoon's doings.

TWO DRILLS A DAY.

The prospects are for a continuance of the good weather today and Manager Blount is looking forward to two good workouts. Two drills a day when the weather permits will be the Petes' portion, with the monotony of the daily grind enlivened by a number of practice games. The first of these will come on Sunday, when the Petes meet one of the strongest semi-professional teams in Youngstown. The fans here are taking a keen interest in the Canadian team, due to the popularity of Manager Blount and Pitcher Schettler, and the exhibition games arranged during the training period promise to be well patronized.

AN IDEAL TRAINING GROUND.

Wright Park, where the Petes are being put through their preliminary capers, is a real "big league" ball park and widely different from the public park at Preston, where the Canucks trained last season. Rowan's bunch found it hard at Preston to get much infield pratcice owing to the nature of the ground, but here the squad has a splendid diamond to work on, while the park is supplied with splendid dressing rooms, equipped with showers and other facilities for training. It is an ideal spot for the spring work and if the weather man does his part, the Peterborough squad should be in grand shape three weeks from now.

NO NEW ARRIVALS.

No new players arrived yesterday. This was rather a surprise to Manager Blount, who expected the two Millers, Bucklew, Dawson and several other players. They will probably drift in some time to-day Chappy Chapdelaine is also among the missing, but the little catcher was one of the first to sign a contract, and is expected any time.

There are only four pitchers in camp so far, Cresswell, Belting, Schettler and Tirrell. The latter is making his debut in professional company, but brings the reputation of packing a deadly spitball. If he produces the goods on the firing line that he is credited with, he may land a berth. There are very few good "moist ball" artists in the Canadian circuit, and a real good spit-baller would blaze through the League. Tirrell will get an opportunity of showing his wares on Sunday, as he will be used in the exhibition game.

OLD BOYS LOOK GOOD.

The old members of the Peterborough team have all wintered well. Frank Fox, who was handicapped last season by a turned ankle, which resulted in slewing him up and caused him to shift in rapid succession from London to Ottawa and then to Peterborough, says he is in grand shape and the injured ankle shows no signs of giving him trouble. Fox will give them all a battle for a place, as he is a fast fielder, has speed on the bases and has a good style at the plate. He is very anxious to play the infield this year. Belting looks fit and well. The Swedish pitcher is keen to get back to Peterborough, which, he says, is one of the best places on the map. Pitcher Cresswell is heavier than last year and should have a good season.

CATCHER KELLEY

One of the backstop candidates working out with the Blount men at Youngstown, O. Kelley hails from Erie, Pa., and is said to be a comer.

Opening Day In Western League

DES MOINES, Ia., April 17.—The teams of the Western League got away to-day in their fifteenth annual race for the championship pennant. Every one of the eight clubs in the circuit is reported in good condition and the prospects of a close and interesting race never appeared brighter. The circuit is the same as last season, but among the different clubs a number of changes in managers and players have been made since last year. Jack Coffey, formerly of the Boston Nationals, has taken Jack Henricks' place as manager of the Denver team. At Omaha Charles Arbogast has been superseded by John Gonding as manager. Nick Maddox, formerly of the Pittsburg Pirates, is the new pilot of the Wichita tema. In to-day's opening games the Denver champions appeared at Lincoln, Wichita at Tokepa, Sioux City at St. Joseph and Omaha in this city. A season of 166 games will be played, with September 27 at the date of the wind-up.

OTTAWA ADVANCE GUARD ARRIVES

CHATHAM, April 16.—E. T. Rogers of Decatur, Ill., is the first man to arrive in Chatham for the spring training camp of the Ottawa team. He came in to-day, and it is expected that Manager Shaughnessy will be here to-morrow. He is now in Detroit trying to pick up some players. The squad of twenty is expected to be complete before the end of the week. The park is in good condition and city workmen to-day are preparing the diamond.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

London Advertiser: Information from the London training camp and from the owners of the Tecumsehs show that when the Canadian League season opens in May Manager "Doc" Deisling will have a team far superior to any that has yet represented this city in a race for the league championship.

The London owners have received word from the camp that the players are working harder than ever before and the early spring training experiment has proved a success in the way of giving Manager Reisling a chance to weed out the material which will not make the grade.

Manager Reisling believes that with the best of last year's team and the cream of the recruits now in training he will be able to reconstruct a team that should finish on top of the Canadian League when the last game is played in the fall of this year.

CHARLOTTE, Mich., April 16.—Another bright, sunshiny day greeted the baseball athletes Tuesday morning, and Harry Howick having reported, there were two pitchers to throw to the batters in the morning practice, and a very good batting and fielding session was indulged in.

Two solid hours of practice in the afternoon was the order, and with a little soreness to work out, another two or three days will have the boys that are here now pretty well limbered up, so that they will be able to put up an article of ball at Grand Rapids Saturday that will be a credit to them.

Inker was out chasing flies, and though he let out considerably he handled everything that came his way in good style and did well, throwing to bases during the infield practice.

Howick had two workouts in the box, merely getting enough on the ball to work on control.

The infield was as follows; Medna on first, scoops them up in the old "Scoops" Carey fashion, and handles himself in good style.

Hammond worked out at second, and though a trifle anxious, got everything that came his way.

Koop and Manager Craven grabbed up all sorts of bounders that came through short field.

Collett worked out at third, and his work compared favourably with the rest.

Outfielder Kustus and Second Baseman Hubert Hadley are expected in camp to-day, which will swell the list to eight.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., April 16—Frank Shaugnessy, of the Ottawa Canadian League Club, who is here looking over Harry Martin's Central League Club, made the announcement that President Nevin of Detroit, would turn over two of the Providence International League pitchers to the Ottawa Club. Pitcher Sam Hall, formerly with Cleveland, is working out with the Fort Wayne team and is showing great class. Shaughnessy expects him to be the best pitcher in the Canadian League this season. 'Shag,' who led this City to a pennant in 1912, jumped into a uniform yesterday afternoon and sharpened up his batting eye. He leaves with Hall on Saturday for Detroit and will take in the Tiger-Cleveland series Saturday and Sunday, then proceed on to Chatham, Ont., where the Canucks are training.

Carl Fleming, a fleet third baseman, drafted by Fort Wayne from the Campaign Club of the Illinois-Missouri League, last season, will likely be turned over to the Ottawa club. Frank Shaughnessy has taken a liking to this youngster, and is trying to make a dicker with Claude Varnell for his services. Fleming hit .293 and fielded .941 last season. He is a very fast youth.

Brant, purchased from Chatanooga, is making good with the Fort Wayne team and Ottawa is not likely to get him. There is a possibility of Bramble, a right hand spitballer, being sent to Canada. He played in that league last year.

ST. THOMAS, April 15.—C. O. Stanley, president of the St. Thomas Ball Club, has added another twirler to his already long list of boxmen. The new man's name is Wallace, and he hails from Athens, Georgia. He will report at once to Manager Craven at Charlotte, Mich. Six of the pitchers have reported, Wilkinson, Clements, Howick, Rilley, Noble and Hughie. Baker has not been heard from and Stanley says that "Wild Bill" can do as he likes about it as he is not worrying any whether Baker reports or not. The St. Thomas Club has one of the strongest hurling staffs of any of the Canadian League clubs and the managementment players and fans are confident that the Saints will give the pennant a hard run the coming season. The new pitcher was secured through the advice of "Glad" Graney, left fielder for the Cleveland American team, who was in town one day this week.

Hamilton Spectator: Business Manager Bobby Kerr, of the Hamilton baseball club, received word to-day to the effect that the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics would play here on Wednesday, August 12. They had arranged to play in Brantford on August 11, the second day of the Brantford old home week, and they promptly fell in line with the local club's proposal that they also come here. This will be welcome news for the fans, who will be anxious to see the great $100,000 infield, McInnes, Collins, Barry and Baker, in line, and to get a glimpse of the third baseman who does so much damage in the big tent with his war club. The Athletics are the best attraction that could be booked and one and all will be anxiously awaiting August 12. All of the stars wil be in the line-up, with the possible exception that one of the second string pitchers will be sent in against the locals.

Billy Donohue, Jimmy Gilhooley, Patsy Dougherty and Dudley, the Edmonton first baseman, are the latest additions to the Hamilton camp. Donohue, Dougherty and Gilhooley are the picture of health, and each shows a nice sized increase in avoirdupois.

"I never felt better, and although I know the class of ball will be faster than ever this season I think that I will be in good shape to hold my own," said Donohue to the Herald. Dougherty expressed himself in the same way. Gilhooley weighs 165 lbs., as against 155 last year, and is ready for the gong.

The remainder of the squad is expected in any time to-day.

MATTY LAMOND PRESERVES SILENCE

BRANTFORD, April 16.—President Nelson is beginning to worry about Matty Lamond, the local Canadian League backstop. The little feloiw wrote to Manager Deneau early in the spring that he would be back this year, but since then no word has been received of him.

His signed contract has not yet arrived, and the management is hoping that he is waiting to bring it with him, but President Nelson says he would rest easier if he knew exactly where he was at with reference to the little 'sorrel top.'' Should Lamond fail to report the club will not be badly off as Taylor has a reputation as a catcher, and will be able to fill in very nicely until Deneau can land Price or one of the other catchers on whom he has strings.

First Aid in Cornwall

This little story comes from a very remote fishing village in Cornwall, and shows the inhabitants' idea of first aid. There had been a wreck; all the crew were saved, but one man was brought ashore unconscious.

The curate was present in the beach and he asked:

"How do you usually proceed in the case of one apparently drowned?"

And the answer promptly came: "S'arch his pockets."

EASTERN RADIAL RAILWAY SCHEME TO BE DISCUSSED

Mayor Buller stated to-day that he expected the first meeting of the Rural Radial System to be held in Peterborough within three weeks. Mr. Peck went up to Toronto this morning and promised to telephone the city this afternoon the exact date upon which the representatives of surrounding municipalities would meet for the consideration of a union to support the claims of this part of the province and to meet those in Toronto who are interested in the scheme. It will likely mean that some of the Western Radial experts may come to the city, and the Legislature will possibly be represented. If the meeting is secured for Peterborough it should be an important occasion.

The New Liner

The agents of the Cunard Line received some interesting details yesterday from Liverpool of the storing and fitting out of the new liner Aquitania, which is being carried on in Glasgow under the direction of Wiliam H. Allison, the chief Steward, whos staff will include 90 cooks and 500 stwards when the ship starts from Liverpool on May 30.

Here are some of the stores that are being taken on board: A ton of coffee, 1,500 pounds of tea, 7 1-2 tons of sugar, 35 tons of flour, 25 tons of biscuits, 2 tons of breakfast foods, 1,000 pounds of mustard, 200 pounds of pepper, 3,000 barrels of rice, 4 tons of corned beef, 20 tons of fresh beef, 8 tons of mutton and veal, 3,000 chickens, 250 turkys, 25,000 eggs, 2,000 pounds of ham, 6,000 pounds of bacon, 2 1-2 tons of cheese, a ton of prunes, 400 oxtails, and 800 oranges, 7 1-2 tons of fresh fish, 2 tons of clams, 500 barrels of oysters, 200 large crabs, and 500 pounds of green turtle.

In addition, pate de fois gras, caviar, clam juice, frog, frogs' legs, Bombay ducks, sardines, haddocks, herrings, and lobsters, are put on boardboard in large quantities. The Englishman's passion for marmalade will be satisfied by 200 large crocks for the voyage.

According to the Board of Trade regulations, the contingent stores carried in addition to those mentioned above would maintain a city of 25,000 inhabitants for more than a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Maitland Roy were the hosts of a most enjoyable dance at their pretty home on Markland street last evening for the "not outs," in honour of their sons. Mr. and Mrs. Roy received their guests, the latter wearing a dainty French gown. The rooms were very bright and attractive with their softly shaded lights and quantities of spring flowers and ferns. Reed's orchestra rendered an excellent programme. A buffet supper was served and the tables were very dainty and inviting, being decorated with narcissi, daffodils and greenery.—Hamilton Spectator.

Want Pardon For Incorrigible.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 19.—William Taylor, a youth serving 12-year sentence in the state reformatory at Jeffersonville for highway robbery, is said to be so unruly the officials have asked that he be pardoned by the governor, so they can get rid of him. Taylor, it is said, has broken so many rules of the reformatory and his unruliness has had such a bad effect on the other prisoners that the officials refused to consider a parole for him on the ground that he would be returned to the institution in a few months.

POORER EACH YEAR

Present Budget Excuse For Borrowing, Says Mr. Robb

AIKINS FOR FREE WHEAT

OTTAWA, April 18.—In a vigorous arraignment of the budget yesterday in the House of Commons James A. Robb said he had listened to three annual budgets from Hon. W. T. White. Each one had been more gloomy and discouraging than its predecessors. In 1913 the Minister of Finance had presented a rosy statement, owing to the sound administration of his predecessor and the splendid trade conditions Mr. Fielding's administration had developed. In 1913, after a full year of the Borden Administration, the pronouncement was not so good, while the present budget of 1914 was "an excuse for continued borrowings and unsettled trade conditions."

Mr. Robb (Lib., Huntingdon) in resuming the budget debate, said that the Borden Government had no remedy for hard times except to build drillsheds and give away Dreadnoughts. The Finance Minister had stated that the Government could not hope to borrow money for years to come at less than 4 per cent. If that were the case why did it not pay 4 per cent. to depositors in the postal savings and Government savings banks? If money was worth 4 per cent. why pay our own people less? The Conservatives believed in taxing everything. The Liberals favored giving the farmers a wider market.

Mr. Aikins (Con., Brandon) said there was no effective argument, in his opinion, against the demand of the western farmers for free wheat.

"If the interest of the west," Mr. Aikins continued, "are to be sacrificed to the interests of the eastern millers and the railways, then it is the duty of the Government to bonus the flour milling industry in the western provinces. For this purpose milling machinery should be admitted free of duty, and power be furnished the millers at reduced rates by the Dominion Government.

The Laurier Government, the member for Brandon continued, had neglected the west, while endeavoring to make the eastern people believe that they were making great sacrifices for the benefit of the country west of Lake Superior. That Government had only expended about $1,000,000 all told in railway construction in western Canada, including the few miles of the National Transcontinental which ran through the Province of Manitoba. True, it had loaned ten million dollars to the Grand Trunk Pacific, but that money would be repaid.

Mr. Buchanan (Lib., Medicine Hat) spoke earnestly in favor of free wheat. He said the population of Southern Alberta had become stationery and that settlers were leaving the land and returning to Ontario and the United States.

Mr. Buchanan declared himself against any further aid to the Canadian Northern. Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann, he said, should sell out their interests in street car companies and other enterprises at home and abroad and complete the Canadian Northern with their own money. If they could not or would not do this, the road should be taken over by the Dominion Government.

Mr. Webster (Con., Brockville) ridiculed the statement made by Liberal speakers that the western farmers were not getting fair treatment from the Government. He pointed out that pioneer conditions in the west to-day were not as half so strenuous as pioneer conditions in Ontario and Quebec fifty years ago. The west up until a short time ago had been given the pick of the immigrants, while Ontario farmers had a hard time to get farm help.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson said the impending contest between the two political parties in Canada would be a contest between the big interests and the plain people. Protection he denounced as the breeder of corruption. Its votaries, like the heathen of old, made idols of gold and silver, the works of the hands of men. Protectionism was frankly materialistic and held up material success as the national ideal, with demoralizing effect upon the social, moral and intellectual conditions of the people.

Mr. Morris (Con., Categuguay) opposed free wheat and believed too much attention was being given to complaints from the west. Many of the wheat growers in the prairie provinces were not farmers at all, but were exploiters of the soil. Before long real farmers would have to go into that part of Canada and build up the soil.

"Poets are born," says the philosopher of folly, "and that's just the trouble. In nine cases out of ten it would be better if they weren't."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

No Fuss For This Wedding.

WASHINGTON, April 18. — The President and Mrs. Wilson announced yesterday that the wedding of their youngest daughter, Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson, and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo would take place on Thursday, May 7, in accordance with the wishes of both. Only the Vice-President and Mrs. Marshall, the Cabinet and the immediate members of the two families are to be present.

HINDU INVASION?

Boatload on Way From Shanghai To Test Exclusion Rule.

OTTAWA, April 18. — When Parliament met yesterday afternoon Mr. H. H. Stevens (Vancouver) directed the attention of the Minister of the Interior to a press despatch stating that 400 Hindus were en route from Shanghai and Hong Kong to Vancouver, with a view to testing the Government regulation respecting Oriental immigration.

"The Deputy Minister received a telegram to that effect this morning," replied Hon. Dr. Roche, "and the officers at Vancouver have been instructed to prohibit these people coming in contrary to our regulations."

It will be recalled that several months ago several Hindus tested in the courts the validity of the orders in council which said that Asiatics could not enter Canada unless coming by direct steamship from their native land.

Judge Hunter upset the orders on the ground that they did not conform with the act. The Government then repealed the orders and new ones were passed which it was believed would meet the technical objections raised by Judge Hunter.

However, outside of these orders, there is at present an order in council, passed March 31, and to be in force for six months, which prohibits the entrance of all artisans and laborers into British Columbia. It is believed that this order, at least, will effectually bar the entrance of the coming Hindus.

ELEVEN ARE BURNED.

Fire Sweeps New York Apartment House With Tragic Results.

Eleven Burned To Death.

NEW YORK, April 18.—A fire that swept through the five-storey apartment house at 741 Eighth avenue early yesterday claimed eleven victims and resulted in the injury of five others, one of whom, a woman, probably will die. Only four of the ten bodies taken from a theatrical boarding-house that occupied half of the building could be identified, the others being charred beyond recognition. The identified are:

William Wallace, 46 years of age; Mrs. Nellie Wallace, his wife, 32 years of age; Mrs. Nellie Spencer, 25 years of age, a cloak model; Muriel Davis, three years old, and Mrs. G. C. Davis.

BODIES IN FIRE RUINS.

Search of Debris Reveals Remains of Murdered Pair.

GEDDES, S.D., April 18. — What appears to be a double murder was disclosed here yesterday, when the bodies of W. H. Mennie, manager of the Farmers' Lumber Yard here, which was burned Thursday night, and his bookkeeper, Miss Blanche Signal, were found in the debris of the lumber office. Both bodies were badly charred.

The feet of Miss Signal were tied with a wire and her hands wired behind her. Her skull had been crushed with a hammer, found nearby. Mr. Mennie's feet also were wired together and a wire was found on one wrist, the other end was broken. His skull also had been fractured.

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

(By F. H. Dale Fuse)

(Part II.)

Many people think that all poetry should be written in such a way as to be intelligible to the meanest order of intellect, and that all that is not written in such a vein must necessarily belong to a lower stratum of literature. The real truth of the matter is, however, that perfection is to be found alike in polysyllabic, and monosyllabic verse, and that where the latter may, and does, appeal to the less-educated reader, the former has a strong following amongst th more cultured lovers of literature.

As instances of the great power of short words, both in prose and verse might be cited some of the finest passages in Shakespeare, notably Hamlet's soliloquy, "To be or not to be"; the most impressive portions of the Bible, such as the Book of Job and Revelation, or the denunciations of Jeremiah against Jehoiachim, King of Judah; Tennyson's "Tears, Idle Tears"; Pope' Universal Prayer; Gray' Elegy, and Scott's description of the Battle of Flodden Field. All these might be searched and searched in vain for words that would prove stumbling-blocks at a country spelling-bee. Dr. Johnson, on the other hand, delighted in polysyllabic words, as did Gibbon, the author of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire and DeQuincey and many others. But there is no doubt that the vast bulk of readers prefer the simpler forms of poetry to those of the higher philosophical writers, whose works call for deep contemplation and the aid of a dictionary to gather the meaning of some of their sesquipedalian terms. A very clever piece of versifying by Dr. J. Addison Alexander appeared several years ago in the Princeton Review. It is in the form of two sonnets and sets forth the facts I have been expounding, in a nutshell.

It is entitled

The Power of Short Words.

Think not that strength lies in the big, round word,
Or that the brief and plain must needs be weak.
To whom can this be true who once has heard
The cry for help, the tongue that all men speak,
When want or woe or fear is in the throat,
So that each word gasped out is like a shriek
Pressed from the sore heart, or a strange wild note
Sung by some fay or friend? There is a strength
Which dies if stretched too far or spun too fine,
Which has more height than breadth, more depth than length.
Let but this force of thought and speech be mine,
And he that will may take the sleek, fat phrase
Which glows and burns not, though it gleam and shine,—
Light, but no heat,—a flash, but not a blaze!

Nor is it mere strength that the short word boasts:
It serves of more than fight or storm to tell,
The roar of waves that dash on rock-bound coasts,
The crash of tall trees when the wild winds swell,
The roar of guns, the groans of men that die
On blood-stained fields. It has a voice as well
For them that far off on their sick beds lie;
For them that weep, for them that mourn the dead;
For them that laugh and dance and clap the hand;
To joy's quick step, as well as grief's slow tread,
The sweet, plain words we learnt at first keep time.
And though the theme be sad, or gay, or grand,
With each, with all, these may be made to chime,
In thought, or speech, or song, in prose or rhyme.

People read poetry for two reasons: some, for the purely sensuous enjoyment of the music of the lines and some for the exercise of their intellects in attempting to discover the works of the great poets. For, it the orks of the great poets. For, it is an undoubted fact that in no more palatable form can home truths be imparted than by the sugar-coated medium of poetry. We can obtain philosophy from many books. Plain truths are levelled at us every Sunday and holy day from hundreds of pulpits, but for the most part they are so much good seed flung on barren ground for the simple reason that the sowers do not know enough to tickle the sod properly. As a matter of ample fact all the philosophy that there is in the world, or is likely to be was produced hundreds upon hundreds of years ago by pagan and Christian thinkers, and all that sophists and sages have been engaged in ever since has been in smashing the older images and re-moulding their clay into all sorts of grotesque and beautiful forms to present them to a world always on the watch for something startling. If it were not for this constant variation of teaching it would get into a very humdrum way of looking at things. It has to be kept alive by innovation upon innovation; just as trade has to be kept alive by variations in fashions. Modern philosophy, either in poetry or prose, simply keeps mankind up to the mark and, mindful of those higher ideals which were set by Plato and other pagan writers, and brought out and simplified to their fullest extent in the Christian dispensation.

It is quite an enjoyable study when one is in a reflective mood, to sit down quietly and attempt to grasp the full meaning of just one short poem in any anthology. When people talk glibly, as some do, of having read the works of most of our great poets and of how they dote on Browning or Byron or Tennyson or Morris or Swinburne, I wonder how much they have gained in the course of their voluminous reading. It is a practical impossibility to gather in the full beauty of a poem at one perusal. Take, for instance, that beautiful hymn by Cardinal Newman "Lead, Kindly Light." As a poem it is a gem of the first water and one of the greatest witnesses to its beauty lies in the fact that it loses nothing of its wonderful charm when divorced from its musical setting. How many are there who take the trouble to get at the true significance of the words? Not many. Most of us are so enthralled by the fascinating cadence of the lines that we give ourselves up entirely to the enjoyment of listening to their rendering by the choir and turn a deaf ear to the appeal which they present to the spiritual side of our nature.

Canada Has Thirteen Appeals.

LONDON, April 18. — The Privy Council resumes the hearing of appeals on Monday next. Canada contributes thirteen out of the twenty colonial appeals listed. The case of Despatie versus Tremblay, which has been several times adjourned, and which raises important issues respecting the marriage of Catholics in Quebec, is down for hearing.

Chinese Bandits Lose 2,000.

PEKIN, April 18.—"White Wolf," the notorious brigand, lost 2,000 of his followers, killed or wounded, in Thursday's battle with the regular troops at Li Chuan Hsien, according to the official report.

The crushing defeat of the brigands occurred after they had captured and looted the town of Han Yuan Hsien.

WEDDING FAVOURS

There are almost innumerable place cards that are suitable for luncheons and dinners given to the bride and her friends. One design that is now attractive shows a roguish cupid aiming an arrow from a white, high-heeled slipper. There is a set for the wedding party—he bride and bride groom, the maids and ushers, flower girls and pages and the minister.

Then there is a set that shows trunks and hand boxes, suit cases and hand bags all tagged with white ribbon bows and "newly married" signs. Another set of bridal party figures shows tiny artificial flowers in the hands of all the paper maids and the bride.

Floral favours of some sort are prettiest for spring wedding gaieties. Little china baskets that can be filled with tiny roses are attractive. So are small baskets of wicker. Then there are paper-covered cases of a dozen varieties to hold candles — white roses, tulips and festoons of smaller flowers all make effective decorations for these cases.

STRAY TOPICS FROM LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

It is estimated that $15,000,000 will be needed for the work of strengthening the bridges over the East River for the subway trains. The greater part of this vast sum will be spent to double-deck the centre span of the old Brooklyn bridge. Experts have declared that the cables supporting the bridge are amply strong enough to support the additional load of the subway trains, but there seems to be some doubt on this point. Nearly a decade ago the city hired an eminent engineer to test the structure. It was found then, according to the engineer's report, that the maximum of safety strain had been reached, and that the towers and cables were standing every ounce of weight they could. The problem now confronting the Bridge Commissioner is to find a way of adding a further load without endangering the safety of the bridge.

Not all of the novelty toys come from Europe. A well known New York manufacturer is showing something new in this direction for the coming holiday trade. One of the chief parts of the toy is a fourteen inch metal plank, which is supported by a long and a short brace. Both of these braces can be folded against the plank in packing. The main performer is a metal mannikin with movable legs. Held in its hands are two balancing rods, with weights fastened at the ends. When put at the top of the plank the mannikin walks down it step by step and sways from side to side somewhat after the manner of a tight-rope walker. It does not fall off when the end of the plank is reached, but by the force of gravity is held suspended by the heels.

Patrick Walker, a well known character in the underworld, discovered a way to beat the finger-print system of identifying criminals. The man is dead now and the officials at the Identification Bureau of Police Headquarters hope that his secret died with him. Some days ago Walker was picked up in the street unconscious and two days later died in Bellevue Hospital. Though he had served many prison terms he was not recognized by the police at first and a detective was detailed to take the finger prints of the dead man in an effort to establish his identity. The detective was surprised to find that every whirl or loop on the man's fingers had been erased and no imprint could be made. The police have since been endeavouring to find the man's relatives and associates in the hope that they may come upon the secret of how to erase finger prints, a feat which until Walker's death was considered an impossibility. Should the secret become public property the result would be to deprive the police the world over of their most valuable and reliable aids in dealing with criminals.

Veteran clubwomen have been surprised to learn that Mme. Dore, who has been appearing in vaudeville in this city, is none other than Mrs. Dore Lyon, who a few years ago was one of the most widely known clubwomen in the entire country. Mrs. Lyon was one of the founders of the Federation of Women's Clubs. She was the possessor of a large fortune until 1910, when all she had was swept away in Wall Street. At that time her debts were put at upwards of half a million dollars. Only a few years previously her husband, who was a well-known builder, had failed for a like amount. Mr. Lyon's first wife was Kate Clax, ton, the noted actress. Besides devoting much of her time to women's clubs, Mrs. Lyon at one time edited "The Clubwoman," and in 1903 she wrote and published a novel that met with considerable success. Several years ago she announced that she was going to retire from club life and take up the stage. Her present vaudeville engagement, however, marks her first professional appearance in this city.

Most New York funerals are inhuman affairs. They are too scientifically efficient and big cityfied. The deceased either rolls to his last home in an autobus hearse—the chauffeur hitting all the bumps, the minister praying, the quartette singing, the wife weeping, and the four friends on the last seat wondering what is happening to the market—or else he jingles briskly along the avenue ahead of one carriage, in which the janitor and three friends are getting the air. But during the snow blockade of the last week a weird and unusual note has been struck.

On the upper west side the cross streets slant down toward the North River at a lively grade, which usually prompts one-o'clock-in-the-morning motorists to cut out the muffler. It was impossible for horses to drag vehicles up these snow blocked hills. And the people thoughtlessly went on dying, without realizing the added difficulties of operation they were forcing on funeral directors.

So that at any hour of almost any day one might see a hearse stranded at the Broadway crossing. And then if one were sufficiently curious or sufficiently heartless to wait or watch one would see a melancholy little party come stumbling and slipping up the ice covered pavement. Sometimes the janitor was called on to help the city-muscled pallbearers. Behind the casket came a relative or two and a friend or two. And knee deep in the snow, eyes and mouths open, gaped the inevitable gathering — vultures waiting to pounce on grief.

Every now and then one contemplates the New York courts in action—and then one goes away wagging his head. There is the case of John Supper for example. Last October Mr. Supper was put upon by one Charles Graff. Mr. Graff not only expressed a desire to kill Mr. Supper, but unlike the ordinary New Yorker of vocal wrath, undertook to make good. So that Mr. Supper reached around behind his person and shot Mr. Graff with one of the ordinary four - dollar nickel-plated guns until Mr. Graff died.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada. — "Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Supper was tried the other day, and the jury unanimously—gladly, in fact—held that Supper was perfectly justified in killing Graff. Then the long arm of the law reached out and grabbed Mr. Supper and he was convicted on the charge of having in his possession one lethal weapon, to wit, a cast-iron revolver. And he was sent to the penitentiary for one year because he had an implement with which he did a deed of which the law had just found him innocent.

So you needn't wonder at discovering that there is a preferred class in the New York courts. If you just stab your mother or set fire to an apartment house you may jog along for months in the Tombs—which is a notably smelly and unpleasant prison—without being placed on trial. But if you are caught poking a gun you get into the preferred class and are tried at once. Can you beat it?

That green wig stuff doesn't go. At least not for regular people. Show girls and actresses and professional dancers and the lissome ladies who always have a menu card to look at in the Broadway restaurants, may wear them. But the real folks would not put them on for a social event any more than they would wear curtain rings in their noses. The professional women's league had some sort of a rookus the other night—and the professional women amount to something here, if you please.

"Whatevah," asked the professional women of each other, putting their lorgnettes to their eyes, "is that creechuh wearing?" And by and by they answered their own question.

"It is," said they, "it really is a green wig!"

So they laughed—not in loud, ringing tones, but coldly and cruelly. And pretty soon the wig woman went away somewhere and presumably died. Mme. Frances Alda wore a green wig while singing the beauty part in the "Tales of Hoffman." And that wig simply obliterated and destroyed an otherwise artistic and delightful performance. No one talked or thought of anything else. Mme. Alda is the wife of the director of the Metropolitan—and if she wears a green wig again everyone will remember the story about the grey mare.

You can't imagine how cold and dead is that coloured wig enthusiasm of a week ago.

DUTIES OF FINDERS

LONDON, April 10.—At the Old Bailey a couple of days ago Judge Atherley-Jones rendered a decision which is of interest in Canada as well as in England.

A father and a son were charged with stealing and receiving a rug that had blown from an automobile passing through Barnes and was picked up by the younger defendant. The prosecution alleged that it was a case of "stealing by finding." The judge stopped the case and directed the jury to acquit the defendants. The law with regard to finding property, although there was a peculiar superstition that finding was keeping, was, he said, very clear. If a person found an article it was his duty to preserve that article; there was no active duty put upon him unless there was some suggestion or invitation which imposed upon him an active duty; but it was his duty to preserve that article, and to look out to see whether any claim was made for it.

If he had any reason to suppose that it belonged to a certain person, then it became his duty to go to that person to make inquiries in order to ascertain; but otherwise there was no active duty, there was no duty upon a person if he found an article to take it to a police station.

It was probably a prudent course, but the police had no greater right to the article than the person who found it. The defendants were discharged. The case had come from Mortlake Petty Sessions.

TO AVOID MOTHS.

Moths deposit their eggs in early spring. This, therefore, is the time to put away furs and woolen for the summer. It is not the moth but the maggot of the moth that does the mischief. To preserve furs and clothing from the ravages of these insects, thoroughly beat article in the air, then carefully wrap in a freshly-printed newspaper, do up air tight, and pack away in a box, well sprinkled with camphor gum.

JUST USE THE LEAD.

Sometimes we find a stubborn door lock or one that does not work well. In order to lubricate it, use lead scraped from a lead pencil. Have the lead on a piece of writing paper, then blow the scrappings or shavings into the lock through the keyhole.

In embrodering scallops, always stitch them on the machine before beginning, and they will never fray in the washing.

Before a boiled ham has had a chance to cool carefully cut out the bone. Tie the whole up tight and let it grow cold. It then slices readily and without the waste and annoyance occasioned by cutting around the bone.

SYMPATHY SHOWN TO YOUNG MAN

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark., April 17.—There is much sympathy for the sixteen-year-old son of John Walker, who killed T. H. Musgrove, aged fifty, several times married, and accused of enticing young girls to his lonely plantation on the Mississippi River.

The killing resulted from a dispute between Musgrove and P. Allen, a neighbour, over the timber on Government land on which Musgrove lived. Young Walker was present and became involved in the argument. Musgrove is said to have told the boy to keep out of the argument or he would kill him as he had killed his father.

Walker then went to Allen's house, obtained a shotgun and shot Musgrove three times. The boy is released on a bond of $25,000, furnished by business men.

There is a case now on in the Federal Court in which Miss Cuela Roth, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., is suing Musgrove for $50,000. She alleges that he enticed her to his plantation. He tried to kill her, she says, when she would not consent to his wishes.

Musgrove is alleged to have tried to kill his wife some time ago and ran her away from home. She, too, as four before her had done, sued him for divorce and alimony. The case is pending in the court. His present wife, Frieda Musgrove, now lives in Memphis.

Ten years ago Musgrove lured two girls to his plantation and would not permit them to depart, keeping them guarded by negroes. They finally managed to slip away to the boat landing and escape. They brought suit against him and were given a compromise judgment.

In the last five years it is said he has lured twenty girls to his plantation.

NEW AUTO ACCESSORIES THAT AID MOTORISTS

During the past year a number of new accessories for motor cars were put on the market, many of which were designed for increasing the comfort of the automobilists. For instance, a new primer, designed to charge the cylinders with a rich, warm mixture for starting, consists of a small tube opening into the gasoline lead and communicating with the intake manifold. The opening into the fuel lead is controlled by a mushroom valve pressed down by a spring, through which an electric current may be sent, and which also acts as a solenoid coil. If the circuit is closed by a switch, the spring is heated, and at the same time draws down an iron core from above, to which the mushroom valve is fixed. The gasoline thus enters the space heated by the spring.

A gearshift has been brought out which comprises a mechanism operated by an individual pedal for every speed available, with such connections that the depressing of a speed pedal first throws out the clutch, then the gear which is in the mesh, and finally engages the desired speed. A trouble-hunting lamp that may be attached without effort to any iron or steel portion of the car is also a new idea. The wire feeding the electric bulb is laid about a soft-iron core, which it magnetises when the circuit is closed. The electro-magnet thus produced exerts a pull of thirteen pounds, which securely attaches the lamp to iron or steel.

Among the different efforts to produce glareless headlights is a design for electric lamps of frosted glass which distribute the light evenly around the lamp and make the road ahead of the car light for a sufficient distance to make driving safe. A small conical lamp at the end of a horizontal staff which pivots on a vertical rod and is turnable to either side at the driver's will is designed to indicate the direction in which the car is travelling, especially to traffic policemen. The device is installed on the radiator filler cap, and is easily visible in daytime and at night. The control is by cable.

A device indicating when the gasoline level in the tank sinks to a predetermined degree is constructed as follows: A float tube in the tank contains a float, an electric contact is provided in the top of the tube, and an annunciator or bell operated by it in installed on the dashboard. If the float falls to the point determined, the end of a lever to which it is secured by a string is drawn down, the other end of the lever being thereby lifted to make an electric contact, which causes the annunciator to give a signal.

A device for detecting misfires without running the risk of a shock has also been put on the market recently. It consists of a long piece of steel held in an insulating handle; for use, the point of the steel is touched to any metal part of the motor, while a portion of the steel which is bent is brought into contact with the plug electrode. If the engine slows down and loses power, the plug is in proper firing condition; but if the short-circuiting makes no difference, the plug is fouled, or at any rate does not fire. Sticks of tin-solder are now on the market in 5-inch lengths. This solder is fused by the application of a match and is of service for aluminium or tin repairs and temporary ones on copper.

ELECTRIC FITTINGS MANY

Range of Accessories for Gasoline Cars is Widening Rapidly

With more than thirty-five applications of electricity contributing to its operation and convenience, the gasoline motor car of the near future is likely to become a combination vehicle. In the gasoline car industry there is going on a development of electrical auxiliaries which, as Charles E. Miller, a dealer, estimates, will soon be consuming $2,500,000 of electrical products yearly. The use of electricity for lighting, ignition and self-starting has already become standard. Many other refinements and conveniences are making their appearance.

An electrically heated carburetor, for example, aims at accurate mixtures. Electric heaters are a comfort in the limousine. Then there are an electrically heated steering wheel, lamps arranged to turn on automatically and illuminate the step and sidewalk when the door is opened, the electrically heated steering wheel, the hand so that it can be turned to read wayside sign-boards, is useful for sign transparenciestesn ? ? ? for night touring, sign transparencies which show which way the car is being turned, and another device which shows the way the driver means to steer. Finally, may be mentioned the "press the button" electric gear shift.

FIRST WEEKS FIX LIFE OF CAR

Tells how to make your Car last Twice as Long.

Rudyard Kipling's story of "The Ship that Found Herself," is used as a case in point by E. Le Roy Pelletier, advertising counsel of one of the large motor companies, to prove his assertion that the usage given a modern motor car in the first few weeks of its existence often determines the life of the car.

"If you remember Kipling's story," said Mr. Pelletier last week, "this particular ship was built of steel plates that had been hammered and forced into position, and then held there by rivets, which in turn had been hammered into place. When she slipped from the ways she creaked in every joint, and when she went out upon the ocean, her stiff, unyielding form creaked still more. Finally, however, each rivet gave just a little, while still holding the plates firmly to to the braces; gradually each part of the ship became flexible, and in that very flexibility was its strength. When each part had yielded just a little to the strain, the Captain said, 'The ship has found herself.'

"Your new automobile should be treated exactly the same way as an experienced Captain treats his new ship. It should be allowed to 'find itself.' It depends entirely on your treatment of a car during the first few days or weeks of use whether it ever does 'find itself.' If not, its life will be short."

BATTERIES NEED CARE.

They Are Among the Little Things That Affect Service.

Howard A. Matthews, general sales manager of one of the automobile companies, was discussing with some friends recently the "little things" that affect automobile service. Some one mentioned storage batteries.

"Yes, indeed," said Mr. Matthews. "A great many automobile owners are careless about renewing their battery solution—a sure way to run into trouble and poor service. Batteries are properly filled with electrolyte when sent out," continued Mr. Matthews, "and, unless spilled by accident, acid should not be added. In case it has been spilled, fresh solution should be added until the plates are covered to the depth of half an inch.

"Vent plugs should be removed and cells examined every week. Plates must always be kept covered with solution. The water in the solution evaporates, but the acid does not. When examination shows top of plates uncovered, distilled water should b added. Every owner of a car that is equipped with a storage battery should have a specific gravity hydromter for testing electrolyte to accurately determine the condition of the battery. If the reading is below 1,280 dgrees the battery should be charged until the specific gravity rises to the proper point. This may be accomplished by running the engine at certain intervals, if the owner does not have access to a charging outfit. It is important to remember that, while a fully charged battery will not freeze, one that has been discharged will freeze at 20 degrees above zero. A little care and attention will avoid a great deal of trouble and expense."

With all the changes in neckwear there seems to be a return to the close high neckband.

Have Restored Thousands of Men and Women to Health and Happiness

THESE little Red Pills—the tried and trusted Remedy for the Kidneys have brought health and happiness to thousands of homes. There is hardly a spot in Canada—certainly not a town of any size—where GIN PILLS have not some devoted friend to say words of praise for what they have done. From the Atlantic to the Pacific—in the great cities like Montreal and Toronto—in the fishing hamlets of Nova Scotia and in the settlers' cottages in the Great Northwest—GIN PILLS are curing sufferers and saving lives endangered by weak kidneys.

GIN PILLS are a Marvel of Scientific Medicine

GIN PILLS are scientifically prepared to relieve and cure the tortures of Kidney and Bladder Trouble, and those diseases—like Rheumatism and Lumbago—which are due to Inactive, Congested or Inflamed Kidneys. Every ingredient in GIN PILLS has a medicinal value, which adds its curative quality in giving speedy relief to the sufferer.

Three Typical Cases all Cured by Gin Pills

Joliette, P.Q.,

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder.

He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush. I returned home and was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS.

They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS, and to my great surprise and joy, I passed the stone.

GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did me so much good, I will recommend them all the rest of my life".

J. ALBERT LESSARD.

Lesser Lake, Ont., March 20th.

"I had been suffering for some time with my Kidneys and Urine. I was constantly passing water, which was very scanty, sometimes as many as thirty times a day. Each time the pain was something awful, and no rest at night.

I heard of your GIN PILLS and decided to give them a trial at once. I sent my chum 60 miles to get them and I am pleased to inform you that in less than six hours, I felt relief.

In two days the pain had left me entirely. I took about half a box and to-day I feel as well as ever and my kidneys are acting quite naturalagain".

SID. CASTLEMAN.

"Over a year ago I was taken terribly sick with unbearable pains in the Kidneys, so called in a Doctor, and he said at once that I had a Stone in the Kidney, and all he could do was to give me ease by injecting morphine. He said there was no cure but an operation. About two months ago I got a box of GIN PILLS and took one and two at a time, and then another box. A week ago the Stone passed from the Kidney to the Bladder. Two days ago it passed away altogether. I have taken no other medicine but GIN PILLS, and it is through them that I am free from that stone".

This gentleman's name is withheld by request; his letter can be seen in our office.

FOSSAL BALM
Goes Right to the Spot

If you have a cold in the head—if your nasal passages are inflamed, stuffed up, smarting—or if you suffer from chronic nasal catarrh—you can get quick relief by using Fossal Balm.

This is an antiseptic, healing salve put up in a collapsible tube so formed as to make it remarkably easy to use. When the elongated cap is removed it uncovers the nozzle-shaped end of the tube, about half an inch long. This is inserted in the nose and the tube squeezed gently, depositing a little of the Balm well up in the nasal passages. A little rubbing of the nose, and the indrawn breath, distribute the Fossal Balm throughout the passages, where it comes directly into contact with the inflamed membranes and the germs of disease. The latter it kills—the former it soothes and heals. The smarting irritation disappears—the nostrils are cleared, making breathing easy—and the catarrhal conditions, if they exist, are corrected.

Get a 50c tube of Fossal Balm from your Druggist, or write for it direct to us. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal.

COFFEE CAKE.

Take enough risen bread dough to make one loaf of bread, add to it one quarter cupful of sugar, one well beaten egg, and a few gratings of nutmeg. Mix well, then knead thoroughly, roll in sheets three-fourths of an inch thick, put in shallow pans and let it rise. Beat two eggs with enough sugar to make the consistency of thin batter. Make cuts in the risen dough with the edge of the spoon so that it will take up the dressing. Pour on, sprinkle generously with cinnamon, and bake.

Stops Heart Operates And No Harm Done

That the human heart may be patched up without peril to the patient was demonstrated by two eminent surgeons attending the meeting of the American Surgical Association, now in session at the Hotel Astor.

The latest experiments upon the heart by Dr. Alexis Carrel, Nobel prize winner, and Dr. Robert Proust, of Paris, open up a new field in surgical science. Heretofore timidity among doctors over operating upon the most vital organ in the body has resulted in a fearful death rate where diseases of the heart were concerned.

Dr. Carrell gave the visiting surgeons a shock when he described in remarkable series of experiments in which he had caused a complete cessation of heart activities for two and one-half minutes.

"These experiments were performed upon animals,' said Dr. Carrel, "but similar operations could be performed upon human organism with an equal chance of success."

The method of procedure, the doctor explained, is to clamp the pedicles or veins entering the heart, with soft-jawed forceps. It is unnecessary to remove the organ from the pericardium or sack covering.

An incision of four centimeters is then made through the heart covering and after the organ is thoroughly cleansed of poisonous substances the hole is patched up with a piece of blood vessel taken from storage.

Dr. Carrel exhibited photographic reproductions of various stages of the operation and told how the wound was sewed up with catgut just as an ordinary surface incision.

"A peculiar phenomenon, inexplicable to science," said Dr. Carrel, "is that the introduction of air to the left ventricle, or left heart, is many times fatal, while the right heart is seemingly unaffected by contact with the atmosphere. A small silk towel wrapped around a portion of the organ precludes the possibility of air infection.

"The pulmonary plastic operation need be no more dangerous to man than to lower animals. I performed twelve such operations upon dogs during 1913, and every case was successful. Of eight operations in 1912 only two were fatal, and these were both due to faulty technique.

"Great care must be exerted not to cause a depression of veins about the heart, as this causes either too little or too much blood to flow into the infected region. I believe that the two and one half minute period of interrupted activity may be considerably increased."

Dr. Robert Proust described the removal of a bullet from a fifteen-year-old boy's heart, and said that the lad appeared to be perfectly normal after the operation.

Dr. Russ, of Switzerland, the only woman surgeon attending the association's meetings, was an interested listener. She will make a tour of the New York City hospitals and be present at several clinics next week.

LIVELY MUSIC AFTER FUNERAL

PITTSBURG, April 16. — "Hail, hail, the gang's all here," tooted with sprightly abandon on the return from a cemetery last Sunday by a brass band, which an hour before had been playing a dirge as it slowly marched in advance of a hearse, aroused the McKeesport Ministerial Association's temper.

It was announced in McKeesport pulpits that the association had adopted a resolution that "except in cases of urgent necessity, funerals on the Lord's day should be discontinued, and when it is necessary to hold them they should be conducted in the most simple manner possible."

AMERICANS WEAR INDECENT DRESS

French Woman Says Extreme Ideas Are Made For America

Dressmakers here resent the charge that American customers who buy French model dresses are responsible for the daring innovations which have already called down a storm of protest upon their wearers in Paris. Representatives of several leading dressmaking shops expressed recently their surprise and indignation at this arraignment of the American woman.

The criticisms followed an announcement in a special cable dispatch to the Herald of the Woman's Patriotic League of Paris, recently organized for the purpose of suppressing immodesty in dress. Many of the most prominent members of Parisian society were founders of this organization and leaders in the protest against what they term indecency in dress. And immediately upon the heels of the announcement of the Women's Patriotic League campaign came the statement made by a leading French dressmaker, that Americans were entirely to blame for this indecency.

The cable dispatch from London to the Herald said in part:

"The American Woman and not the French woman created the demand for risque drsses. The French initiated the mode, but the Americans degrade it outrageously. The slit skirt and the transparent corsage in nine cases out of tn are for exportation. The Parisienne knows just how far to go, but for our American customers nothing seems too daring."

"Startlers" Common, Not Fashionable

Milton Wolf, representing the firm of "Joseph," of Fifth avenue, declared there was no foundation whatever for this statement about the American woman.

"Our women do not dress immodestly, and they do not attempt to follow the eccentric fashions launched by the French dressmakers," he said. "The Parisian dressmaker is merely reaping the harvest he has sown. He has delighted in sending us startling styles in selling the same model to any shop desiring to purchase it. Now these models have become common and not fashionable.

"The French dressmaker has originated and offered us daring dresses more for the purpose of attracting attention to his methods than to have women actually wear them. When shops have purchased these startling designs to exploit them for advertising purposes perhaps, the French dressmaker has assumed that the furore created by the dress was due entirely to its being liked by the American women. This shows that the French dressmaker does not thoroughly understand us here in America.

"Excellent models may be good for the purpose of explitation, and women will talk about odd styles when they wouldn't discuss conservative styles, but they buy the conservative. And the daring innovations are never adopted by the American women, who are much more conservative in their dress than the French women. The best dressed American women demand modest dresses, and they rebel against the daring novelties that come from Paris."

Mr. Milton exhibited several French model gowns from representative dressmakers and then showed some of "Joseph's" own designs, and all came well within the range of prescribed decency. "You see," he explained, "we do not have the skirts slashed unless there is a pleating of chiffon or lace to fill in the opening. And there is nothing immodest or risque about them."

French Costumes Edited Here.

Miss J. W. C. Carroll of Fifth Avenue, exclaimed: "How amusing," when she read the arraignment of the American women by the French dressmaker. "It is quite entertaining to have the French say this about us when we have to reconstruct their evening dresses to make them suit the conservative American purchaser.

"For instance, we cannot get the American woman to wear the sleeveless dress now being pushed by the French dressmakers. The American woman will buy the model or have it copied, but she has a sleeve or drapery added. And our women do not like the low backs and decollete corsage now being offered by the French dressmakers.

"When customers come to me and I show them some of these so-called 'indecent' French dresses, they immediately exclaim, 'but, you know I really cannot wear this.' And I reply, 'can't you?' Whereupon they lok at me in astonishment, as though they thought I really expected them to like the undress evening costumes. Of course I kotw they will not wear them until we put in sleeves and alter the dress to make it comply with American ideas."

Among Miss Carroll's customers are some of the most conservative women, and she has learned, since starting in business a few years ago, that although the American woman does not object to startling stage costumes because they are a part of the stage picture, they have no desire to copy them for their own use.

Clergyman Endorses Cure Of Nervous Prostration

Four Doctors Had Failed—Hope Given Up

Mrs. E. T. Ford, 55 McGee Street, Toronto, Ont., states:—"Some time ago I was ill from nervous prostration and for many weeks was in a very serious condition. I was treated by four different doctors without receiving any benefit from their treatment. I had quite given up hope when one day my husband saw Dr. Chase's advertisement, and it seemed so to suit my case that I bought a box of Nerve Food. I improved so rapidly that I continued using the Nerve Food, and I am thankful to say, it worked a complete cure. Since that time, we have never been without it in the house, and I gladly recommend it to all my neighbors."

Her Pastor's Endorsement

Rev. G. M. Holmes, Pastor of Eastern Ave. Baptist Church, Toronto, writes:—"I have known Mrs. Ford as a member of my church for over two years, and know that any statement she would make would be correct."

It was very difficult for me to do my housework, and I felt very miserable, I doctored but did not receive any benefit until I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This medicine proved of wonderful benefit to me, building up the system and restoring health and strength. I always feel now that if I do get run down I can depend on Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to make me strong and well.

TWENTY YEARS AGO on the First of March next, a wellknown resident of this city took out at age 28 a 10 pay 20 year endowment policy for $1000, No. 43860, in the Sun Life of Canada.

The yearly premium he paid on the participating plan for 10 years only was.....$69.30

The yearly premium he would have to pay on the non-participating plan for the ten years is.....$62.25

Extra paid for profits for ten years.....$7.05

He received in cash at the end of 20 years, $1,279.25, that is, the $70.50 extra that he paid for profits yielded him $279.35, almost 400 per cent.

Or, he could draw out $736.45 in cash, which is $43.45 more than all he paid in, and receive a fully paid-up participating policy for life.

You can never obtain such results as these on the non-participating plan unless you die and die early, so that the price will not become too high.

GIVES ANTI-SKID ADVICE

Avoid Sudden Use of Brake and Turn in Right Direction, says Dealer

Carelessness and fright are the two big factors in most bad skidding accidents, according to C. H. McCausland, a dealer.

"When the streets are slippery the best of drivers will have their troubles unless they use caution," said he the other day. "And the first rule of caution is to drive so that the sudden application of brakes will not be necessary at any time. For when the brakes go on hard and suddenly there is going to be an automobile doing a tango immediately.

"I warn all beginners—and some more experienced drivers, too—to approach all street crossings with the car under control. Let the engine do the braking to slow up for a crossing. Then put on the brakes easily. If the car shows a tendency to swing around release the brakes immediately. Turn the front wheels in the direction towards which the rear of the machine is skidding. It is instinct to turn the wheels in the opposite direction. The result is that the skid is accentuated."

Studying the subject of the suppression of noises in dwellings for several years, a German scientist has decided that the more solidly buildings are constructed the more quickly they will convey sound.

BIG AGRICULTURAL LAND OPENING

TWELVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY TRACTS of five and ten acres each to be granted to prospective settlers in throwing open Twenty Thousand Acres of Rich, Southern Georgia Land, which is admirably adapted to the growing of celery, sweet and Irish potatoes, canteloupes, water melons, corn, oats, cotton, hay—in fact, all staple crops grown in this fertile section, as well as a large variety of semi-tropical fruits, and the famous immensely profitable paper-shell pecans

Providing you are eligible under the classifications prescribed by us, you are now offered an excellent opportunity to break away from the drudgery and toil of a small wage, or working for the benefit of landlords, and go back to a land of plenty, to which, if granted, you will hold a warranty deed and abstract.

The best security on earth is the earth itself, and land is the basis of all wealth. Owners of productive lands are benefiting by the increasing high cost of living, while others are suffering from it.

An Opportunity to Secure Rich Productive Land Without Capital

You will not be required to leave your present surroundings now. All we ask of those to whom we grant tracts is that they plant, or arrange to have planted, a crop of one of the above-mentioned products within three years, after which we will have it operated (harvested and replanted) for grantees, in consideration of 25 per cent. of the net profits derived from the sale of the crops, thereby allowing such time as they determine just what the yield of their acres amounts to. Consider what this may mean as a source of income, when statistics show that the yield of one acre of celery amounted to $1,268.45, and that one acre of well-cared-for paper shell pecans, in full bearing, should net its owner as high as $500.00 per year. We are of the opinion that after it is proven by actual results obtained in operating the land that they will need no further urging, and waste no time in locating in this land of plenty. We also require grantees to occupy the land within ten years, or sell it to some one who will occupy it; otherwise it reverts back to the grantor.

The land included in this opening is located directly on and adjoining the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, about twenty-five miles west of Brunswick, a thriving city of fifteen thousand, having direct steamship service to New York and Boston, and excellent railroad transportation facilities to all points. The average temperature for six months of the year, from April to October, is 77 degrees, the climate is most healthful, delightful, and invigorating, and there is an ample rainfall of 51 inches per year.

OUR AIM IS FOR MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL RESULTS

As we are extremely desirous of having settlers locate on this property, and assist in its development, and thereby greatly increase the value of surrounding and intervening property, which we will hold, and to increase the traffic along the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, and thus facilitate the service, we feel warranted in granting these tracts to those who register with us. We also have in mind business and residence plots which we will offer for sale after the opening, but which will not be included in it. We have "money-making afterward" considerations in this liberal-minded opening, similar to those of the Northern Pacific and other railroads when they granted their lands, and we expect to benefit thereby, as well as the ones who will receive the tracts.

We have also planned to develop what is designed to be the best equipped, most up-to-date, scientific, commercial farm and orchard in existence. It will consist of six thousand acres, and will be included in this opening. All who register and receive tracts will get the benefit of the experiments and scientific methods in vogue thereon. While we are arranging to prevent over-registration, we will avoid many disappointments, such as occurred in other land openings conducted by the United States Government and railroads, by granting those who register in excess of the number of tracts to be granted, an interest in this commercial farm and orchard enterprise, in the hope that they may later locate in one of our town sites.

Examination of the land will cheerfully be permitted, and the opening will be held at Brownstown, Wayne County, Georgia, one of the stations of the A. B. & A. Railroad, which is located on this property, and will occur no sooner after the closing of registrations as arrangements can be made.

The presence of those registered will not be necessary at Brownstown on the opening day, unless they wish to attend, for there will be no favouritism shown anyone. It will be conducted by a committee selected for the purpose, and those registered will be notified of what they have been granted, as soon as possible.

With the ever-increasing population of this country there is no corresponding increase in the area of land, and naturally as the population increases and cooks the land is pursuit of health, happiness and independence, it will continue to be harder to secure.

The prosperous and contented class in Europe to-day are the descendants of those who secured land there when it was plentiful, while the descendants of those who obtained no land are now the peasants and slaves. You must realize that this may be your first chance to secure land in this country without a large outlay of capital, so it should not be necessary to urge you to act at once by forwarding us the application for registration attached to this announcement.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

DON'T BE WILD, GIRLS.

Wildness is a thing which girls cannot afford. Delicacy is a thing which cannot be lost or found. No art can restore the grape its bloom. Familiarity without confidence, without regard, is destructive to all that makes women exalting and ennobling. It is the first duty of a woman to be a lady. Good breeding is common sense. Bad manners in a woman is immorality. Awkardness may be ineradicable. Bashfulness is constitutional. Ignorance of etiquette is the result of circumstances. All can be condoned and not banish men and women from the amenities of their kind. But self-possessed, unshrinking and agressive coarseness or demeanour may be reckoned as a state prison offence and certainly merits that mild form of restraint called imprisonment for life. It is a shame for women to be lectured on their manners. It is a bitter shame that they need it. Do not be restrained. Do not have impulses that have to be restrained. Do not wish to dance with the prince unsought; feel differently! Be sure you confer honour! Carry yourself so lofty that men will look up to you in regard, not at you in rebuke. The natural sentiment of man toward woman is reverence. He loses a large means of grace when he is obliged to account her a being to be trained in propriety. A man's ideal is not wounded when woman falls in worldly wisdom; but if in grace, in tact, in settlement, in delicacy, and in kindness she should be found wanting, he receives an inward hurt.

HAPPINESS IN MARRIAGE.

Thomas Jefferson wrote the following excellent advice. There is a great deal of human nature and good sense in it:

"Harmony in the married state is the first thing to be arrived at. Nothing can preserve the affections uninterrupted but a firm resolution never to differ in will, and a determination in each to consider the love of the other of more value than any object whatever on which the wish had been fixed. How light, in fact, is the sacrifice of any other wish when weighed against the affections of one with whom we are to pass our whole life. And no opposition in a single instance will hardly in itself produce alienation, yet every one has his pouch into which all these little oppositions are put, and while this is filling, the alienation is insensibly going on, and when filled it is complete. It would puzzle either to say why, because no one difference of opinion has been marked enough to produce a serious effect by itself. But he or she finds his or her affections wearied out by a constant stream of little checks and obstacles. Other sources of discontent, very common, indeed, are the little cross purposes of husband and wife in common conversation; a disposition in either to criticise and question whatever the other says; a desire always to demonstrate and make him fee himself in the wrong, especially in sympathy. Nothig is so goading on the part of either. Much better, therefore, if our companion views a thing in a light different from what we do, to leave him in quiet possesion of his view. What is the use of rectifying him if the thing be unimportant? and if important, let it pass for the present, and wait for a softer moment and more conciliatory occasion of revising the subject together. It is wonderful how many persons are rendered unhappy by inattention to these rules of prudence.

HEART BURDENS.

There are a great many men who have business burdens. When we see a man worried and perplexed and annoyed in business life, we are apt to say, "He ought not to have attempted to carry so much." Ah, that man may not be to blame at all. When a man plants a business, he does not know what will be its branches. There is many a man with keen foresight and large business faculty who has been flung into the dust by unforseen circumstances springing upon him from ambush. When to buy, when to sell, when to trust and to what amount of credit, what will b ethe effct of this new invention of machinery, what will be the effect of that loss of crop and a thousand other questions perplex business men until the hair is silvered and deep wrinkles are plowed in the cheek, and the stocks go up by mountains and down by valleys, and they are at their wits' end and stagger like drunken men.

There never has been a time when there have been such rivalries in business as now. It is hardware against hardware, books against books, chandlery against chandlery, imported article against imported article. A thousand stores in combat with another thousand stores. Never such advantage of light, never such variety of assortment, never so much splendour of show window, never so much adroitness of salesmen, never so much acuteness of advertising and amid all these severities of rivalry in business how many men break down.

Govern your thoughts when alone and your tongue when in company.

The foundation of happy homes is laid in the kitchen.

Although tweed and like wool fabrics are used a great deal for the separate coat, several of the new heavy cottons are also favored; railine, goldine and cotton velvet are among these. These cotton fabrics come in all the new shades and are especially effective in the brighter yellows and scarlets. The coat shown in No. 8126 is developed in yellow cotton railine; the back extends over the shoulders to form a shaped yoke; there is an inset cuff and a turnover collar which may be worn standing. To make this coat in size 36, requires 5¾ yards of 42 inch material. All of these cottons average 42 inches in width and range in price from $2.50 a yard and up.

The street dress illustrated in No. 8058, displays unusually trim lines and may be made up effectively in either one of the popular checks or stripes. Here it is developed in plaid, showing two shades of gray; collar, cuffs and the lower part of the vest are of black satin, and the upper part of the vest is of fine white voile with a line of tiny glass buttons extending down the front. This fine voile is much used for vests and collars at the moment and is dainty and becoming.

Five and one-quarter yards of 42 inch material is needed to make up this design in size 36.

No. 8126—sizes 34 to 44.
No. 8058—sizes 34 to 42.
Each pattern 15 cents.

WASHING LACES AND MUSLINS.

It is not generally known that when laundering laces or muslins, or any fine articles for that matter, they must be shaken and clapped between the hands before they are rolled in a towel. They are also easier to iron and look fresher and finer if, after drying and sprinkling, they are placed in a clean white cloth and puts through the wringer before ironing.

A BEAUTY BATH.

This bath is said to give the skin a wonderful lustre and appearance of youth. It is made as follows:

Rose water, 125 grammes; glycerine, 50 grammes; pure alcohol, 50 grammes; tincture of benzoin, 50 grammes; boric acid, 25 grammes. Dissolve the boric acid in the alcohol and mix wit hall the other ingredients. Use a sponge bath for the entire body.

12 Tumors Removed Without An Operation

Silver Lake, Ont., Sept. 20, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah,—I am enjoying better health than I have for eight years, and I think I am entirely cured. I have none of the old symptoms. I am very grateful for my present health, and think Orange Lily is the greatest treatment for women the world knows. Its use in my case caused 12 tumors or growths of some sort to be expelled, some were as large as a hen's egg, and others smaller, down to the size of a walnut. You may use my case in your advertisement, for it is the solid truth, and pen cannot describe all the good it has done for me. Mrs. Louise M. Belteridge.

This letter gives an indication of the positive benefits that always follow the use of Orange Lily. It is an applied treatment and comes in direct contact with the suffering organs. It produces results from the start in all cases of women's disorders, including painful periods, falling of womb, irregularities, leucorrhoea, etc.

I will send a sample box containing 10 days' treatment absolutely free to any suffering woman who has not yet tried it if she will send me her address. Enclose 2 stamps and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

SCREAMED WITH PAIN

Nearly Died With Kidney Trouble Until "Fruit-a-tives" Gave Welcome Relief and Completely Cured The Disease.

CHARLES CALVEART, Esq.

St. Thomas, Ont., April 1st., 1913

"In 1912, I was laid up with Kidney Trouble and not able to get out of my chair. The pain was excruciating and my screams could be heard in the street. I tried many different remedies without any results and I was steadily growing weaker. One day, a friend from Ottawa came in to see me and when he found me in such poor health, said he would send me a sample of "Fruit-a-tives," which he did and I commenced taking them. They did me good from the start and in a very short time I was up and around. "Fruit-a-tives" completely cured me and I have enjoyed the best of health ever since.

I would not have any other remedy for Kidney Trouble and would strongly advise anyone suffering from this trouble to cure themselves with "Fruit-a-tives."

CHARLES CALVEART

It is simply wonderful, the relief that "Fruit-a-tives" gives in Kidney and Bladder Troubles. In the great majority of cases of "acid urine," pain in the back, "kidney cramps" and Rheumatism, the kidneys are not actually diseased. They are merely overworked. That is, they are doing more than their share of the work of ridding the system of waste matter. In most cases of Kidney and Bladder Trouble, there is also Constipation and faulty Skin Action. "Fruit-a-tives" relieves the Kidney Trouble by correcting the action of the Bowels and Skin. This marvellous fruit medicine acts directly on the liver kidneys and skin, and is the only medicine in the world that does act on all three of these great eliminating organs. "Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Kidney Trouble when caused by poor skin action, constipation and acid indigestion. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c., at all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Youre not really sick, still you don't feel "just right."

How often is this true of hundreds of us. We're not really sick, but feel sluggish, out of sorts, our keenness and activity are impeded. The chief cause for this is constipation. When you feel that way, take

"While on a trip with a survey party in Northern Ontario two years ago, I contracted rheumatism through exposure and sleeping in damp clothes. When I returned home I was very bad, and the pain in my joints was something awful. I was advised to try Wesden's Kidney Pills, and after taking four boxes my rheumatism was entirely gone. Last year I was up on the survey party again, but I was never without a box of Wesden's Kidney Pills, and have never had the slightest return of it.

WHAT IT COSTS TO SELL THINGS

A recent compilation of the cost of doing retail business in several different lines, by System, of Chicago, shows that smaller percentages of the selling price is used up in dispensing of groceries than of any other merchandise, his compilation, which is based on the figures suplied by a large number of merchants in various parts of the country, and whisl may, therefore, be taken as an indicative of the average cost of doing business in those lines, shows that in selling groceries only 15.91 per cent. of the sales price is absorbed by the expense account. Strange as it may seem, the highest cost of doing business that is shown in the list does not set opposite the department store, for the palm for the expensive conduct of business goes to the jewellery shop. This business requires 25.81 per cent. of the average selling price for the merchandise to carry it on.

The list in question contains the expense percentages of eight kinds of retail business: drugs, jewellery, groceries, shoes, variety, hardware, dry goods, and furniture. Ten different kinds of expenses are listed for each, and these are rent, salaries, advertising, heat and light, deliveries, supplies, insurance, and taxes, general expenses, depreciation and shrinkage, and bad debts.

In the matter of rent, the figures show that first place, strangely enough, goes to the variety store, where it consumes 4.41 per cent. of the average selling price. Following it comes the drug store, with 4.02 per cent.; jewellery, with 3.98 per cent.; furniture, with 3.44; hardware, with 3.41; dry goods, with 3.24; shoes, with 3.21, and groceries, with 2.67 per cent. The palm for the highest salaries goes to the jewellery store, where this cost amounts to 10.96 per cent. of the selling price. Closely following comes the drug store, where the salary expense is 10.95 per cent. Shoe stores come third with 10.51; hardware fourth with 10.11; dry goods fifth with 9.65; variety sixth with 8.86; furniture seventh with 8.73, and groceries last with 7.96 per cent.

Despite the belief inspired by the big department stores of this city that this branch of business activity goes in more for publicity than any other, the department store is ranked fourth in the advertising comparison with an expense approximating 1.67 per cent. of the sale price. At the top of the advertising list comes the jewellery store again, with 2.85 per cent. Second place is occupied by furniture with 2.72 per cent., while third place goes to drugs with 1.76 per cent. Shoes come fifth with 1.65; while the last three places are filled, respectively, by variety with 1.52; hardware with 1.12, and groceries with .83 per cent.

The shoe store leads in the matter of heat and light, spending for these necessities 1.10 per cent. of the price at which the goods are sold.

The others follow as named: furniture, .92; variety, .54; hardware, .43, and groceries, .39. Deliveries is the only item in which the grocery store heads the list, the statistics showing an expense of 2.03 per cent. Second comes the dry goods store with a rate approximately only half as high, or 1.02 per cent. Furniture follows with .94 per cent.; hardware with .91 per cent.; drugs with .51; shoes, with .46; jewellery with 0.9, and variety is last with .00. The last named stores, as is well known, make no deliveries.

In the matter of supplies, jewellery again tops the list, this time with .89 per cent. Hardware comes second with .60, followed by furniture with .41; dry goods with .38; groceries with .37; drugs with .38; shoes with .30, and variety with .21 per cent. In insurance and taxes furniture comes first, with 1.57 per cent. The other lines follow in the order named: jewellery, 1.32; drugs, 1.21; dry goods, 1.08; shoes, 1.03; hardware, .99; variety .98, and groceries, .58 per cent. The highest general expenses are claimed by the drug stores with 4.49 per cent., followed by shoes with 4.36; dry goods, 4.15; jewellery, 3.00; furniture, 1.10; hardware, 1.01; variety, .91 and groceries, .45 per cent.

Depreciation and shrinkage hits the furniture stores hardest, this expense amounting in these enterprises to 2.14 per cent. of the selling price. next to furniture comes dry goods with 1.11; next to dry goods comes jewellery with .95 per cent. Groceries are fourth with .76 per cent.; hardware fifth with .52 per cent.; shoes sixth with .50; drugs seventh with .47, and variety last with the low figure of .06 per cent.

The last item taken up in the list is bad debts, and in this the furniture stores again top the list with 1.94 per cent. Second comes the grocery stores with .47; followed by hardware with .31; dry goods and jewellery with .21; drugs with .19; shoes with .10, and the variety store last with .00, due to the fact that this business is conducted on a strictly cash basis.

Summarizing the foregoing figures by addition it is found that the jewellery business heads the list with a total expense equalling 25.81 per cent. of the selling price. Drugs follow with a total of 24.65 per cent., with the other totals, figures in per cents., as follows: Furniture 23.91, shoes 23.22, dry goods 23.05, hardware 19.41, variety 17.76, and grocery 15.91.

WHAT CAUSES SPRING FEVER

Has some fond relative told you that spring fever is just an imaginary malady? Then hear what some well-known American medical authorities have to say on the subject.

"Probably no autopsy, chemical analysis or bacteriological test would throw much light on spring fever," declares a specialist in psychiatry. "It is an atavistic condition, a throwback to the days when we lived out of doors all the time, and hunted our food. Its origin may go further back than that to our animal ancestors who hibernated during the winter.

"The artificiality of civilization is emphasized during the cold months. We stay cooped up under roofs and the animal portion of our natures resents the captivity. At the first glint of spring sunshine we feel the necessity for a return to the primitive; we hunger for the sea and lakes where our progenitors prowled in search of raw oysters and seaweed salad; we crave the open with the poignant longing of wild creatures shut in cages. It's a psychic state.

"Spring fever's worst ravages are among the very rich and school boys — both of whom may be classed as aristocrats, since they live the temperamental life, giving impulses the freest possible rein. I doubt whether the street labourer has much time for spring fever, or whether his vocabulary includes the term."

As for the celebrated pathologist here are his reasons for that "Let's go-fishin'" condition that cripples the efficiency of so many valuable members of society these days.

"All winter we live in superheated rooms, wear too much clothing, eat too much food, work too hard with our brains and not enough with our bodies," said he, "and the first robin arrives to find us suffering from accumulation of food toxins, muscular laxity and mental fatigue. We are victims of sub-oxidation.

Sulphur and molasses? What a sad spectacle, the pouring of dope into some youngster who needs a bat, glove and ball and a vacant lot or a sling shot and a pocketful of slugs that he may break windows, risk the eyesight of his playmates and get back the glow of health."

SPRING IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood-builder and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor — Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention. Some people dose themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken themselves. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigour to weak, easily tired men, women and children. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you.

HOW TO DRESS WELL ON SMALL ALLOWANCE

The dress cleverness of French women amounts to genius They are the envy and despair of their sisters of other nations, who watch them with hawklike eyes and copy their dress to the smallest details, all the time conscious that they are unable to imitate the one elusive thing which makes their style distinctive.

And the maddening part of it all is that French women have a way of looking unutterably and indescribably smart and chic and all other desirable ways a well-dressed woman should look on an absurdly small dress allowance, compared to the unlimited extravagance of many American women.

When noted French women come to America they say all manner of lovely things about American women and their style, but, when they realise at what price such sartorial elegance is obtained they roll their eyes, shrug their shoulders and grow voluble. When they reduce American dollars to francs they are horrified.

Few French women are wildly extravagant. They all seem to have an element of thrift in their nature which gives them a very delightful and exemplary long-headedness in matters of expenditures. They achieve much in the way of chic on little in the way of cash.

Mlle. Fovieri, the celebrated French actress, late of the Comedie Francaise, now in America, where her talent and her gowns are creating somewhat of a sensation, has an interesting explanation of the French woman's style.

"The French woman sews her costumes with silk," says Mlle. Fovieri with a charming smile and a wave of her shapely hand, as if that settled the whole matter forever.

"Silk thread?" exclaims the interviewer, in true American accents.

"Oui, silk thread," she repeats. "Is it not true that the silk thread lasts longer than the other kind? Certainly it does. Also it is more elastic, it washes better, it cleans better, it holds firmer. Then it does not cut the fabric, no matter how delicate. It has a way of sinking in out of sight, so that a seam which is finely sewed scarcely looks like a seam at all.

"Moreover, it yields to the figure, and one is surer of having a bodice fit perfectly if it is sewed with silk than if the ugly cotton is used. Cotton. It is but good for the basting, to hold the garment till the silk thread can be stitched in. Even in the little blouse of mull, the little frock of lawn, the blouse tailleur, which all American women wear so beautifully, the seams are better sewn with silk.

"We French women make our costumes last two, three times as long as the American women. We do not spend so much money. But we are most exacting how the gown is made in the first place. We do not have a gown just to have something new. We have a dress because we have need for it. Also we know what that need is.

"Then we get the costume which will give us the most service and look always chic. We think much about our costume before we spend our money for it. We are never in a hurry when we have a visit to the modiste. We make sure all is perfect.

"Then we wear it until it is gone. I am told that the American woman frequently throws her costumes away after one season. It is not so with the French woman. She has the tailor or the modiste make it new again. There is where the silk thread helps. It has not ripped or hurt the cloth. It has left no marks."

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

DON'T BE WILD, GIRLS.

Wildness is a thing which girls cannot afford. Delicacy is a thing which cannot be lost or found. No art can restore the grape its bloom. Familiarity without confidence, without regard, is destructive to all that makes women exalting and ennobling. It is the first duty of a woman to be a lady. Good breeding is common sense. Bad manners in a woman is immorality. Awkardness may be ineradicable. Bashfulness is constitutional. Ignorance of etiquette is the result of circumstances. All can be condoned and not banish men and women from the amenities of their kind. But self-possessed, unshrinking and agresive coarseness or demeanour may be reckoned as a state prison offence and certainly merits that mild form of restraint called imprisonment for life. It is a shame for women to be lectured on their manners. It is a bitter shame that they need it. Do not be restrained. Do not have impulses that have to be restrained. Do not wish to dance with the prince unsought; feel differently! Be sure you confer honour! Carry yourself so lofty that men will look up to you in regard, not at you in rebuke. The natural sentiment of men toward woman is reverence. He loses a large means of grace when he is obliged to account her a being to be trained in propriety. A man's ideal is not wounded when woman falls in worldly wisdom; but if in grace, in tact, in settlement, in delicacy, and in kindness she should be found wanting, he receives an inward hurt.

HAPPINESS IN MARRIAGE.

Thomas Jefferson wrote the following excellent advice. There is a great deal of human nature and good sense in it:

"Harmony in the married state is the first thing to be arrived at. Nothing can preserve the affections uninterrupted but a firm resolution never to differ in will, and a determination in each to consider the love of the other of more value than any object whatever on which the wish had been fixed. How light, in fact, is the sacrifice of any other wish when weighed against the affections of one with whom we are to pass our whole life. And no opposition in a single instance will hardly in itself produce alienation, yet every one has his pouch into which all these little oppositions are put, and while this is filling, the alienation is insensibly going on, and when filled it is complete. It would puzzle either to say why, because no one difference of opinion has been marked enough to produce a serious effect by itself. But he or she finds his or her affections wearied out by a constant stream of little checks and obstacles. Other sources of discontent, very common, indeed, are the little cross purposes of husband and wife in common conversation; a disposition in either to criticise and question whatever the other says; a desire always to demonstrate and make him fee himself in the wrong, especially in sympathy. Nothig is so goading on the part of either. Much better, therefore, if our companion views a thing in a light different from what we do, to leave him in quiet possesion of his view. What is the use of rectifying him if the thing be unimportant? and if important, let it pass for the present, and wait for a softer moment and more conciliatory occasion of revising the subject together. It is wonderful how many persons are rendered unhappy by inattention to these rules of prudence.

HEART BURDENS.

There are a great many men who have business burdens. When we see a man worried and perplexed and annoyed in business life, we are apt to say, "He ought not to have attempted to carry so much." Ah, that man may not be to blame at all. When a man plants a business, he does not know what will be its branches. There is many a man with keen foresight and large business faculty who has been flung into the dust by unforseen circumstances springing upon him from ambush. When to buy, when to sell, when to trust and to what amount of credit, what will h ethe effect of this new invention of machinery, what will be the effect of that loss of crop and a thousand other questions perplex business men until the hair is silvered and deep wrinkles are plowed in the cheek, and the stocks go up by mountains and down by valleys, and they are at their wits' end and stagger like drunken men.

There never has been a time when there have been such rivalries in business as now. It is hardware against hardware, books against books, chandlery against chandlery, imported article against imported article. A thousand stores in combat with another thousand stores. Never such advantage of light, never such variety of assortment, never so much splendour of show window, never so much adroitness of salesmen, never so much acuteness of advertising and amid all these severities of rivalry in business how many men break down.

Govern your thoughts when alone and your tongue when in company.

The foundation of happy homes is laid in the kitchen.

Although tweed and like wool fabrics are used a great deal for the separate coat, several of the new heavy cottons are also favored; railine, goldine and cotton velvet are among these. These cotton fabrics come in all the new shades and are especially effective in the brighter yellows and scarlets. The coat shown in No. 8126 is developed in yellow cotton railine; the back extends over the shoulders to form a shaped yoke; there is an inset cuff and a turnover collar which may be worn standing. To make this coat in size 36, requires 5¾ yards of 42 inch material. All of these cottons average 42 inches in width and range in price from $2.50 a yard and up.

The street dress illustrated in No. 8058, displays unusually trim lines and may be made up effectively in either one of the popular checks or stripes. Here it is developed in plaid, showing two shades of gray; collar, cuffs and the lower part of the vest are of black satin, and the upper part of the vest is of fine white voile with a line of tiny glass buttons extending down the front. This fine voile is much used for vests and collars at the moment and is dainty and becoming.

Five and one-quarter yards of 42 inch material is needed to make up this design in size 36.

WASHING LACES AND MUSLINS.

It is not generally known that when laundering laces or muslins, or any fine article for that matter, they must be shaken and clapped between the hands before they are rolled in a towel. They are also easier to iron and look fresher and finer if, after drying and sprinkling, they are placed in a clean white cloth and put through the wringer before ironing.

Silver Lake, Ont., Sept. 20, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah,—I am enjoying better health than I have for eight years, and I think I am entirely cured. I have none of the old symptoms. I am very grateful for my present health, and think Orange Lily is the greatest treatment for women the world knows. Its use in my case caused 12 tumors or growths of some sort to be expelled. Some were as large as a hen's egg, and others smaller, down to the size of a walnut. You may use my case in your advertisement, for it is the solid truth, and pen cannot describe all the good it has done for me. Mrs. Louise E. Baltenridge.

This letter gives an indication of the positive benefits that always follow the use of Orange Lily. It is an applied treatment and comes in direct contact with the suffering organs. It produces results from the start in all cases of women's disorders, including painful periods, falling of womb, irregularities, leucorrhoea, etc.

If I will send a sample box containing 10 days' treatment absolutely free to any suffering woman who has not yet tried it if she will send me her address. Enclose 2 stamps and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

ON THE RURAL LINE

There was a break somewhere on one of the toll lines; hence the threatening state of atmosphere in the telephone office. It was distinctly charged with electricity.

Central—the most patient and efficient central in the office—answered angry queries with an ominous note in her voice. "If this goes on much longer I leave," she burst out heatedly to her neighbour at the switchboard.

"Find out where that break is and send a man out to repair it at once!" thundered the head man as he was leaving his office. Ward, patiently pouring directions into the receiver he was holding, paused to flash a sharp retort. "Did you think," he flamed, "that these inquiries were merely a pleasant diversion on my part?"

The angry emphasis of the retort was still in his voice as he again turned to the 'phone. "I will repeat this once more. Put up your receivers," he ordered, "every one on the line, until we can find where the trouble is." Then, after a period of experimenting, "There is still a receiver down somewhere," he fairly barked. "Put it up at once!"

He jumped from his desk a moment later to answer a sharp query from the man at the information desk, who in turn, had received a sharper one from an irate patron. The irate patron had a big business deal on with a man on the toll line.

"Gee!" exclaimed Ward, "this gives me the willies! I must get out of here before there's an explosion." He paused to give an order, then shot out of the room and into the office of a friend next door.

"I could find that confounded break," he exploded, "if any attention was paid to either requests or orders. A call for an- one on that line is a signal for all receivers along it to come down. We've had to send a man out in the teeth of this storm to hunt the break.

"The office force has been nearly disrupted and all 'for the want of a horseshoe nail'," he quoted. "If I could get hold of the stubborn party who is glued to his receiver I'd give him a hair-raising experience. There'd be a worse blizzard than the one that's raging outside."

"Easy! Easy, Ward!" counselled his friend. "Remember that the news that comes over the line is daily paper, theatre and lecture course to the dwellers in remote country districts. Think of enduring the monotony of life snowed up out in that dreary Crabapple district, for instance."

"Think of it?" Ward had thought of little else in the unoccupied moments of that jangling morning. The words strengthened a half formed purpose in his mind. He strode to the window and stood looking out on the storm. It was early afternoon and the mercury constantly descending. "Whew!" he ejaculated, "what will it be by evening?" Then, after a moment of irresolution, he turned to the desk, ordered a horse and sleigh and prepared for a drive to the country.

It was a long drive and a bitterly cold one, but, he reflected, it would be worth all the trouble if he only could discover the persistent offender of the afternoon. And, more important still, at the end of the long ride there was Sylvia. Sylvia was, indeed, the chief reason why that inopportune break had been particularly irritating to him. The necessity of talking with her to-day had seemed imperative. Since she had admonished him against tender 'phone messages that were shared by the whole neighbourhood, he felt that he had been kept on a very short allowance of Sylvia, but even the sound of her voice and the assurance that all was well with her would have been soothing to him to-day.

Poor, little, orphaned Sylvia, accustomed to feather-lined luxury, and now, by a swift turn of affairs, sent to teach the dreary Crabapple school! Her letter lay in his pocket. Such a brave little letter! She was getting along beautifully she declared. But then, she would say that in any circumstances. There was never the least bit of whine in Sylvia's nature. To Ward there was something radically wrong in the thought of her battling with the cold winter in this desolate region. "And she has no more idea than a kitten about how to take care of herself," he groaned inwardly. Some way it was hard to disassociate Sylvia Acheson in his mind from the thought of high-heeled pumps, silken hose and thin, futile little lace coverings for neck and arms. And it would be a year at least before he could take her out of this. He fairly gritted his teeth over his impotence to be of service.

At Sylvia's boarding place, a little brown house by the roadside, he stopped his horse. He would wait till 4 o'clock and then drive over to school for her. A plump butter ball of a girl answered his knock, and a red fire gave him cheery greeting.

"Excuse me for not getting up," apologised Mrs. Teter from her rocker b- the window, when he made himself known; "my rheumatism bothers me considerable this kind of weather, so I sit a good deal."

"Oh, certainly," he answered, crossing the room to shake hands with her, "I——" He suddenly stopped short. "Great Scott!" he exclaimed, for the little old lady sat placidly darning a stocking which was stretched over the telephone receiver. "Look here," he burst forth, "I'll send you a darning ball when I go back to town!"

"Oh, no," she smiled, serenely, "this is every mite as good, and always hangs here right handy."

Now was Ward's time to give Mrs. Teter the promised hair raising experience. He opened his lips to give utterance to a sarcastic remark, but at that moment his eyes fell on the stocking she was darning. It was of silken texture with a gay little vine creeping over the instep. The wildest imagination could not conceive plump Mrs. Teter or Ellen, "the help," in that slender footed, dainty stocking.

"I've got her to wearing heavier ones now," Mrs. Teter explained interpreting the glance, "and good warm clothes all through. She isn't in a steam-heated house any more, and, you know, she's just a slip of a girl and hasn't any one to mother her but me." Mrs. Teter paused to wipe her motherly eyes, which had grown misty.

Ward could have hugged her in a sudden revulsion of feeling. The scene at the office that afternoon suddenly occurred to him. All through those jangling hours, he smilingly reflected, Mrs. Teter had sat, peacefully darning. "Why, let her use the receiver," he declared to himself. "Let her use the whole telephone system if she wishes!"

For what to Ward was a disarranged service compared to the supreme fact that some one was tenderly and beautifully mothering Sylvia?

WASHING SILK.

It is a popular or rather unpopular fallacy that white silk is bound to turn yellow. To be sure, white silk usually does turn yellow after washing, but it is because it is not washed in the right way. In the first place, white silk should never be allowed to become so badly soiled that it is yellowed.

The garment should be dusted first and then washed in warm (not hot) water and a pure white soap. Rinse well in several waters, the last one quite blue. Care should be taken of this bluing water that it is not too deep, and yet deep enough to give that "new" look to the silk. When the waist is not entirely dry, but just damp all over, it should be pressed with a warm iron. Especial attention is called to the fact that nothing hot should touch the silk. This yellows it. Warm irons and warm water should be used.

...IS ... DANGEROUS

... All Stomach Trouble Salts Due to Acidity.

...'s Advice on Cause and Cure.

...popular physician whose successful ... into the cause and cure of ... and intestinal diseases have ... for him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due nine times out of ten to excessive acidity, commonly termed "sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up ... and stomach ulcers. It is interesting to note that he condemns the use of patent medicines as well as of medical treatment for the stomach, stating that he and his colleagues have secured remarkable results by the use of ordinary ... magnesia, which by neutralizing the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. He contends that it is as foolish to treat the stomach itself as it would be for a man who stepped on a tack to rub liniment on the foot without first removing the tack. Remove the tack and the foot will heal itself ... neutralize the acid and the stomach trouble will disappear. Irritating mechanical and medical treatments are useless, so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bisurated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after meals, repeating in fifteen minutes, if necessary, this being the dose which the doctor has found most efficacious in all cases.

Mellen Willing To Take It.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 18.—Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co., would be highly honored, he said yesterday, if chosen to head the federated railway employes.

The organization, which will have a membership of 2,000,000 railway employes, will be formed at a meeting in Boston on April 26. It will be known as the Federated Council of Railroad Brotherhoods.

"I would rather hold that position than be President of the United States," said Mr. Mellen.

Constipation is one of the most common ailments of childhood and no child suffering from it thrives well. To banish it no other medicine acts so promptly and surely as Baby's Own Tablets. I gave them to my baby for constipation and they soon made him well again." Huerta Asks in Vain for a Simultaneous Salute

PRESIDENT WILSON DECISIVE

WASHINGTON, April 18.—President Wilson yesterday flatly rejected Gen. Huerta's suggestion for a simultaneous salute to the American and Mexican flags.

The Washington Government informed Huerta that his wish for simultaneous firing of the salutes was untenable, and that, as demanded by Rear Admiral Mayo a salute of 21 guns would be insisted upon, the manner of returning the salute to be left to the American admiral, who agreed to fire one to the Mexican flag. Naval precedents showed no "simultaneous salute" had ever been fired in apology for an offence.

No reply to the last American note transmitted through Charge O'Shaughnessy had been received up to late yesterday and no orders to the American warships to slow down or turn back had been issued. Administration officials consider, however, the main point at issue — the exchange of salutes—had been settled, and they regarded Huerta's "haggling over details," as one official expressed it, as not likely to prevent an adjustment of the controversy. They believed the crisis was over, but on the other hand, in view of the kaleidoscopic changes of the last three days, said they would not be surprised if the hitch over details became serious again.

The American Government has taken the position that when a salute of 21 guns is fired to the Stars and Stripes the salute in acknowledgment would be fired to the flag of the Mexican people—and not to the Huerta administration or any Government or individual.

Commenting on the original demand for a salute to the flag, Secretary Daniels said a few days ago Rear Admiral Mayo himself modified his demand somewhat, saying he would not insist on having the salute fired while the American flag was hoisted on Mexican territory, and would be satisfied if the salute was to the flag "in a conspicuous place" either on the mast of the Dolphin or a Mexican gunboat.

There was much discussion in official circles not only about the propriety of returning Huerta's salute in view of the peculiar diplomatic relations between the Mexico City administration and the Washington Government, but because of a navy regulation, No. 1194, which reads:

"No salute shall be fired in honor of any nation, or of any official of any nation not formally recognized by the Government of the United States."

Should Know Better.

TORONTO, April 18—Past seventy years of age, William A. Douglass entered the morality department offices yesterday and said he wished to surrender himself to the authorities. The old man stated he was a bigamist, and as he had just got converted he wanted to clear his conscience of his crime and pay the penalty.

The old man's story was to the effect that 30 years ago he married a woman in Oakville. Seventeen years ago he went to England and there married another woman. As the crime was committed in England the officers could not hold him here.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

OVERCHARGE IS PROBED.

Public Accounts Committee Investigates N. T. R. Payment.

OTTAWA, April 18.—The public accounts committee of the Commons yesterday morning continued its enquiry into the matter of the terms of settlement arranged between the present National Transcontinental Railway Commission and J. S. McArthur & Co. for work done on contract No. 21. The total contract was for upwards of $12,000,000. The board of arbitrators, after going over the contract, decided that there was an overcharge of $983,000, and recommended a reduction of payment of that amount. Under the settlement finally made the amount deducted from the McArthur account was $150,000.

W. C. King of the Auditor-General's Department, said the settlement had been agreed to on the part of the G. T. P. by Mr. Kelliher.

Major Leonard, the present N.T.R. commissioner, was then examined by Mr. German.

Major Leonard said that he had read and understood the report of the commission relating to deductions. It was a matter which was adjudicated upon by the arbitrators and the engineers before his time.

The chief engineer of the commission, he said, is responsible for the estimates and the classification. If they change their minds from time to time, he assumed that they have a right to do so.

Mr. German proceeded to ask Major Leonard to verify various documents. The major said they related to happenings before his day, and the examination was useless.

Mr. German persisted in the examination, and was upheld by the chairman.

Chief Engineer Gordon Grant will be examined at the next sitting.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Monsignor Croke Robinson, a famous Catholic author, was found dead at Brighton, Eng., yesterday.

Lady Strathcona has contributed $1,000 to the Newfoundland sealing disaster fund in London, which now totals $35,000.

The White Star Line yesterday sold the Majestic to be broken up. The price was $12,000. The Majestic was built in 1889.

Archie Boyd, for forty years a creator of pastoral stage characters, died in St. Louis Thursday night as the result of a nervous breakdown, aged 64 years.

Militant suffragettes made their first onslaught on Londonderry yesterday, when an "arson squad" set fire to and burned to the ground a large residence.

Fred. Hampton, a young farmer, was chopping wood on his father's farm in Smith township, when the axe slipped and struck his left foot, severing an artery. He died from loss of blood.

The theatre on the Recreation Pier, at Great Yarmouth, Eng., was destroyed at 4 a.m. yesterday by a fire caused by the explosion of a bomb left under a seat by a militant suffragette. Loss $100,000.

Sir Richard McBride stated, on his arrival in Victoria, B.C., from the east, that he knew no more about the London High Commissionership than the man in the street, and added that he is not seeking the office.

Mrs. Ethel May Katz, well known on the stage before her marriage as Ethel Adams, died from cancer on Thursday at a private hospital in New York. Her husband spent $100,000 on radium treatment in hope of saving her life.

Landslide In Quebec.

QUEBEC, April 18.—Almost without warning an avalanche of rock and rubble, loosened by yesterday's thaw, crashed down the steep slope of Cape Diamond last night, narrowly missing a carter's rig and two occupants, and blocking Champlain street. The place where the fall took place is close to the spot where the terrible landslide of 1889 killed fifty-four residents of this street and crushed in a row of houses under the cliff as if they had been egg shells.

To Keep the Face Fresh, Clear, Youthful

More important than the cosmetic care of the complexion is its physical care. To keep the face clean, fresh, youthful, there's nothing better than common mercolised wax. It absorbs the soiled or aided worn-out skin particles. Cosmetics simply add unwholesomeness to the complexion. That's the difference. By all means, acquire the mercolised wax habit. It's so easy to get an ounce of the wax at the druggist's, apply at night like cold cream and wash it off next morning. There's no detention indoors, the old skin coming off so gradually no one suspects you're using anything. When in a week or two the alluringly youthful, rose-like, under-skin is fully in view — well, you won't want, or need, a make-up complexion after that. It must be apparent that this process means complete riddance of all cutaneous blemishes, like freckles, pimples, blotches and blackheads.

For obstinate wrinkles, a face bath made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half pint witch hazel, surpasses massage cream and everything else for results.

EX-CLERK COMMITTED.

Sent To Trial on Charges Involving Township Funds.

SOUTH INDIAN, Ont., April 18.—W. J. W. Lowrie, former clerk of the Township of Russell, was yesterday committed to stand his trial on a charge of embezzling $300 from the township. It is alleged Lowrie retained a check for $300 received while clerk for his personal use. The accused maintains that the matter was a personal one between himself and J. Winstanley, of Morrisburg, who, preliminary evidence showed, had given the check as a deposit on a contract, making it out in favor of Lowrie. Restitution has since been made, but the three magistrates hearing the case decided to send Lowrie to trial at the L'Orignal Assizes.

DON'T GROW BALD

It's Quite Needless. Nourish the Hair Roots—Remove Dandruff —Use Parisian Sage—

If your hair is getting thin, losing colour, or has that matted, lifeless and scraggy appearance, the reason is evident—dandruff and failure to keep the hair roots properly nourished. These are the main causes of baldness or dry, brittle and unsightly hair.

Parisian Sage applied daily for a week and then occasionally, is all that is needed. It is a scientific preparation that supplies hair needs. It gets to the hair roots, nourishes them, and furnishes the elements necessary to make it grow. It removes dandruff with one application; almost immediately stops falling hair and itching head; cleanses, cools and invigorates the scalp. Mr. Rowell Suggests Friction as Reason For Neglect

GRANT FOR THE UNIVERSITY

TORONTO, April 18. — A large number of bills were given a third reading and put through the final stage in the Legislature yesterday. Most of these were private bills, but as many matters of importance are affected by the enactment of these laws it is likely that the Lieutenant-Governor will come to the House on Monday and give the royal assent to as much of the legislation as has passed through the House so far.

The Ontario Government is about to examine either by commission or otherwise the basis of university support in the province, in an effort to reach some systematic and just method of granting yearly assistance. One thing to be borne specially in mind will be the overlapping of grants to the universities at Toronto, Kingston, and London. This was the nature of an amendment made by Hon. I. B. Lucas yesterday when the grants were passing through committee of supply.

The anticipated increase of revenue from succession duties, Mr. Lucas thought, should be so adjusted that the university would receive a fixed amount from that source, while the whole matter of financial aid from the Government was under consideration, and there should be a limit placed in the meantime on what the University should receive from that source. Speaking as an outsider, he could not view with favor a proposal to place upon the finances of the province the burden of maintaining two other universities. The University of Toronto might be relieved by transferring students to Queen's and the Western University.

In the absence of Hon. Adam Beck, Hon. Col. Hendrie made a statement of distribution in connection with the proposed five-million-dollar expenditure for Hydro-Electric development during the consideration of the supplementary estimates. Mr. Rowell asked why there was no mention of Hydro radial railway development.

"Can the hon. gentleman tell us the position of the commission on this question?" was Mr. Rowell's query.

"The Government will have an announcement to make in due time," replied Col. Hendrie.

Mr. Rowell thought the matter was of such importance that a statement should be forthcoming. He wondered whether it was the result of lack of harmony on the commission. He referred to the recent controversy when representatives of the press were excluded from a meeting. "Many people thought that was due to the extreme and acute conditions," said Mr. Rowell and a sharp skirmish occurred across the floor of the House.

Mr. Lucas explained that there was no proposal that the Government should build Hydro-radial railways. The request was that the Government should pass legislation enabling the municipalities to build the lines and certain guarantees should be given by the province.

To guard the interests of the individual shareholder in small companies which have been gobbled up by larger and more prosperous concerns is the intention of a bill standing in the name of J. L. Hartt of Simcoe. It comes as an amendment to the Companies Act, and allows anyone who suspects that his rights are being trespassed upon to apply to the county judge for an enquiry.

When the vote of $75,000 to continue the work of the Public Roads and Highways Commission was going through committee in the Legislature yesterday, Hon. W. H. Hearst stated that no sum was included for the remuneration of the members of the commission beyond their out-of-pocket traveling expenses. Mr. C. A. Magrath, chairman of the commission, had declined to take any allowance for his services, Mr. A. M. Rankin was a member of the House, and Mr. W. A. MacLean an official of the Government.

Wanted Divorce, Tried Murder.

BELLFIRE, Ohio, April 18.—Because his wife refused to pay half the costs of a divorce action he had instituted against her, John Luggit early yesterday shot her four times, inflicting probably fatal wounds. He then killed himself. Two of their young children witnessed the tragedy.

CAR THEFT CASES OPEN.

Crown Will Try To Prove Conspiracy to Loot Cars.

NORTH BAY, April 18.—Preliminary hearing of the charges of theft of merchandise from freight cars in transit by employes of the C.P.R. began in Sudbury yesterday before Magistrate Brodie. Five men are charged, but only one case was taken up yesterday, that preferred against Martin, a brakeman of North Bay, who is being tried on five counts. He was committed for trial on each of four counts, and the fifth charge was held over to await the arrival of a witness from Vancouver. Fifty-five witnesses are already on hand for the trials, representing shipping firms of Fredericton, Point Levis, Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, London and Winnipeg, and consignees from Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Crown Attorney McKessock of Sudbury is prosecuting and C. P. R. interests are represented by W. Williams of Pembroke. Martin is defended by G. L. T. Ball of North Bay.

Hurry on Home Rule Bill.

LONDON, April 18.—Premier Asquith told the House of Commons yesterday that the Government hoped to pass the bill for the abolition of plural voting before dissolution, but this cannot be done until 1915.

It is probable that the third reading of the Irish Home Rule Bill will be taken on either May 11 or 18, and the suggestion is made that in order to facilitate its passage, one of the stages in the Commons shall be eliminated.

Riley Gets 15 Years.

LONDON, April 18.—Thomas Riley, of Kansas, ex-brakeman, who on Nov. 2 last shot and killed George Blackburn, bartender of the Cecil Hotel, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Kelly to fifteen years in Kingston Penitentiary. Judge Kelly, in passing sentence, said that Riley's exemplary life previous to coming to Canada saved him from getting the maximum term for manslaughter.

Suggests His Resignation.

WINNIPEG, April 18.—The Winnipeg Tribune yesterday editorially commends Lieut.-Governor Cameron for his refusal to attend the Catholic banquet where the Pope was to be toasted before the King, and suggests that the Lieutenant-Governor might almost be justified in asking for the resignation of Hon. Joseph Bernier, Provincial Secretary, who spoke to one toast.

COULD NOT PUT HANDS IN WATER

Salt Rheum Began with Itching and Burning. Watery Pimples. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in Two Weeks.

L'Anse à Brillant, Que.—"I suffered with salt rheum for nine months. It began by itching and burning and my hands broke out in watery pimples and I could not sleep, only scratch my hands and they would bleed. The pimples were small and white, about the size of pin heads filled with water. I could not put my hands in water at all.

"I tried ——, —— and ——, but found no relief until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I put the Cuticura Ointment on my hands after washing them with the Cuticura Soap and in two weeks they were perfectly cured." (Signed) Miss Bridget A. Briand, May 17, 1913.

FOR PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

The following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores. Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold everywhere. To Fight Cost of Living.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Recommendations for the establishment of a nation-wide organization to reduce the cost of living by improving methods of farm production, marketing and co-operation, were presented yesterday to the second national conference on marketing and farm credits.

Establishment of a school of instruction to train managers of co-operative organizations and an expert service corps to advise with farmers were recommended in the committee's report.

THE GERM THAT CAUSES DANDRUFF AND LOSS OF HAIR IS DESTROYED

By Using Newbro's Herpicide

The dandruff germ is a busy little microbe constantly at work and always doing the same thing. Apparently with fiendish intelligence it burrows down into the hair follicles, destroys the hair life and finally crowds out the hair, causing baldness.

There are two sure ways of stopping the harmful career of this invisible microbic growth. One is to wait until the germ has induced incurable baldness, after which the atrophied hair follicle offers no sustenance to the germ; the other is to USE NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE.

Dandruff cannot exist where Newbro's Herpicide is used intelligently. By destroying the dandruff and checking further accumulations of scarf skin, Herpicide prevents the hair from coming out.

While many imitations and substitutes are offered for Newbro's Herpicide, there is nothing "just like it" or "just as good."

Get genuine Herpicide.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1 sizes, is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Send 10c in postage for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

Will This Skin Sufferer Ever Again Be Cured?

To-day a Horror of Eczema—Help Through D. D. D. Laboratories Gives Hope—Warning in Minor Skin Troubles

Look at this case of skin disease for a moment—the weeping eczema. The case started in a small spot on the elbow, remained unnoticed, untreated, for years. The history of the case reveals that a drink of alcohol started the flame. The disease got beyond control rapidly.

To-day the man is a horror; the typical weeping sores cover his body.

No telling how long the D. D. D. Laobratories will have to work on him before this condition is ameliorated.

But the cure will surely come in time.

For as Dr. Unna Homes has proved; D. D. D. is as near a specific for eczema and psoriasis as is quinine for malaria."

But a few applications of the famous specific to that original small spot and all this suffering would have been avoided. It is horrible, the amount of preventable suffering that exists, increases.

If you have any form of minor skin disease, rash, sore, skin scale, itch, blotch, ringworm, clean out the infection without delay. D. D. D. acts quickly. Druggists of standing everywhere recommend this soothing wash.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, APRIL 18, 1914

VOLCEOFF INCRIMINATED BY VERDICT OF JURY

Havelock Inquest Concluded Yesterday With Finding That Bulgarian Was Murdered and Suspicion Falls on Countryman.

NOW IN BULGARIA

FACTS OF THE CASE.

Duloff disappeared on December 6th last year.

Volceoff disappeared shortly afterwards.

Investigation by Provincial Detectives, over mysterious disappearance.

Body bearing marks of violence found in pond, on March 28th, 1914.

April 6th inquest opened.

April 17th murder verdict returned.

"We find that the deceased came to his death by violence, caused by a party or parties unknown, but we suspect very strongly that the murder was committed by Kolo Volceoff."

Such was the verdict that was returned yesterday afternoon, at the resumed inquest into the death of N. Duloff, Bulgarian, who disappeared about December last year, and whose body was found in a pond at Havelock in March. It is suspected that robbery was the motive.

The body, it will be remembered, was found on March 28th last, badly decomposed. It was at once handed to the authorities.

Severe Scalp Wounds.

An inquest was ordered, and held, that night, in the Town Hall. Coroner Dr. Kindred presided. The remains were identified by fellow-workmen, as those of N. Duloff, the Bulgarian, who disappeared from Havelock, on Decmber 6th last, but whose disappearance was not communicated to the authorities, until the 28th of January, the following month.

Scalp wounds could be plainly discerned about the head, and the post-mortem, which was performed by two Havelock doctors, substantiated the theory that foul play had been committed. The doctors found two fractures of the skull, one behind each ear, either being sufficient to cause death.

Detectives at Work.

At the time the disappearance of Duloff was reported, the Provincial Detective Department, but the man suspected of being concerned in the ded, left Havelock suddenly, when the matter was made public, and his whereabouts could not be ascertained.

Large Sum of Money.

Kolo Volceoff was the man who left the town, and who could not be located. It was known that he had drawn large sums of money, just previously to January 28th, that being, presumably, Duloff's back pay. The general concensus of opinion at that time was, that Volceoff was either a party to the man's disappearance, or else knew something about it, and that theory, it is thought has been amply justified in the light of subsequent events.

Volceoff Arrested.

According to an interpreter, named Ned Vasiloff, who had received letters from Bulgaria, since the enquiries commenced, Volceoff had returned to his native town near Troian, and told the father of the murdered man, that his son had been killed here. Volceoff, on information sent to that country, by the Provincial Detective Department, was arrested, brought before the magistrate, and denied any knowledge whatsoever of the crime.

Quite a Boy.

Duloff was but a mere boy, 20 years of age, and was remarkably good-looking. Whether he was murdered by Volceoff alone, or whether there were more mixed up in the foul deed, is not yet known, but interesting developments will almost surely take place.

Yesterday's Evidence.

The inquest was again resumed yesterday afternoon, when interesting revelations were made. The examination of several foreigners who worked with the murdered man, brought to light, the fact, that on the night of the 6th, or more precisely, in the early morning of the 7th of December of last year, the dead man was seen in company of others at three o'clock in the morning. He returned shortly afterwards, and asked for Volceoff, but the latter, in the meantime, had disappeared. That would be between three and four o'clock, and nothing more was seen of the murdered man after that.

Became Suspicious.

Volceoff was afterwards seen in his bed. Nothing at the time was thought about Duloff not returning. Some time elapsed before his disappearance was discovered, and suspicion was aroused, among the other Bulgarians belonging to the gang.

Blood-Stained Cap.

A day or two afterwards, one of yesterday's witnesses, found the mur-

PAGET DENIES STATEMENTS OF ULSTERITES

Next Week is Likely to be Quiet in England as Far as the Home Rule Situation is Concerned

THE ENTENTE CORDIALE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., April 18—General Paget, commanding the troops in Ireland, to-day emphatically denied the statements of the Ulster Councils to the effect that he called his officers together and laid before them the plans of seizing and occupying Ulster thus precipating the resignations. Liberal papers denounce this latest manifesto of the Ulsterites as scurrilous and some of the Unionist papers cast doubts on the authenticity of these statements. Next week is likely to be quiet so far as the Home Rule situation is concerned. The King is going to France and there are efforts on all sides to make his visit of international importance. There is a revival of the talk of extending the influence of entente cordiale, and possibilities of further alliance between Russia, England and France for the preservation of the peace of the world.

The Remains Of Henry Lennox Were Taken To Toronto

The remains of the late Henry Lennox, who was killed on Tuesday night on the C. P. R. bridge, were taken to Toronto yesterday, where interment took place from the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. R. B Stubbs of that City.

It will be remembered that Lennox, who was only 30 years of age, was run down by an eastbound C. P. R. train on the bridge, only a couple of hundred feet from the station, on Tuesday night ast. When found, some time after the accident had occurred, he was dead, and the body was terribly mutilated. Bellegehem's ambulance was summoned, and the body was taken to their undertaking rooms. It was identified by many as that of Henry Lennox, of Bowmanville, who was at one time employed in the B. F. Ackerman factory, here. A man found near the scene of the acicdent was arrested by the local police, pending an investigation, but has since been released.

Lennox's parents and wife, of Bowmanville, as well as a sister, in Toronto, survive. He was known to many in this City.

THE MEXICAN SITUATION NOT YET CLOSED

MAPLE SYRUP WAS PLENTIFUL

On the Market This Morning and Price Receded to $1.40 a Gallon

POTATOES AT $1.25

There were at least fifteen farmers offering maple syrup for sale on the market this morning. The price opened at $1.50 a gallon, but it was not long until some reduced their demand to $1.40. It was stated that the sap had run copiously during the week, but that the season was practically over. To a casual visitor it seemed that there was more than sufficient syrup to meet this morning's demand. Many of the samples appeared to be decidedly thin.

Butter and eggs were plentiful and the prices showed a corresponding easing off. Eggs were quoted at 20c. but dropped to 18c. Butter was quoted at 27 and 28c, a price that more nearly approached the normal figure and appealed to all the buyers.

Chickens were decidedly scarce, the few offering being sold around $1 each.

Potatoes were rather firm at $1.25 a bag. The supply was more plentiful than usual this morning. On the whole it was a good market. The fine weather brought out many buyers and the farmers were well represented.

Another Old Bible Is Reported

Mr. W. C. Bourn Has One That Was Printed in 1661

References to several old Bibles have appeared in the Examiner during the past few days. This morning Mr. W. C. Bourn, 174 McDonnel Street, called the attention of the Examiner to a Bible he has had in his possession which was printed in 1661, just two hundred and fifty-three years ago. This copy is even older than the others mentioned, but is in a splendid state of preservation. Mr. Bourn does not know how long the Bible has been in his family. He has had it since 1868, in which year it was presented to him by his aunt, whom he visited in England. Three years ago at a service in St. Paul's Church here in celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the introduction of the authorized version of the Bible in its present form, Rev. Mr. Pogue read a chapter from Mr. Bourn's Bible. The print is quite legible.

Could Not Get A Warrant

High County Constable Cochrane was responsible for the arrest of Indians who caused such trouble at Buckhorn. Constable Montgomery 'phoned him, and asked what he should do, as he could not get a warrant for their arrest. Constable Cochrane told him to arrest them without a warrant. He also said that it was time there were improved conditions in several of the outlying districts in regard to police matters.

The man who was fully qualified to order the arrest of the Indians had not even so much as a warrant, which would have saved a lot of time and trouble. The men were remanded till next Tuesday, by County Magistrate Edmison yesterday.

United States Warships Are Rushing Towards Mexico and Will Institute a Blockade if Huerta Does Not Back Down

IS STILL HAGGLING

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, April 18.—For the first time for months President Wilson appeared at his office on Saturday morning. This was in view of expected developments in the Tampico affair. News was expected as to Huerta's last answer to the ultimatum. Meanwhile the United States war vessels are rushing southward, along both coasts. By Wednesday morning they will be ready to blockade the Mexican commerce from every direction. Unless Huerta backs down every Mexican port will be blockaded. It is not expected there will be any bombardment unless the Mexican forts take the offensive.

Washington, D.C., April 18—With copies of translations of the latest messages from Mexico in his pocket, Secretary of State Bryan and Secretary Tumully, about 11 o'clock today rushed from the State Department to Washington Club Golf Links, where President Wilson was golfing. It is reported that the despatches show President Huerta still haggling for terms of salute. Secretary Bryan simply said: "The incident is not closed yet.'

Washington, D.C., April 18—President Wilson stopped his golf game, apologized to his partners, entered his automobile immediately, and hurried to the Executive offices when Secretary Bryan and Mr. Tumully reached him. A statement is expected shortly.

CONVENTION OF TEMPERANCE ASS'N ON MAY 19TH

Temperance Forces Will Be Thoroughly Organized in Event of a Provincial Election

A meeting of the executive of the County Temperance Association was held yesterday and it was decided to call a convention of the temperance forces of this county in order that the temperance interest may be thoroughly organized at the earliest possible date.

The convention will be held in the Lecture Hall of the local Public Library on Tuesday, May 19, at 10 a.m. The matters to be dealt with are the organization of the temperance forces, the appointment of committees to wait upon the party nominating conventions, and to decide what other action it is advisable to take in connection with the present local and provincial situation.

The convention has no doubt been hastened by the possibility of a Provincial election in the near future. In the event of an election, the temperance forces will be organized and ready to take what stand they think advisable in regard to the candidates nominated and the party platforms.

THE HARP OF GOD

Mr. Trappy, who lectures in the Royal Theatre Sunday at 3 p.m., will also speak in the same place at 8 p. m. on the foregoing subject. In a marvellous manner this lecture shows that the ten great truths of the Bible harmonize with the plan of God. Bible students, thinkers, musicians and all truth-seekers will be deeply interested in this address. Illustrated with beautiful chart. Seats free. No collection.

NEW CHURCH OF ENGLAND MISSON

Has Been Established in Brownton—First Service Held Last Night

REV. J. PRICE IN CHARGE

A new Mission has been opened in Brownton in connection with the Church of England there being a large number of church members in this district. Being fully three-quarters of an hour from St. George's Church, it has been found absolutely essential to provide some means of worship for these residents.

Already St. George's Church has been found inadequate for the ever-increasing congregations, and additional accommodation will have to be made. The new Mission will be known as the Brownton Church Mission. The first service was held last evening with Rev. J. Price in charge. A large number was in attendance.

Mr. Price has undertaken this new work in addition to his several duties in connection with his own parish, and his earnest efforts are deserving of the heartiest support.

Private Meeting.

No further information could be obtained from Mr. Price to-day about the new Mission in Brownton, but he said that a private meeting of churchmen will be held on Monday evening, at which something will be said about it.

Annual Self-Denial Effort

Salvation Army in Canada is Making Effort to Secure Funds for Missionary Work

To-morrow the branches of the Salvation Army al lover Canada enter upon the annual week of self-denial, and the beginning of the week in this City will be observed by special services in the local Temple to-morrow. The services will be conducted by Adjutant McElhiney and will be especially for adult members of the Army. The junior members and the Sunday school will celebrate their week of self-denial the week beginning Sunday, April 27.

The purpose of the self-denial effort, which is observed annually by Salvationists the world over is to raise funds for home and foreign mission work. It is estimated that to carry on the work in foreign and domestic fields, at least $750,000.00 is needed annually. To get the money, every branch of the Army participates in the self-denial week and a thorough canvass for subscriptions is carried on in each centre. For the money to carry on its work the Army is dependent on voluntary contributions, and during next week the members of the local branch will be busy making an effort to make the week a financial success.

The week of Self-Denial has just closed in England, and in spite of the unsettled state of business there, the workers were rewarded with the greatest success that has ever attended a like effort of the army before. A week from to-morrow Brigadeer Rawlings and Staff Captain Waldon will be in the city. On that day too the local Oddfellows will attend the Salvation Army Temple.

Probabilities.

Southerly winds, fair and warm. Sunday, strong southwest and west winds, warm and showery.

This was the substance of the bulletin issued from the White House this afternoon. It was stated that Huerta is still insisting on doing something less than demanded. Unless the above is complied with President Wilson will take the matter to Congress Monday.

CITY'S SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT IS HELD UP AGAIN

Municipal Act and Health Act Conflict—Council is Practically Where it Commenced Except for the Preparation of Plans.

MR. PECK'S DILEMMA

One of the biggest problems on the City Council's slate is the construction of a sewage disposal plant. This work has been under consideration for two or three years, and although some difficulties have been removed it seems to be still surrounded with obstacles which may hold up operations for many months.

The location of septic tanks and filter beds was proposed for a site on this side of the Otonabee a considerable distance west of the foot of Lock Street. This had to be abandoned, and the next selection was directed to the south side of the river.

Legislation Conflicts.

But there arises a conflict between the Municipal Act and the Health Act. Under the latter, the City authorities anticipated the building of a sewer under the river and pumping the sewage into a tank to be built on the rise of land. But the Municipal Act requires that the municipality affected, Otonabee in this case, should give their consent by passing a by-law, or failing to do so the matter should be referred to arbitrators, who are empowered to decide whether it was necessary for the City's sewage plant to be constucted in Otonabee, if an affirmative decision is given, to determine the conditions and terms and even to fix the location.

Engineer Parsons, who has been working on the plans for months, has submitted them to the Provincial Board of Health, but the endorsation of this body is nullified by the clauses of the Municipal Act.

City Threatened.

In the meantime, the combined townships of Otonabee and North and South Monaghan have an injunction hanging over the City if the work is not hurried along.

Amend the Act.

One suggested solution is to amend the Health Act, giving the Provincial Board of Health the final word. In this instance the Board has already favoured the trans-Otonabee site. But present operations are completely held up.

Mr. Peck's Position.

Should the question be brought to the Legislature, and already the Provincial Secretary is considering the case, Mr. E. A. Peck would find himself in a peculiar position. Mr. Peck is Solicitor for Otonabee, and also represents the three counties in their suspended action against the City for polluting the river. But he is also the Member for West Peterborough, at Toronto. Hence he, more or less, has the interests of all three parties under his supervision. Otonabee would probably expect him to keep the sewage plant outside their boundaries; the City of Peterborough would surely expect him to press for the suggested amendment to the Provincial Health Act, and the United Counties could give him a roving commission to make it generally hot for the City. However, Mr. Peck is not particularly worrying at present, but something will have to be done soon, as the Council is wearied of the obstacles which have held up the work.

Association Was Formed

At a meeting held at the Durham Hotel, Cobourg, on Good Friday, shooters from Campbellford, Peterboro', Belleville and Cobourg formed a league to be known as The Trent Valley Trapshooters Association. The League proposes holding friendly shoots from time to time during the summer at the different towns represented. Any club in this district not represented at the meeting who desire to join the Association, is requested to send the name of their club to the secretary, Dr. F. C. Honeycastle, at Campbellford, who will give any information required.—Sentinel Star.

THE HOLY GRAIL WAS DESTROYED

GENOA, April 17.—The so-called Holy Basin, the oldest and most important relic in the Cathedral of San Lorenzo, was accidentally broken today. It was supposed to be the Holy Grail. It was discovered at Caesarea in 1101, and has since that time been greatly venerated in Genoa. It is of octagonal glass and is believed to be an emerald. Details of the accident are with-held, but it is said that the holy vessel was broken into fragments and cannot be repaired.

THE ELM AS A CITY TREE.

Knox Church appears to be the first of the recently erected churches to be consistent; to provide complimentary evidence, outward visible signs, of the divine presence within the sacred building. Trees are the most dignified and grateful of the divine handwork, and if one place more than another demands their presence, it is the surroundings of a church building. Any man can pile up a church structure, but only God Himself can give it the glorious setting the immanent dignity of growing trees.

It is understood that Knox Church proposes planting trees on the grounds around the building this spring. The decision to this end is unanimous, but there is division of opinion as to the kind of trees to plant. Some prefer the maple, others the elm. On its merits as a street tree the elm should prevail, as it prevails in hardiness, long life and dignity over every other tree but the oak. The maple, though in habit of growth it is rather stiff and formal, "dumpy" rather than dignified, is not disparaged. It is a beautiful tree while it lasts, but it is short-lived compared with the elm. This is especially the case in most parts of Peterborough, where the soil is underlaid with gravel more or less near the surface. The roots of the maple grow directly downward in search of growth food; and when the roots reach the dry gravel, the maples begin to die; dead branches appear and in a few years the tree goes. The roots of the elm are surface-feeders, and they grow and thrive in situations where there is only a thin layer of good soil. One hardly ever sees elms die spontaneously, so to speak. They are tough and rapid-growing; and if not disturbed are good for at least a century.

They are evidently the trees for church grounds. Knox Church will be standing, it is hoped, in good condition in the year 2014; and if elms are planted now, they will be standing then too, and if properly trimmed will by that time have reached the height and dignity of the church tower—virtually a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

Some of the Knox Church people are obsessed with the wrong idea that elms are hard on the soil and forbid the maintenance of a good lawn in their vicinity. Such objectors can be shown a place, not far from Knox Church, where the very best grass of the lawn is within the radius of the roots of an elm. It is a thrifty tree, planted thirteen years ago, with a trunk diameter of fifteen inches at the base and forty feet in height, flourishing like a green bay tree. As stated the best part of the lawn, the strongest, thickest grass is within the reach of the roots of this elm. It is trimmed high so that the sun gets at the grass. This proves that if sunshine can reach suitable soil for lawns in the vicinity of an elm the grass will grow thriftily.

If the Knox Church people plant maples, they may grow and thrive for a generation or so; but then, if not already done for, they will begin to die. If they plant good, well-rooted elms, their children's children to the third or fourth generation, can sit under their stately shade.

MILITARY DRILL IN SCHOOLS.

In the Public schools section of the Ontario Educational Association in Toronto a resolution was introduced calling for the abolition of military drill in the schools. Military drill in schools, admittedly has a beneficial effect. In the first and more important place it tends to develop ideas of discipline, tending to strengthen the discipline which is the essence of good school work. It is, besides, a complement to mental education; it is physically educative and on the principle of a sound mind to a sound body has a large relative value. It may have its undesirable features; but these, as in almost everything else, arise from abuse of the system, and are not an accompaniment of its proper application. There is nothing intrinsically bad in the world; and in moderation many habits that are bad are harmless—if not excessive. According to the Pauline prescription, a little wine is good for the stomach's sake; the evil consists in its excessive use, or as the Duke of Clarence used it, by the hogshead. A little military drill—enough, and not too much—is a good thing. The mover of the resolution for its abolition claims that it fosters the militant spirit unduly and takes time from school work. It is not likely that the limited amount of military drill in schools will foster more of the militant spirit than is compatible with a healthy patriotism. As to its interfering with school work, it is, rightly employed, a part of school work, a part of the training that will promote the success of school work. All work and no play make Jack a dull boy; and the converse may easily have undesirable results. One of the objections urged by the introducer of the resolution is that he actually saw a drill instructor smoking a cigarette while on duty. This may be a bad example, but school pupils cannot be altogether freed from the influence of bad example. Teachers using slang or slovenly speech, or failing in courtesy and dignity of demeanour in intercourse with pupils, though they are exceptions, are, it is feared, much more dangerous than drill instructors smoking cigarettes on duty. Moderation and temperance in all things, even in the denunciation of practices that only become evils when carried to intemperate lengths, are always in order. There is truth yet in the saying of the old theologue, though it was uttered three hundred years ago—"Moderation is the silken string running through the pearl chain of all virtues."

Testimony Of Good Works

The argument of good works as evidence of the truth of Christianity is unanswerable. This has been so emphasized in the practice of Christian Science that the remarkable progress of this demonstrable religion is little to be wondered at. For this Science is doing just what it set out to do—it is proving by the irrefragable logic of beneficent works that the redemption of mankind from sin and sickness and misery is in exact proportion to human fidelity to the examples set us by Christ Jesus. To follow him, to do the works that he did, is to be governed by an absolute conviction that he was God's messenger, and that he voiced the truth just when it was most needed.

It has become axiomatic to speak of this as a practical age, an age which is proud to boast that it is utilitarian. Anything that is not distinctly profitable is held to serve no useful purpose. Now godliness we know to be profitable, and in the practice of Christian Science this is proved by the 'signs' that follow those who believe. There are few men who are not willing to accept evidence such as that which a Christian Scientist can bring of the healing power of divine Truth. This is called "practical" because it produces some result which it is contended can be seen. If one is raised from a bed of sickness and restored to perfect health, without resort to doctors or drugs or material remedies of any kind, a good work is done that makes it appeal to the human sense of what is right and true. But it is no less a good work—rather, it is higher work—when one is redeemed from the slavery of evil desires, from selfishness, malice, revenge and other products of the carnal mind; and is no less practical. The redemptive process is the displacement of the "old man" of the flesh for the "new man" of Spirit (God), and the "fruits" that are spiritual are manifested. Now men cannot see our faith but by our works, hence one can understand, in the light of all that Christian Science has taught, why it is that Jesus laid so much stress on the works that he did, and made them the test of sincere belief in him and his divine mission. The indisputable evidence that his words were true was the fact that he translated them into deeds. In these days we cannot do less if we would be loyal to God and ourselves.

Hence let us not overlook individual responsibility, and the call there is that every man shall understand what is meant by good works, and whence they come. Jesus said, "If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not. But if I do, though ye believe not me (do not understand me) believe the works." And it is just as true now as then that these works should draw men to God. This is because there is here manifested the operation of spiritual law, which not only proves that divine Mind governs the body by the establishment of right thought, but also that it gives birth to a spiritual consciousness in the hearts of men, a consciousness that has as its source in the divine nature and as its objective the regeneration of the entire human family. An intense desire to overcome and destroy every evil desire is associated with a hungering to show faith by works—not necessarily by great actions; but even in the little things that seemingly do not count, but which make up in the aggregate the sense of love and harmony and justice. This is the conscious recognition of the beauty of Christliness, which will in the end bring the kingdom of heaven among men as a reality, that no one can dispute.

It it wonderful what can be done in this way to testify to the value of the Science of Christianity in meeting daily needs. All the duties of daily living become transformed into happy experiences when they are made to serve as the good works that declare holy faith. Every man who is seeking to gauge correctly his place in the world in relation to God and his fellow-man—and these are increasing everywhere under the unfoldment of the true Christian ideal—finds that he is being elevated to a higher plane of desire when he is established in the knowledge that he is not here to serve and think of himself alone but also of others. Duty, happiness, peace, joy lie not in being served, but in service. "Blessed is the man who has found his work," was Carlyle's benediction. If it is in his work, then there will be abundant opportunities for using every faculty that he possesses for the highest good. And all around us—in our homes, our offices, our workships—there are a thousand ways by which we may make living less burdensome, make it indeed a blessing and a joy.

To do this we need to keep in contact with God, as Life, Truth and Love—drink at the perennial springs of Love, and thus sweeten every thought and purpose. "Christian Science does honour God as no other theory honours Him, and it does this in the way of His appointing; by doing many wonderful works through the divine name and nature."—Christian Science Monitor.

EARLY APPLE BLOOM

Mr. W. T. Cullen of Bridgenorth left at the Examiner Office this morning a few twigs of apple, with the bloom buds all well swollen, and some of them to the bursting point. The buds are abundant and give promise of an abundant crop. The tree from which the buds were plucked is an early apple, the Yellow Transparent. After all, the spring season is not so far behind. It is about the first of May before, as Mrs. Hemains sings, "All the orchard trees are white."

Cost Of Lights Would Stagger More Than Lamps

"Staggered" Taxpayer Gives Some Interesting Figures in Connection With Lighting System

The Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—On Tuesday next nomination will take place at the Council Chamber to name a candidate for alderman for the Centre Ward to take the place of Ex-Alderman Gordon. It is important that the ratepayers of the Centre Ward should select a candidate who has some business ability and some ideas of economy. These qualifications were certainly not displayed by last year's City Council. For instance, Chairman Johnston of the Power committee, before the last municipal elections, made the positive statement that the new lighting system on George Street would not cost more than $35.00 per lamp. To the surprise of a good many ratepayers the cost of the lighting of the down town section of our City is not $35.00 per lamp, but on the other hand the cost is very much greater. According to the figures of the manager of the municipal lighting system the cost of lighting the present down town section is as follows:

Lower electrodes	$ 420.00
Upper electrodes	136.00
Globe renewals	79.00
Rent	150.00
Coal	30.00
Sundries	100.00
Power	408.00
Int. and sinking fund	1500.00
Operating salary	1500.00
Total	$5163.00

It will be observed that the cost of electric power according to the above figures is only $408.00, which the manager computes as follows:

The power items above is made up as follows:

From Jan. 1 to Feb. 23	$218.00
From Feb. 23 to May 31	190.00
Total	$408.00

It is quite evident that the entire cost of operating these lamps is not given because there is no provision made for the cost of power after the 31st of May.

The chairman of the Power committee at the Council meeting made the startling statement that of the 100 lamps on George Street and the streets immediately adjoining one-half of them were to be "staggered," that is to say up to midnight only every alternate lamp on George Street and immediately adjoining streets is to be lighted, and after midnight one-half of the remaining 50 lights is to be furthered "staggered"; that is to say, after midnight only 25 lamps is necessary to light our down town section.

Now, if we assume that this new lighting system can be run without power or by power which costs nothing after the 31st of May, then what is it costing the ratepayers of this City per lamp to light one mile of our down town section. This is a simple question. If 50 lamps cost $5163.00 to light, then one lamp will cost this City $103.26 instead of $35.00 per lamp as the chairman of the Power Committee boldly asserted before the last municipal election.

These figures ought to 'stagger' more than the lamps on the street. These figures must even "stagger" the ratepayers who, for the first time in the history of the City, will be called on this year to pay 28 mills on the dollar. These figures are startling enough, and any person would have thought that before the Power Committee went blundering along in the dark to extend our lighting system in the down town section that it would at least have laid before the City Council an estimate of what the additional two miles of magnetite arc lighting systems would cost; but no such estimate has been given to the public, whatever may be the information that is locked up in the breasts of a Power committee that is causing even the lamps on the street to "stagger."

It is quite apparent that according to the above estimate of the manager of the Power Committee that the total cost of operating the three miles of our new down town magnetite arc lighting system will cost in all at least $8,000.00 per annum, and competent engineers who know something about the lighting business, place the cost at from 20 p.c. to 25 p.c. more, which is about equivalent to what it has cost to light the entire City in the past.

Under the circumstances therefore, is it not important that the merchants and business men who have to pay heavy taxes in our Centre Ward should figure out the following little question in simple arithmetic. If it costs $8,000.00 to light three miles of our City streets then what is it going to cost under the management of our present Power committee to light 65 miles of our City streets? Having figured this question it will be interesting to hear the result of their calculations at the meeting to be held on Thursday next to select a candidate for alderman for Centre Ward.

Yours, etc.,

A "Staggered" Taxpayer.

GODERICH REVIVES THE CURFEW LAW

GODERICH, April 17—The curfew is to be immediately enforced here. At the meeting of the Town Council here to-night Mayor C. A. Reid brought up the question of children walking on the streets after 9 o'clock and asked the Council to endorse the enforcing of the curfew by-law passed here in 1899, which provides that all children under 16 years of age be kept off the streets after 9 o'clock. The Council was unanimous in supporting the Mayor, and the Chief of Police will be instructed accordingly.

"New Market Law Is An Insult To The Farmers"

Such Was the Declaration of Mr. J. J. Herron of Springville to the Examiner To-day---Careless, Slipshod Methods Have Been Driving the Best Farmers From the Market--A Problem of Interest to the City.

No stronger protest against the Council's handling or more properly perhaps, its mishandling of the farmers' market, has been presented to the Examiner's market reporter than the statements of Mr. J. J. Herron of Springville.

Speaking of the new legislation requiring farmer's names on their stands, to come into force on May 1st, Mr. Herron said: "That is nothing less than an insult to the farmers who bring their produce to the Peterborough market. Your interview with Mr. Walter Fisher struck the keynote. Mr. Fisher stated truly that the City should do nothing that would repel the farmers, but should endeavour to secure their good will and co-operation. Now that is just the point. My wife and I always sold goods on the market, but the treatment dealt to the general body of farmers simply disgusted us. We now have regular customers in the City. They order what they want by 'phone and we deliver it. And there are many others who do the same. My wife stated not long ago that she would throw the butter, eggs and other goods away rather than sell a cent's worth on the market."

Where Will it Stop?

Mr. Herron stated that the City showed no consideration whatever to the farmers. They did not have to come to Peterborough to sell their goods. The railway facilities invited and facilitated selling in Toronto and Montreal. The chief objection is the reflection on the honesty of the farmers, and the lack of confidence resulting from the aloofness of the City towards the farmers, and their attitude of suspicion. The situation at present is simply that suspicion is mutual instead of a ground work of trust and confidence without which any trading cannot be permanent.

An Explanation.

The reporter explained his view of the new regulation requiring the farmers to display their names on their baskets. Some farmers had been discovered to be dishonest. Farmers are no more immune from dishonest neighbours than are City dwellers. There are good and bad persons on the countryside and along the City streets. But the actions of the few dishonest farmers has reflected upon the whole market. The City desires to make it possible for citizens to know with whom they are dealing. The farmer knows the names of merchants in the City and can exchange goods which were not as represented. But the farmer may attend market to-day and may not return for six weeks. Citizens have reported purchasing meat, apples and potatoes and the articles were not even delivered, to say nothing of some cases of light weight, intentional or otherwise, and bad eggs.

Confidence Needed.

The reporter went on to state that the farmers should welcome any measure that will guarantee satisfaction to the citizen purchasers, and any law that will make it impossible for a dishonest farmer to sell anything in the City, let alone to mingle on the market hurting the reputation of those who are absolutely honest. There must be confidence between traders, and the new measure aims at that object.

Where Council Fails.

Mr. Herron and many other farmers strongly object to the making of new laws without advising farmers. Nothing has been done to acquaint the farmers of the newest regulation. The Council should endeavour to meet the farmers, meet at least their representatives in the Township Councils, or ask them to appoint representatives. The method of holding aloof, making new rules without consulting the country people will never make a success of the Peterborough market. It will simply drive the most desirable farmers into the streets to deliver their produce to customers who can be easily obtained.

The market is of equal interest to the farmer and citizens, but the former should be told why new laws are made, and should even be consulted for suggestions.

Will Be Discussed at the Next Meeting of the Astronomical Society

The April meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society will be held on Tuesday evening, April 21st.

There will be a lecture and discussion on the phenomena of earthquakes.

The cause of the recent earthquake that was felt so generally throughout Canada will be explained.

There are many causes of earthquakes, one is, the percolation of water to the lower depths, its disintegration into its original gases, which are combustible.

The theory of isostacy precludes the possibility of an earthquake ever extending over any great extent of the globe. About seventy miles beneath the surface of the earth, owing to the great pressure, the interior behaves like a fluid, thus constantly maintaining its equilibrium. The upper layer, owing party to the shifting of the alluvial and other matter on the outer crust of the earth, by tides, rivers and also the erosion of the elements, the equilibrium becomes disarranged. Gravitation adjusts this disarrangement, thus causing an earthquake.

This will all be explained in the course of the lecture. Discussion of the lecture invited. The lecture will be delivered by Mr. F. H. Dobbin, and the following gentlemen, it is expected, will discuss it: Messrs. J. H. Harvey, J. J. Vowden, John Edgar, A. Mowat, A. G. Carruthers, S. J. Keyes and W. A. Logan and Rev. Father McColl.

Everybody welcome. Admission, free.

WOMAN SCREAMED ON C. P. R. BRIDGE AS THE LOCAL APPROACHED

Following Tuesday night's fatality on the C.P.R. Bridge, it might be suggested to those who have been using it as of old that the special police at Havelock may swoop down on Peterborough any day to apprehend some of the trespassers.

Pedestrians to whom it has been a convenience are taking a chance on a police court appearance, and the accident focusses particular attention on the local tracks.

An incident of a few days ago illustrates either carelessness or the danger of using the bridge or possibly both. When the local was about due one morning, and was in sight down the line, a woman was seen running across the bridge. Realizing the rapid approach of the train she commenced to scream and became somewhat hysterical as she hurried across the remaining section.

KILLED WIFE AT GIRL'S ORDER

ALEDO, Ill., April 17.—In his steel-barred cell here Robert Higgins, who last January murdered his wife in order that he might continue his illicit love affair with Julia Flake, his fifteen-year-old stepdaughter, is to-day waiting for the verdict of the court which will either send him to the death chair or to life imprisonment. With bowed head he pleaded guilty to the charge of murder and threw himself on the mercy of the court.

The girl, who admits she planned the murder of her own mother that she might gratify her own desires, has not yet been tried.

The murder of Mrs. Robert Higgins by her twenty-six-year-old husband in New Henderson, Ill., was one of the most sordid, cold-blooded crimes in the history of the State. Goaded on by his stepdaughter, who taunted him with being a coward, the husband went home, kissed his wife full on the lips, and then, while the kiss was still warm, shot her down to her death. Julia Flake listened to the shot that killed her mother unmoved in an adjoining room.

FEIGNED TERRIBLE GRIEF.

After the murder Higgins pretended to be crazed with grief. He fought for possession of the weapon which had killed his wife, declaring he wanted to commit suicide. And so well did he act his part that the simple townsfolk were all deceived, and a Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

The true facts of the case came out later, when an uncle of little Julia Flake turned over to the authorities letters written to him by the girl begging him to "come over and kill mama." Julia promised, if he would kill her mother, to give him half of an inheritance of $7,000 due her when she is eighteen years old.

"COME AND KILL MAMA."

Not content with writing to him personally, Julia also wrote to his daughter, begging her to urge her father to "come over and kill mama."

At first the District Attorney thought the letters those of a child, written in a spirit of childish anger. He decided to investigate, however, and questioned the girl. A few minutes later, Julia calmly admitted her part in the crime — said she had planned the death of her mother, because she wanted her stepfather for herself, and that she had coaxed and cajoled Higgins until finally he had consented.

LAYS BLAME ON GIRL.

Then Higgins was arrested, and he, too, confessed. He, however, laid all the blame on his fifteen-year-old stepdaughter affinity — and she willingly accepted it.

TO-MORROW AT KNOX CHURCH

In Knox Church services to-morrow the choir will repeat the Easter Anthems which were so effectively rendered on Easter Sunday. The choir is deserving of marked praise for its excellent rendering. In the evening Rev. Mr. Keith will take up the last of his series on Paul—St. Paul, the Writer. This series has included Saul, the Pharisee, Paul' First Step as a X'tian, Paul the Missionary, Paul and the Resurrection, Paul, the Preacher.

"Any Arms, Revolvers, Ammunition"—A new Customs question in search of weapons destined for Ulster volunteers. It has been a matter of common knowledge for a while past that the authorities have been doing everything possible to prevent the importation into Ireland of arms and ammunition which might come into the hands of the Ulster Volunteer Force. Such a scene as that here illustrated brings this fact home with special force. BRIDGENORTH

Examiner Special:

BRIDGENORTH, April 18. — Spring has put in its appearance.

The farmers are beginning to pull out the cultivator and getting the seeders ready for work. The up-to-date farmer has his seed all cleaned and bagged ready to sow when the fine weather comes. He is ready for the job.

This last week has been an exceptionally fine week for making maple syrup. The maple trees never ran better and a fine lot of syrup has been made.

Some one set fire to some grass on the roadside on Tuesday last and the result was that the fire too up through the cemetery, and if it had not of been that a lot of men and women lent a helping hand, some of the cottages would have gone up in smoke, as the wind was very high and the grass quite dry.

The Bridgenorth Foresters held their anniversary on Thursday night last and was a great success both financially and otherwise. Bro. A. Jobe, C.R., occupied the chair. The programme was a lengthy one. Bro. D. M. Stanley, of Brantford, the chairman of the Medical Board, was present, and gave an address on the merits of Canadian Forestry which proved to be entertaining and beneficial. He was listened to with great earnestness.

Bro. J. Metheral, from Peterborough, the district organizer, was present, and gave a very nice address; also Bro. Nesbitt, who organized the Bridgenorth Court No. 315, twenty-three years ago, was present and gave an address. Mr. Chandler, Mr. Asa Huycke, Miss Flowers and Miss McNabb took part in the entertainment. The Ennismore Orchestra was also present, and was a great help to the entertainment. Also the Bridgenorth Glee Club gave a couple of good songs, and Mr. James Jopling gave a very fine recitation. Walter Jopling also gave a good recitation. After a hearty vote of thanks to the entertainers the singing of "God Save the King" brought one of the best nights ever spent in the Foresters' Hall to a close.

The floor was cleared off and quite a few remained and spent the rest of the night in dancing.

The gabardine cloth we hear so much about is simply a finer sort of whip-cord.

Huge Glass Windows Installed

Work on the outside portion of the new Turnbull building is nearly completed. The latest addition is the installing of the huge plate glass windows. The contract for this work was secured by the Peterborough Hardware Co. Their long experience in the line of business enabled them to supply anything demanded. The quality of their workmanship is too well known to comment upon. Between five and six thousand square feet of glass is being used on the building. The bottom four windows are exceptionally large ones, and require a specially cut glass to fill them. Other windows are of the more ordinary size. The two largest pieces are 108 x 178 inches, and 108 x 164 inches. Other sizes are, eighty-two by one hundred and eight, seventy by one hundred and eight, one hundred by one hundred and ten, eighty-four by one hundred and ten, thirty-six by one hundred and eight, one hundred by one hundred and two, and eighty-four by one hundred and two.

The Peterborough Hardware Company are also supplying the glass for the partitions between the departments. This is a special glass, and is known as the plain prism chipped, and is of an exceptionally strong and textile nature.

ALL SAINT'S CHURCH BEING COMPLETED

Work has been commenced to complete the new All Saints' Church on Rubidge street, and it is expected that everything will be finished by next fall. The chancel, vestry and various robing rooms will be added to the present building, and the tower completed. The whole construction will be made in dressed stone, and the church, when completed, will be a handsome edifice.

A NOTICE FROM MR. F. DALE

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—A report has been circulated to the effect that I have sold my house and bought a house owned by Mr. Fife. Now all I have to say in reply is, the report is absolutely false, and the person who started that report must have known that it was not true. Therefore it would appear more like a deliberate lie than a mere mistake. I have neither sold my house nor bought Mr. Fife's house. Neither do I now whether Mr. Fife's house is sold at all or not, and those people who make a practice of starting such untrue reports would do more good for themselves and the public generally, if they would shut their mouths and keep them shut, until they can learn to tell the truth, or at least know what they are talking about. If they have any business of their own to attend to it will take up their time (if they attend to it right), without interferring with the affairs of other people. Such talk as that seems to be the outcome of a long tongue and empty head of some human animal, who either never had proper training, or else does not possess sufficient brain to put to good use the good training received in early life. I would thank those people to leave my business matters alone in the future, and I don't think Mr. Fife needs the assistance of any such people in the management of his affairs.

MILITARY FERVOUR INSTALLED IN POLICE FORCE

Local Squad of Police Are Regularly Drilled at the Armouries, by Military Instructor

Very few citizens know that the members of the local police force are thoroughly drilled in military instruction. It has been the custom in the past, and the practice is still maintained, for the men to go to the local Armouries every Friday afternoon, where they are put through a course of practical drill and instruction; in fact, are hard at work for one hour. This is acknowledged to be the best way of keeping the men efficient and, at the same time, there is a tendency to keep them physically fit. Sergeant Instructor Dunkerley instructs the men in drill, and has, at various times, paid a tribute to the manner in which they do the work.

The ordinary citizens, who imagine that all a policeman does is to patrol a beat, are greatly mistaken. At the Police Station, on the walls of the squad room, may be seen a chart of physical exercises, commonly known as Sandow's method, and in conjunction, sets of grip dumbells, and other paraphernalia, used in physical culture. The exercises are regularly carried out. In Toronto the police are also regularly drilled. More especially does this apply to the recruits in the large City. Every afternoon, they are carefully instructed and learn much more by practical work than it is possible to do, by burrowing in books, and learning by heart, theoretical problems, which are more often than not, found to be an absolute failure when put to a practical test. The first rule that a soldier has to obey and learn is obedience and attention to his duty, and this moral is strongly brought out in the focal constables in the practice received at the Armouries, on these Friday afternoons.

Springtime

(By F. A. Conners, Pastor Park Street Church)

The glad Springtime has come again,
With its bright sunshine and showers,
To melt away the winter's snow,
And give us grass and flowers.
And fill the air with music sweet,
From little birds that sing,
And everything in nature speaks,
To tell us it is Spring.

The buds are bursting on the trees,
As nature stoops to don
Her robes of green on every bush,
And carpets on the lawn;
The new-born beesoms scent the air,
And everything is sweet,
The sun is glittering rays above,
The grass beneath our feet.

We welcome thee, glad Springtime here,
In resurrection power,
Restoring life and beauty, too,
In every tree and flower;
With each recurring season,
Comes whispers from above,
In nature's many voices,
Declaring "God is Love".

Second Trial Of Murder Case

Special Wire to The Examiner:

UPPER MARLBORO, Md., April 18.—The second trial of William J. Fisher, an employe of the Panama Canal Commission, charged with the murder of W. L. Altdorfer, a newspaper writer, at the latter's home in Chevy Chase last August, will begin here on Monday. Fisher is alleged to have stabbed Altdorfer with a pair of scissors in a quarrel said to have arisen when Altdorfer insulted Miss Lillian Reeves, who was the only eye witness to the tragedy. When Fisher was tried at Rockville last November the jury failed to agree on a verdict.

LABOUR CHIEFS TO HAVE A RE-HEARING

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 18.—The celebrated Gompers-Mitchell-Morrison contempt case is docketed for a complete rehearing before a full bench of the Supreme Court of the Untied States on Monday. It will be the third time the contempt case has been before the highest court. On the original hearing the court held that criminal sentences for contempt had been imposed on Messrs. Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison in a proceeding in equity, and the decision of the District Supreme Court was reversed. The District Court, the following day, instituted new proceedings, the result of which was the imposition of the same sentences set aside in the original proceedings.

Mr. Gompers is president, Mr. Morrison secretary, and Mr. Mitchell one of the vice-presidents of the American Federation of Labour. In the original action the three labour leaders were charged by Justice Wright of the District Supreme Court with contempt in that they were charged with continued publication, in the "We do not patronize" list of the American Federationist, of the name of the Buck's Stove and Range Company, of St. Louis, after the court had isued an injunction to restrain them from such publication.

A sentence of one year's imprisonment was originally imposed on President Gompers, with nine months in jail for Vice-President Mitchell, and six months for Secretary Morrison. The District Court of Appeals reduced these sentences to thirty days.

When the action was last before the Supreme Court of the United States Justice Lurton was absent from the bench. The action of the highest tribunal in restoring the case to the docket for rehearing has led to the assumption that the court is divided on the knotty problem and desires to have the whole matter gone over again with Justice Lurton present.

The three labour leaders now contend that further proceedings against them are barred by the statute of limitations, while the District Supreme Court seeks to have its sentences stand as imposed.

FROM HALIFAX TO VANCOUVER

WOMEN ARE PRAISING DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Nova Scotia Mother Tells How They Cured Her Aches and Pains, and Made Her a Well Woman Again.

Ecum Secum Bridge, Halifax Co., N.S., April 17 — (Special) — From Vancouver to Halifax come daily reports of the splendid work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing for the suffering women of Canada, and this little place can show a splendid cure of its own. Mrs. Orastus Pace, the mother of a large family, was a sufferer from those aches and pains only women know. To-day she is a strong, healthy woman. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it.

"I had a pain in my left side and down through my hips," Mrs. Pace states. "I had headache all the time. Myheart was weak, and at times a pain around it added to my fears. Some days I was hardly able to walk.

"I read of a number of cures of cases like mine, by Dodd's Kidney Pils, and sent for three boxes. To-day I am a well woman, and can do as much work as ever I could."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cured Mrs. Pace because her troubles came from diseased kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure diseased kidneys, and as ninety per cent. of women's troubles come from kidney trouble, Dodd's Kidney Pills have come to be known as suffering woman's best friend.

The number of delegates present on Wednesday night was fair, President Hartley declaring the meeting open at 8.30.

Musicians Action Justified.

Owen Miller, secretary of the American Federation of Musicians, wrote, justifying the action of the musicians now engaged at the Grand Opera House. They could not quit without orders from headquarters, Mr. Miller complained.

The Nationalization of Railways.

The Single Tax Association of Ontario asked for the Council's support of its objection to further subsidizing by the Government of Canada of the Canadian Northern. This new line had already been largely assisted by the people of Canada through its Cabinet, and now that company had made an Oliver Twist stunt and asked for more. Let the Government take the whole system over, and the public money thus be used in the public service. That the national funds be used for private enjoyment is detestable in the Single Taxers' idea of the greatest good for the greatest number. Needless to add the local Trades and Labour men supported the request of the Association.

Old Countrymen and Europeans Should Keep Away.

Hamilton District Trades and Labour Council have become busy on a very important question. The Ambitious City "men that know" ask endorsation of their action in requesting influential British papers to show up the real state of things in this country. To gain the bounty granted them shipping agents wrongfully represent working conditions to the toiling masses, ever on the alert, naturally, to better their condition, and the result is the painful spectacle of thousands of immigrants looking for work in a country where already there are not enough jobs to go around. The Local Council saw no argument whatever that could be brought against this most excellent idea. They back up Hamilton.

Building Inspector Should Be Vigilant.

Representatives of the Bricklayers and Masons, spoke of the disgraceful way that houses are being put up around the City. Technical terms were indulged in by the professors in bricks and mortar plus cement, and the scribe, who can only boast a building knowledge of an elementary nature, found it difficult to follow. It could be understood, however, that on some of the non-inspected houses now being put up, it would be dangerous to place anything heavier on the second floor than an empty close basket. Rome was not built in a day, but whole rows of houses can be put up in Peterborough in less time than that, and the buyers of some modern residences would be lucky if their purchases did not collapse during their lifetime, leaving nothing but debris for the generations that are to come. The Municipal committee will wait on the Board of Works and explain matters.

Next Meeting May 9th.

Controller James Simpson is expected to address the meeting on May 9th, particulars of which will be advertised later.

Heart and Nerves Were Bad.

Could Not Sleep.

To the thousands of people who toss on a sleepless pillow night after night, or who pace the bedroom floor with nerves on the jump, the heart action all wrong, and to whose eyes sleep will not come. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills offer the blessing of sound refreshing slumber, as they restore the equilibrium of the damaged nerve centres and correct the wrong action of the heart.

Mrs. Charles Teel, Horncastle, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart and nerves were so bad I could not sleep, and the least noise or excitement would make me feel so that I used to think I was going to die, and I would tremble until I could hardly stand. I took doctor's medicine, but it did not do me much good. At last I tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and can certainly say they did me a great amount of good. I can recommend them to anyone who is suffering as I was."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have been on the market for the past twenty years, and have done more to steady shaky nerves and strengthen weak hearts, than any other known preparation.

ROBT. IRWIN IS IN TOILS AGAIN

Celebration After Two Months Rest, Ends in Disaster—Blacklister Fined $10

Robert Irwin who has spent the past two months in jail on a charge of contempt of court, and who was released a day or two ago, suddenly discovered yesterday that he had forgotten to have a celebration in honour of the event. Accordingly, he got drunk, but a policeman saw him and lodged him safely within the walls once more. Since he had been confined to jail his term as a subscriber to the blacklist had expired and he was charged with being a common drunk, before His Worship Police Magistrate Dumble, this morning. He pleaded guilty and was assessed $5.75, to be paid forthwith, and in default of payment fifteen days in jail. Irwin asked for time to get the money, but His Worship said he would not give him five minutes. "Do you think we run this Court for your accommodation," added the Court.

Irwin will, accordingly, spend the next fifteen days as a ward of Gaoler Nesbitt, at Castle Hall.

A man named Sargison was charged with being under the influence of liquor, to-day, while he was on the blacklist. He pleaded not guilty, but on the evidence of P. C's. Reid and Burnham, he was convicted and fined $10, to be paid in ten days.

CHICAGO TO SAVE HER BABIES

Special to The Examiner.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 18. — "Save Chicago's babies." Everywhere in Chicago this slogan will be displayed during "baby week," which begins tomorrow. It will appear on electric signs and billboards throughout the city, on the sides of thousands of waggons, in newspapers and moving picture theatres, in surface cars and elevated trains. The objects of this publicity campaign are to warn mothers of the increasing dangers to their children during the summer months and to obtain funds for the establishment of more schools of instruction for mothers.

Havana now has a newspaper devoted to the interests of the equal rights of women on the island.

Paris To Welcome The King And Queen

Special Wire to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 18.—King George and Queen Mary are coming to Paris next week to return the visit of President Poincare. The visit will be the first that their Majesties have paid to France since they came to the throne and naturally it has aroused the liveliest interest throughout the country. While no important changes in political relations are expected, the hope of the public is that the visit will tend to draw even closer the two friendly countries.

Elaborate preparations for the entertainment of the King and Queen are well advanced. They will receive the highest honours that the President, the Government, the municipality and the general public can accord. Already the Place de l'Opera and the boulevards are being lined by huge columns bearing the arms of England and of the City of Paris, with electrical devices on a scale of magnificence not seen here in many years.

An interesting phase of the royal visit is the solicitude of the municipal authorities over the possibility that something might occur to shock Queen Mary's sense of propriety during her stay in the Capital. There has been a general clean-up of the Montmartre resorts and all the Paris music halls have been ordered to cut out the raw stuff during the week of the royal visit. These precautionary measures are somewhat amusing in view of the fact that there is not the remotest possibility of Queen Mary attending a music hall performance or taking even a glimpse at naughty Montmartre.

The royal party will be quartered at the Foreign Office, living in the same luxurious apartments that have been occupied by King Alfonso and other royalties who have visited Paris in recent years. The programme of entertainment has not been completed in all its details, but the leading features have been decided upon. These will include a gala performance at the Opera, military manoeuvres at Chalons, a big military review at Vincennes and visits to the Invalides, the Pantheon, to St. Cyr and Versailles and other places of interest. In addition there will be dinners at the Elysee Palace, at the British Embassy and elsewhere, which will serve to bring out expressoins of the friendly relations existing between France and Great Britain.

VOLCEOFF INCRIMINATED

dered man's cap, which showed quite a quantity of blood on one side of it, on a cinder pile. Volceoff found out that the cap had been discovered, and the witness said that the suspected man begged of him, not to say anything about the blood being seen. That was after he had washed the cap.

Incriminating Letters.

Some letters which have been sent to this country by Volceoff, since he has returned to Bulgaria, were read by the interpreter, who had been brought from Toronto, but owing to the very incriminating nature of these, they were not put in as evidence.

The Time-Keeper.

Mr. Schnider, who is now a resident of Smith's Falls, but who was, at the time of the murder, time-keeper of the gang to which the murdered and suspected murderer were attached, was called as a witness. It was not shown definitely that the suspected man drew the money, although it is well known that he did, as the man Schnider could not remember anything about it. The one thing he could recollect, however, was, that he signed the murdered man's name, for Volceoff, but he could not recall anything further.

No Extradition Treaty.

Detective Boyd, of the Provincial Detective force, who has been employed on the case, was present yesterday afternoon. Since the last sitting of the enquiry, he has found out that there are no extradition treaties between Bulgara and Canada. In the meantime, the murdered man's father will be communicated with. At the time Volceoff was suspected in his own country, he was brought before a magistrate, but as he denied any knowledge of the affair, he was given his freedom. The murdered man's father will, however, keep a watch on Volceoff.

Will Make Demand.

It is more than probable, that now a verdict has been returned, which incriminates Volceoff, a demand will be made by the authorities for the suspect. Bulgaria has the right, however, to refuse to give him up, but in the common interests of justice, it is hardly probable that the request of Canada will be refused. Such being the case, he will be brought here to stand his trial, when most interesting developments may be expected.

Assistant Crown Attorney Wearing was present and watched proceedings. The above verdict was returned, after the jury had been out but a short time.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE T. DELAIRE

The funeral of the late Mr. Threfield Delaire tok place this morning from the residence of Mr. Jos. Delaire, Perry Street, to the Church of the Sacred Heart and St. Peter's Cemetery. The large funeral cortege testified to his popularity and the esteem in which he was held by many Peterborough people.

The late Mr. Delaire passed away a few days ago in Greenfield, Wisconsin, as a result of an accident which occurred several weeks previous. The accident necessitated the amputation of a leg, and after two operations Mr. Delaire succumbed to the shock. He was engaged in the lumbering business in this section of the country for many years and for some time had resided in this City.

Four brothers, Mr. P. W. DeLaire, 474 Park Street; Mr. Jos. DeLaire, Ferry Street; Mr. Philip DeLaire of Michigan, and Mr. Sylvester DeLaire of Midland, survive him. One sister, Mrs. Josephine Corby, also survives.

BYRNE AND CHAPDELAINE JOIN THE PETES OTHER PLAYERS ALSO ARRIVED YESTERDAY

Nearly Thirty Men Out in the Afternoon—Workout Was Featured by a Long Batting Practice With All the Pitchers in Action—Exhibition Game To-day is Cancelled.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 17.—Sunshiny, summery weather greeted the Peterborough Canadian Leaguers to-day, and with the warm sunlight streaming down over Wright Park, Manager Curly Blount drove his squad through two good workouts, making more progress to-day than on Thursday. The bright weather seemed to put ginger into the players and the park was in much better shape, the base paths drying up fast.

JOE BRYNE IN CAMP.

Four players joined the Blountmen to-day, bringing the official register up to nineteen. The first to get in was rather a surprise, Third Baseman Joe Byrne arriving from Philadelphia in the morning and reporting to Blount. Last year's third baseman has been a hold out all spring, and it was only a few days ago that he finally notified the Peterborough management of his willingness to come back. Manager Blount has been in communication with him, and the result was the difficult corner guardian hung up his hat in the Ted House yesterday morning. He has been working out for some time at his home in Philadelphia and says he is already in good shape. He certainly looks the part.

AN EXPERIENCED CATCHER.

The othes new arrivals to-day were Catcher Chapdelaine from New Bedford, Catcher Mully Miller and Shortstop Geo. Miller from Massillon, O. "Chappy" is no bigger than last year, but full of "pep" as ever. The little catcher got a warm reception from last year's Peterborough players, with whom he is a general favourite. Catcher Miller is the dean of the back-stopping department. He has had a long schooling behind the bat, and is being counted on by Manager Blount as the Petes' first string catcher this season. Miller caught nearly one hundred games for Erie in the Central League two seasons ago and had a fine record. There are four other catchers here, Kelly, McClure, Rybery and Chapdelaine; in fact there are more receivers in camp than pitchers. However, Blount is not worrying over the twirling department.

To-day's programme opened with a light workout for an hour and a half in the morning, the limbering up exercises started the day before being continued, while Blount made the whole squad do a Marathon around the Park to finish with.

A SNAPPY PRACTICE.

The afternoon practice was the best the Blountmen have had. The weather conditions were ideal, and with the regulars augmented by a bunch of Youngstown players, a squad of thirty men were out at the Park at 1.30 o'clock. Manager Blount believes in lots of batting practice, and accordingly the greater part of the afternoon was devoted to hitting. Belting, Schettler, Cresswell and Tirrell all had a turn in the pitching box, although, of course, the twirlers did not let out any, tossing the pill over for the batters. All the other players stepped up to the plate in turn, and as Blount made them run out their hits, the going was rather strenuous after a winter's inactivity. The hitters hammered the straight ones in a promising manner, but until the pitchers start putting something on the ball, it will be a difficult matter to estimate the batting strength of the Petes.

INFIELD LOOKS GOOD.

A short infield practice wound up the day's doings. With Flanagan and O'Hearn at first base, Schrage and Price at second, Miller at short and Fox and Byrne at third, the ball was shot around the diamond in great style. The work was very snappy for so early in the season, and Manager Blount should be able to select a fast fielding quartette from these men. There will be competition for every place on the team, however, and the rivalry will tend to speed the squad up and keep every man on his toes. So far there are only three outfielders here, including Manager Blount himself, but when Swartz and Dawson arrive, there will be four men batting for two vacancies in the outfield. In addition, Fox can patrol an outer garden with the best of them. The Buffalo boy may land the utility berth with the team, as he performs well both in the infield and outfield.

CLASSY MACKINAWS ARRIVE.

That the Petes will look like a big league team, as far as garb goes anway, is evidenced by a glance at the new Mackinaws which arrived here yesterday. They will replace the coat sweaters in the warming up process, or for use when the players are on the bench. The new coats are similar to those worn by the New York Giants, almost three-quarter length. They are maroon in colour, with a black check that looks very classy.

Manager Blount has cancelled the exhibition game scheduled for Saturday, but the Petes will get into action on Sunday against a local semi-professional team, and the majority of the players will be given a chance in this engagement.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

PORTSMOUTH, Ohio, April 17.—The Cleveland American Association team expects great things from three Canadian League players who were drafted and bought last season. Oskea Neale, of London, who was given time to stay at school in Buchanan, W. Va., until the season opened, will in all probability play the role of utility outfielder, while Hilliard, the outfielder drafted from Peterborough, will likely get a regular berth in the outfield. These two men, along with Dunlop, at shortstop, comprise the players gathered from the Canadian League last season and make up the new material for the club under Manager J. Shrekard, of "The Spiders." Scout C. Hickman, who conducts a ball school here for the Cleveland Naps, made the above statement.

MARIETTA, Ohio, April 17.—The pitchers, who were here trying for places on the London club, are slowly but surely rounding into form, and it will be difficult to eliminate the best from this squad, especially when Southpaw Heine Stieger blows in. He is expected to report at Chilicothe on the 25th, along with Second-Baseman Linneborn.

The three righthanders, outside of Manager Reisling, are starting to cut loose already, and the manner in which Beeble, Hammond and Houseman are showing up, there is some task ahead of the pilot to ascertain which of them to let go.

Heck, Riley and Steiger, the lefties, will also come in for much consideration, as Heck and Riley are going great. Heck is almost certain to be a more finished moundsman than he was last season.

Hamilton Spectator—Two more additions, in fact three, were made to the Hamilton Baseball squad yesterday. Fred (Red) Fisher, the big and popular catcher, made his appearance early in the afternoon, bringing with him a chap named Schmidt, a young outfielder, who has been going pretty good in semi-pro circles in the Bison city. Hyson, the lanky lad, who held down the initial sack last year for the Kolts, also arrived in the city yesterday and made his appearance at the ball park when the players trotted out for their morning exercises. Tyson has not been included in the local squad, but he is a free agent and there is a possibility that he will be given a chance. It will be remembered that he went along pretty good towards the end of the season last year, giving indications that experience was all that he needed to make a pretty fair kind of an initial sacker. The arrival of this trio brings the squad up to seventeen palyers, with Corns, Durborow, Morris, Dalon, Dwyer, Evans, Walmsley and White yet to report with the result that some twenty-five players will be on the job before the first of the week. Red Fisher is in the best of shape and is looking forward to a good season. He thinks a lot of Schmidt, who is a protege of his. Schmidt is a likely looking youngster and will be given a thorough trial.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., April 17.—Pitcher Sam Hall of the Ottawa Canadian League Club, who has been working out here with the local Central Leaguers, has been sent to Detroit, where he will look the big leaguers over in the Detroit-Cleveland series the remainder of the week ,then proceed on to Chatham, Ont.

Frank Shaughnessy of the Ottawa Club is negotiating with Owner Varnell for Pitchers Shocker and Peterson and Catcher Byers. They are all good men and should figure away up in their positions in the Canadian League. Shaughnessy will probably take four men from here when he leaves to-night. He announces his club will be fifty per cent. stronger than last year, and is counting on landing a third pennant for the Canadian capital.

Frank Shaughnessy of the Ottawa Club announced this morning he was negotiating for the purchase of Geo. Nill, the former Washington and Cleveland American second baseman, now with Seattle in the Northwestern League. Nill is an experienced ballplayer and was the third best second baseman in the Northwestern last year. He is a hard hitter and a good base-runner.

There is no doubt but that the foundation of any pennant winning club is the twirling staff, and it is because of this fact that the chances of the Hamilton team this year appear pretty rosy. Yates has a grand lot of twirlers at his command. Dougherty, Dolan and Donohue have proven their worth and the equal of any trio in the League. Yates is a good hit himself, while Billy Dwyer, who joined the squad this morning, is rated pretty highly. Dougherty, Dolan, Donohue and Dwyer, the four Ds, with Yates to round it out, appears like a pretty tidy pitching staff and a grand foundation for any club. The task is to build up a pennant winner around the Four Ds.

BASEBALL CHATTER.

How would you like to be an umpire and have to announce Mr. Oeschger, of the Phillies, as the pitcher of a battery.

The early work of Ralph Comstock, the former Minneapolis twirler, stamps him as strong enough to hold down a regular job with the Detroit Tigers.

The rule limiting the major league clubs to 25 men after May 15 has been tossed into the discard. The activity of the Feds is probably the answer.

The Kansas City and Indianapolis teams in the Federal League look to be stronger than the American Association teams in the same cities.

Marsans, the Cuban who is with the Cincinnati Reds, is a highly sensitive player and Charley Herzog will find plenty to do in handling him.

Jake Daubert, the Superbas' first baseman, will back a semi-pro team in Brooklyn this summer as a sideline. Jake will pilot the team himself on Sundays when the Robins are at home.

BOSTON MARATHON WILL BE RUN ON MONDAY

Special Wire to The Examiner:

Facts About the Great Boston Marathon Race.

The Course—From Ashland, Mass., to the B.A.A. clubhouse in Boston.

The Distance—Twenty-five miles of winding, hilly road.

Time to Start — Twelve o'clock noon.

Record of Course — Two Hours twenty-one minutes eighteen and one-fifth seconds.

Holder of Record—Mike Ryan, Irish-American A.C., New York, made in 1912.

BOSTON, Mass., April 18. — At noon next Monday the pick of the American and Canadian amateur long-distance runners will line up for the start of the eighteenth annual Marathon race of the Boston Athletic Association. While the event is usually termed the Boston Marathon it is in reality an international event. The winner is conceded to be the champion and the race is usually selected as the one for the Olympic trials.

Records of the race since its inauguration in 1897 show that but one man has succeeded in winning the event in 1900 and repeated the trick frey, of Hamilton, Ont., who won the event ni 1900 and repeated the trick the next year. In his second attempt Caffrey established a record for the course (2h. 29m. 23 3-5s.), which held good until 1907, when Tom Longboat, the wonderful Indian runner, covered the course in 2h. 24m. 24c.

Four years later Clarence De Mar shattered Longboat's record by covering the distance in 2h. 21m. 39 3-5c. De Mar's record was short-lived. One year later Mike Ryan, the crack runner of the Irish-American A.C. of New York, waded through the bunch and landed home a winner in 2h. 21m. 18 1-5s. This record still holds good.

The race next Monday promises to take on more of an international character than any of its predecessors. With Jimmy Duffy of Hamilton, Victor McAnley and Gunner Mackins of Nova Scotia, Edward Fabre of Montreal, and several other distance runners from the Dominion among the entries, it will be up to the American runners to trot at their fastest clip if they would keep the championship honours from going across the border.

The American runners will include some of the fastest men from New England, New York and the Middle West. The Pacific Coast section will be represented in the event for the first time. Fritz Carlson of Minneapolis, the winner of last year's race, will be on hand to defend his title.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The Stock Market showed an unsettled condition, but offerings were met on rallies and finds scale support only on raidings. Weaks and shorts are being sought out in the general list and we understand that when they are found and exposed some high grade selling will take place in the standard stocks. Good absorption is pronounced during the weakness at these prices and as soon as the steel department liquidation shall have been completed we think the general list will turn upwards permanently, barring irregularity. The selling of Lehigh Valley and N.Y.C., with other eastern trunk lines, is by professionals, on the rate, delay gossip. We expect the market to be at the bottom some time next week, when I would buy the Standard Rails and interest bearing industrials, such as U. S. Steel, Amalgamated Copper, Sugar and Am. Tel. and Telegraph.

SHORT TRACES ARE BEST.

Horse Pulls Much Better If Close to the Load.

It is a great question among teamsters whether a horse can pull better with short traces or long traces, that is, whether it is better for the horse to be close to the load or further away. Their general concensus of opinion is that short traces are better, and as in most cases where there is great experience, they are probably right.

To understand the proposition it is well to remember that it takes a great deal more energy to pull the load at moving than it does to pull it at uniform speed. Also it takes a great deal more energy to pull the load at varying speed than at uniform speed. This is easy to se when we remember that when a body is pulled alosg at uniform speed on a level surface the only thing to be overcome by the ractive force is the friction at the axles. On tre other hand, when the pace gets faster an acceleration is given it—and there is only one thing that gives as acceleration, and that is a force.

So when the load changes speed a force must be added to the force to overcome friction, thus making it harder on the horse. Of course, the same thing applies to any moving body. The condition of least effort is uniform speed on a level plane.

Now, to apply this to the problem stated above simply imagine a horse hitched to a loaded waggon and going at uniform speed, but imagine the traces to be one hundred feet long. If the waggon goes over an inequality of the ground (say over hill slightly) the traces, of course, slacken up greatly, and before the horse, going at the same uniform speed as before, can take up the slack, the waggon may have come to rest, or slowed down considerably. So to bring it back up to previous speed the horse has to exert extra force.

Now, in a short trace the stretch of the leather is much less than in long ones, and so, if the waggon starts anything it simply shoves the horse ahead and he has no slack to take up.

In using short traces, too, there is much less danger of their breaking, for the load is felt by the horse before he has moved his body very far, and his force is applied gently and evenly, whereas he jumped forward with a slack long trace he would have acquired considerable velocity when the traces became taut, and, trying to move the load instantly would inevitably snap the traces.

Just a Slip.

"I want to know whether my wife and myself have been insulted or not," writes a valued correspondent. "I will tell you the brief story, and you can judge for yourself.

"Remember what a fierce night it was last Sunday? Well, some friends of ours came to call in the afternoon. When they got to thinking about leaving for home, wife took a slant at the weather and said:

"'It's a terrible evening. You can't go home in this weather. Stay and have supper with us.'

"'Oh,' answered the lady who was calling, 'I guess it isn't as hopeless as that, thank you!'"

WOMEN ARE WAKING UP ON TEMPERANCE

The paramount social question I want to urge upon you is that this temperance question must not be deferred. It is a matter of urgency. No reform, political or social, will avail unless you precede it with temperance reform. Temperance reform must precede every social reform that has ever been invented. Unless you have temperance reform going before every reformer, you simply make them of no value and a curse to any country. Alcohol in itself is the conversion of Providence's most luscious blessings into curses, and it is the nature of alcohol that whatever it comes into contact with it converts into a curse. There is a great movement at the present moment, and one which daily increases, namely a movement to shorten the hours of labour. I believe there is a general agreement on this point, that the hours of labour must be shortened. But what does that mean. It means that increased leisure will be given to the working classes. And what does that mean? Unless you precede it with prohibition it means this—increased leisure will simply mean facilities, increased opportunities, increased temptations, that will lead to intemperance, and the great movement designed for the elevation of man's moral nature, for the development of his mental faculties will simply land the workig classes in their own degredation and destruction. Can you name any social reform that intemperance will not ruin and convert into a curse. In the face of all these facts is it not a cry to temperance people to be up and doing and drive this vile thing from our borders now and forever.

Women Are Waking Up.

Everywhere women are waking up to see that organized vice is at the bottom of all the opposition to put in women's own hands the weapon men find essential to their own safety—the ballot. Do Canadian women realize that along the whole Pacific Coast, from Mexico to the Pole, the only State in which women are still reckoned "children, Indians and idiots,' is British Columbia. The indications are that our Pacific Province will not be long behind. Just a few words to show how women's vote improved conditions in California. On Oct. 10th, 1911, six hundred thousand women were enfranchised in California. The Legislature of 1913 was the first in which they had a voice, but already the following measures have been passed: First, constituting houses of ill fame a nuisance, and dealing with them as such; making the father responsible for support of an illegitimate child; fixing a minimum wage for women and children, and limiting their hours of eight a day, and six days a week; and many others just as important as these.

Judge Williams of the United States Court of Appeals, says: "The power of the saloon is passing in politics, largely because of the influence of the women voters.

Persons who eat dinner at the tango restaurants in the White Light centre are quite well aware that a part of the price they pay is for food and the rest of it for surroundings. But very few know that scenery is charged for on a sliding scale. A mess of food was in contemplation.

"If you give your order now," said the waiter, "I save you money."

It appeared that there are three printed bills of fare in this restaurant. They are precisely alike in appearance. Only the prices differ. The first goes into effect with breakfast. Ham and eggs, for example, is quoted at 50 cents upon this menu. When the orchestra goes into action for dinner the second bill of fare is produced. Ham and eggs have risen to 65 cents. About 9 o'clock the dinner trade is over, and the tangoing, drink-buying, hand squeezing patrons begin to come in. The third bill of fare is produced.

"Here," said the waiter, "is where we take you."

Ham and eggs have mounted to 90 cents, and there is less of the ham and fewer of the eggs. The waiter was desired to state whether any downtrodden patron ever noticed these facts, and, noticing, ever complained.

"Them fatheads never seen nothing," said the waiter. "Anyway, none of 'em ever hollered."

MOTHER KILLS GIRL.

Hull Woman In Frenzy Slays Nineteen-Year-Old Daughter.

OTTAWA, April 20.—Wielding an axe as the instrument of death, Mrs. Placide Massie, aged 45, wife of a plasterer residing at Adelaide and Alfred streets, Hull, Saturday afternoon murdered her 19-year-old daughter, Marie, the oldest of a family of seven children.

The woman had been acting strangely for about a week, and it is thought she committed the crime in an insane frenzy. The cause of the crime, it is believed, was the mother's objection to a young man, an acquaintance of her daughter. So far as known there were no witnesses to the events leading up to the crime. The screams of the girl were heard by a neighbor, Felix Charron, who reached the house, but was too late to save her. He held the woman until the police arrived.

The body of the girl was horribly mutilated, though she lived a few minutes after Dr. Belisle had reached her. She was, however, unable to make any statement.

Mrs. Massie was immediately taken into custody by a squad of police, and on being placed in a cell at headquarters tried to suicide by battering her head against the wall. She appears to be violently insane.

Bryan On The Job

State Secretary Conducted Negotiations Over Sunday

WILSON OUT OF CAPITAL

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Throughout the day the Mexican crisis occupied the absorbing attention of officials, dispelling the usual calm of a beautiful midspring Sunday. President Wilson arrived at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., early yesterday, after a night ride from Washington, and there joined Mrs. Wilson.

Secretary Bryan remained up practically all Saturday night, awaiting some definite word from Mexico City. He was at the State Department until after midnight, and on going home continued telephoning to those in the cipher room at the State Department until four o'clock yesterday morning.

Shortly after nine o'clock Mr. Bryan had received two messages from Mexico City. Both were from Charge O'Shaughnessy. The first was merely formal, stating that the message of President Wilson, giving Huerta until six o'clock Sunday to yield, had been communicated to Portillos a Rajos, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and that a reply would follow. The second despatch was in the nature of a reply, although the officials quickly perceived that it was not clearly responsive and definite as to the demands made by this Government, but raised a new issue as to the U. S. agreeing in writing to return the Huerta salute.

Mr. Bryan summarized the Huerta reply in a telegram to the President at White Sulphur Springs, and soon thereafter held a long distance conference with the President, going over the points Huerta had raised. While the reply was considered favorable in the general purport as to saluting the American flag, yet it again parleyed over details and conditions. As a result of the long distance talk, Mr. Bryan despatched a further message to Mexico City, making it plain that President Wilson would listen to no counter-proposals or suggestions, but must have unequivocal acceptance of the American demand at the time stated, six o'clock last night.

While these exchanges were going on by cable between Washington and Mexico City the Navy Department was centering its attention on further preparations for an eventuality which might occur. At 10.30 o'clock, shortly after Huerta's dilatory message had been received, orders were sent to the battleship Mississippi, with an aeroplane corps and six hundred marines and the torpedo flotilla at Pensacola, Fla., to get under way at once, joining Admiral Badger's fleet as it entered the Gulf of Mexico, and proceeding with the fleet to Tampico. The torpedo flotilla consists of 22 destroyers, the tender Dixie and the scout cruiser Birmingham, but several of the destroyers are in reserve, so it is probable only 14 will sail.

Secretary Bryan had planned to go to church at 11 o'clock but as the cable messages began to come in he changed his plans and went to the State Department. There he was joined by Governor Lind, the President's personal representative in Mexico, and the two went together to the private telegraph office of the State Department to consult over a difficult piece of deciphering in the latest message from Huerta.

The secretary and Governor Lind joined Secretary Tumulty at the White House, and the latest exchanges were further gone over in detail.

Later it became known that the messages showed that Huerta was not raising objection to the salute itself, but as to the details under which the salute would be returned. The main condition was that the United States agree in writing that the salute be fired, instead of relying on the assurance given by Admiral Mayo for a return salute. This was construed by officials as a wily and adroit move on Huerta's part to obtain an assurance direct from the American Government, which would be capable of being construed by him as a recognition of the de facto Mexican Government.

News from Mexico was awaited by the people of the capital with the keenest interest. All through the evening the streets were thronged, and crowds gathered in front of the newspaper offices. In the hotel lobbies the crisis was the one topic of conversation and some of the crowds, inspired by the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" and "America," engaged in patriotic demonstrations.

Senators and representatives, anxious to receive some official word, besieged the White House and the State and Navy Departments with requests for information.

Taking Survivors of the Great Sealing Disaster Ashore—Steamer Arriving at St. Anthony with Dead and Dying.—One of the greatest disasters in the history of the North Atlantic seal fisheries occurred at the beginning of this month, when upwards of 200 brave Newfoundlanders lost their lives, 170 of them going down when the sealing schooner, the Southern Cross, was crushed in an ice floe and sank. The others were lost through a terrible blizzard coming up while they were killing seals on an ice floe. Those who did not die from exposure were terribly frozen. The photograph shows one of the survivors being brought ashore at St. Anthony, Newfoundland, where Dr. Grenfell's hospital is located.

AVIATORS KILLED.

Two Machines Meet In Mid-Air and Explosions Occurs.

BUC, France, April 20.—The aviator, Francois Deroy and Marvel Dablin, who was making a flight with him, were burned to death as a result of a collision in the air yesterday. Thousands of spectators witnessed the accident.

Deroy's machine, and another piloted by Bedault, with a passenger, M. Pelladeau, came together with a crash in mid-air. Evidently the gasoline tanks exploded, for both machines burst into flames and fell to the earth. Bedault and Pelladeau, although badly injured, managed to extricate themselves from the blazing wreckage, but Deroy and Dablin were pinned down and the intense heat prevented rescuers from approaching.

Flies Upside Down In Gale.

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y., April 20.—Flying upside down in a southwest gale, estimated to be blowing more than 35 miles an hour, Charles F. Niles, in a monoplane, thrilled spectators on the aviation field at Hempstead Plains Saturday.

After bucking the wind until he reached an altitude of about 2,000 feet, Niles, with his aeroplane twisting in the blast, succeeded in completing a circle. In his second attempt, when the circle was about half completed, Niles' machine slipped back and earthward for nearly 1,000 feet, when an unusually heavy gale struck it. A third attempt also failed, owing to the wind that made another loop the loop impossible.

Niles ended his day's thrills by flying upside down for nearly half a mile.

Risked Lives for Dog.

MONTREAL, April 20. — At the risk of their lives two boys, W. Holiday and W. Harris, rowed out in a light skiff among the floating ice on Friday and rescued a little dog. The animal had been stranded on a miniature iceberg on the St. Lawrence since Monday, and its cries finally touched the hearts of the boys. Several times their boat nearly overturned in the current, but they finally landed in the flaw and after a chase caught the dog, which died from exhaustion soon after they reached shore.

Killed By Fall From Horse.

CHATHAM, April 20.—Hugh Hyslop, 18 years of age, a member of the fire department, was fatally injured yesterday afternoon by falling from a horse. He suffered a fracture at the base of the skull and his neck was also dislocated. He died last night.

The horse he was riding was unused to the saddle and became unmanageable and ran away. Hyslop tried to steer the horse around a corner, but the animal slipped on the pavement and fell. Hyslop fell under the horse.

The accident occurred directly in front of the First Presbyterian Church while the children were assembling for Sunday school.

NAVAL LEADERS CONFER.

Admiral Fletcher Visits Admiral Cradock on Cruiser Essex.

VERA CRUZ, April 20.—Sir Christopher Cradock, the British rear admiral, and Rear Admiral Frank Fletcherd in command of the United States fleet here, had a long conference on board the British cruiser Essex yesterday afternoon. The Essex returned from Tampico yesterday.

Both admirals naturally refused to divulge the nature of their conference. It was learned, however, that

MATTERS OF HONOR.

Anglo-American Pact Would Provide a Commission.

WASHINGTON, April 20. — Sir Cecil Spring-Rice and Secretary Bryan yesterday discussed the outline of the peace commission treaty to bind the United States and Great Britain to submit to a commission for examination any issues between the two countries which may not yield to diplomatic adjustment. The ambassador visited the Department twice, and on his last call was able to lay before the Secretary of State a tentative draft of the convention as prepared in the British Foreign Office.

Secretary Bryan expressed satisfaction with the British suggestion to adopt as a basis for the British-American treaty the convention already concluded between the United States and the Netherlands. It will take a little time to perfect the new convention, because of its application to Britain's five great colonies, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Newfoundland, each of which has to be consulted.

Major-General Will Command Operations on the Border.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—By the direction of the Secretary of War Major General Leonard Wood, Chief of the General Staff of the United States army and the first colonel of Roosevelt's Rough Riders in the Spanish-American war, is holding himself in readiness to proceed to Texas City, Texas.

It is the intention of Secretary Garrison to have Gen. Wood assume command of operations of all the regular troops in Texas, or those that may be used for hostile operations against Mexico. His term of service as chief of staff will expire on Wednesday, and he had been chosen to command the Department of the East, with headquarters at Governor's Island, New York harbor.

Fears For Forty Men's Safety.

VALDEZ, Alaska, April 20.—Grave fear is expressed here for the safety of the tug Lateesh, which, with the barge America in tow, is seven days overdue from Seattle. The tug and her tow were last sighted April 10, off Cape St. Elias, and it is feared the craft was caught in the recent heavy seas off the Copper River delta. Besides the crew on the tug, there were 40 carpenters aboard the barge, which carried 2,600 tons of mining machinery and supplies.

ON VERGE OF WAR

Huerta Flatly Refuses Demand of President Wilson

HIS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, April 20. — Gen. Victoriano Huerta, Provisional President of Mexico, flatly refused last night to accede to the unconditional demands of the United States that he salute the American flag, and Congress will be asked by President Wilson to-day for authority to use armed forces to uphold the honor and dignity of the nation.

Negotiations with Huerta over the demand for a salute in reparation for the arrest of American bluejackets at Tampico on April 10 came to a close last night at six o'clock, the last hour given by President Wilson for a favorable response from the Mexican dictator. The final word of Huerta to Charge O'Shaughnessy was a refusal to comply unless the United States would guarantee in writing that his salute be returned.

President Wilson at midnight was on his way to Washington from White Sulphur Springs, preparing to read a message to Congress in joint session as early as it can be arranged to-day. In the meantime American war fleets were moving down both coasts on their way to Mexican waters to carry out the President's plan for reprisals.

The crisis thus reached does not mean that there will be a formal declaration of war, because the United States Government would not declare war against a Government which it does not recognize. President Wilson will seek authority, however, to send armed forces into Mexico to seize first the ports of Tampico and Vera Cruz and the railroad trestle leading to Mexico City.

Secretary Tumulty announced just before 11 o'clock last night that President Wilson had instructed him over the long-distance telephone to call a special meeting of the Cabinet for 10.30 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Tumulty also announced that the President was preparing to deliver a special message to Congress to-day, and that a joint session would be held at the earliest hour the Congressional leaders could arrange for it, probably three o'clock.

"The matter is closed," said Mr. Tumulty. Huerta, he added, had asked for no continuation of the negotiations, and refused flatly to accede to what he called the demand for an "unconditional" salute.

Incompatible With Dignity.

MEXICO CITY, April 20. — The Mexican Foreign Minister, Senor Portillo y Rojas, announced last night that it would be impossible to agree to the demand of the United States that the flag of that country be unconditionally saluted, because that flag was not insulted, because it was not dying from the launch, and because the marines were set free before an investigation, and the officer responsible for the arrests were himself arrested and held for trial.

The United States Government, Senor Portillo declared, had refused permission to Charge O'Shaughnessy to sign such a protocol, and demanded an unconditional salute from Mexico, which Mexico felt was incompatible with her dignity.

In conclusion, the Foreign Minister said: "Mexico has yielded as much as her dignity will permit. Mexico trusts to the fair-mindedness and spirit of justice of the American people."

Will They Join Forces?

CHIHUAHUA, April 20.—An important meeting will take place in the Palace here to-day. Gen. Pancho Villa is coming from Torreon, and Don Miguel Acuna, said to be an official representative of President Huerta, has left Juares for a conference with Carranza and Villa about aiding the dictator in the event of the United States assuming a belligerent attitude toward the republic. Villa left Torreon at 12.30 on a special train and was expected to arrive here some time last evening. Acuna is said to have come from Mexico City to confer with Carranza, having been sent to feel out Carranza as to the attitude of the Constitutionalists as soon as the Tampico incident occurred.

Jobless May Make Trouble.

MONTREAL, April 20.—As the result of an open invitation issued by Mayor Martin, it is expected that the City Hall will be besieged in the morning by several thousand out-of-works looking for civic laboring jobs worth $2.25 a day. Only about 500 men may be taken on at the start, though if trouble develops among the disappointed work-seekers this number may have to be increased.

Murdered Two, Killed Self.

MONCTON, N.B., April 20. — The two little children of Neil Mallin were killed with an axe in their home, nine miles from Newcastle Saturday. It was learned yesterday. Park Sobey, who is alleged to have committed the murders and to have made an unsuccessful attack upon the father of the children, was found yesterday in his backwoods camp. The authorities believe he killed himself.

NORTH BAY, April 20. — Jose Jonstrum was almost instantly killed Saturday morning at English River on the National Transcontinental Railway west of Cochrane, by being struck on the head by a falling timber. He was foreman of the bridge crew engaged in tearing down a temporary trestle.

REMEMBERED DISRAELI.

Englishmen of All Political Faiths Wore Primroses.

LONDON, April 20. — Primroses were worn in nearly every British buttonhole Saturday in honor of Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield, England's famous statesman, who died 32 years ago yesterday.

Originally a Conservative political festival, Primrose Day is now celebrated by Englishmen of every shade of political opinion, and as this year the anniversary fell on a Sunday, the various demonstrations and banquets organized by the Primrose League were held Saturday. The Beaconsfield statue in Parliament square was garlanded and festooned with the pale yellow flower which was always the great statesman's favorite.

KING EDWARD'S DOG DEAD.

Caesar, the Celebrated Terrier, Is Put Out of His Pain.

LONDON, April 20.—Caesar, the wirehaired fox terrier which was the favorite dog of King Edward, died on Saturday.

Caesar used to accompany the King to different parts of the country and attended his royal master's funeral.

The dog became ill some time ago, and in spite of careful veterinary treatment showed no improvement. It became clear Saturday that there was absolutely no hope of recovery, and rather than allow the dog to continue to suffer he was painlessly put to death by the direction of Queen Alexandra.

ABOUT STORING EGGS

Eggs to be stored should be, first, from hens that have no males running with them, because an infertile egg keeps longer, even without the use of a preservative, than a fertile egg; second, perfectly fresh, for not only will they keep much better, but if an egg which has begun to decay is placed in the same vessel with fresh ones it is likely to affect all the surrounding eggs; and, third, perfectly clean, for filth of any kind adhering to the shell will taint the preserving medium and thus taint the other eggs.

In placing eggs in the preservative be careful not to crack the shells. Keep them in a moderately cool room where the temperature may be kept fairly constant. A dry, clean cellar is a suitable place.

THE WATER-GLASS METHOD

Of the many methods which have been tried for preserving eggs on a small scale none has proved more successful than the use of water-glass (sodium silicate). This is a very cheap product that can usually be procured at not to exceed 50 cents a gallon, and one gallon will make enough solution to preserve 50 dozen eggs, so that the cost of the material would not exceed one cent a dozen. Pure water that has been boiled and then cooled should be used. To each 15 to 20 quarts of water one quart of water-glass should be added. The solution should be prepared, placed in the jar or other suitable vessel, and the fresh eggs added from time to time until the jar is filled, but be sure that there is two inches of the solution covering the eggs. The eggs should not be washed before packing, for washing injures the keeping quality, probably by dissolving the mucilaginous coating.

THE LIME-WATER WAY

A good lime-water preservative may be made as follows: 20 gallons of water, 20 pounds of salt, one-half bushel of finely slaked lime. After mixing thoroughly allow the solution to stand two or three days and then remove the clear liquid by dipping or by means of a siphon. Place the liquid in a tub or other suitable receptacle and place the eggs therein, or the eggs may be placed in the vessel first and the lime-water poured over them. Have about two inches above the eggs. Limed eggs can be discerned by the roughness of the shell.

Before boiling eggs that have been preserved in the foregoing ways, the shell should be punctured with a needle, otherwise it is apt to crack as soon as placed in hot water, owing to the pores being closed.

Eggs can be preserved for several months in dry salt. Have at least two inches above the upper layer of eggs. Packing in bran has also been found satisfactory in many cases.

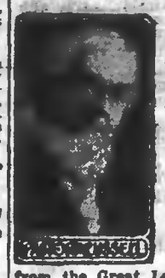
PROVIDENCE GREETS CREATION DRAMA

Running in Many Cities; 40,000 Attend.

CHURCH IS "A ROYAL DIADEM"

Pastor Russell Personally Conducted Opening Exhibitions—In Discourse He Outlined Divine Purpose In Calling the Church—"A Peculiar People"—"Not Many Rich"—"Not Many Learned"—"Not Many Noble"—Chiefly "the Poor of This World"—"Rich In Faith"—Heart Condition the Basis of Selection—Cutting, Polishing and Mounting the Jewels—God's Workmanship to Be Manifested—Lessons to Angels—Lessons to Mankind.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]



Providence, R. I., April 19.—Pastor Russell personally conducted the opening exhibitions of his now famous Photo-Drama of Creation at the Colonial Theatre here to-day.

It was given out that there is a chain of these Dramas now extending from coast to coast and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf. To-day's attendance was estimated at 40,000.

Pastor Russell's discourse was based on the text: "Thou shalt also be a crown of glory in the hand of the Lord, and a royal diadem in the hand of thy God." (Isaiah 62:3.) He said:

God has provided a salvation for the world in the next Age. But the call of this Gospel Age is something unique—separate and apart from the salvation of mankind. During this Age God has been gathering out of the world some of those who have a hearing of faith and a response of heart. These He calls His peculiar treasure, His jewels. In our text He declares that this class shall be a royal diadem in the hand of their God—not on His head, as if an added glory, but in His hand, representative of power. In His Power Jehovah will show forth the Church; and by thus manifesting what He has been able to do with the Church, He will show forth His own praises, in that He will reveal features of His glorious character which have never before been exhibited. What a blessed thing this will be for those who shall be the jewels and who will reflect the glory of the Infinite One who designed this diadem!

The permission of sin has given opportunity for God to develop His great Plan for the eradication of evil. He could easily have prevented Satan from bringing sin into the Universe. He did not, however, exercise His Power to restrain Satan; for He foresaw the glorious results which He will eventually accomplish through the permission of evil. For the same reason He did not interfere when Satan tempted our first parents, but permitted the whole race of mankind to be born into the world in an imperfect and sinful condition. He could have arranged otherwise, but He foresaw that He could work out still more glorious purposes by letting matters take their own course for a time.

The Bible declares that all transgression of the Divine Law is sin, and that all sin is punishable with the same penalty—death. Thus Adam's disobedience in eating the forbidden fruit brought upon him the curse of death, which by the laws of heredity he has transmitted to his posterity—the human race. (Romans 5:12, 19.) Although men may multiply the transgressions, they cannot increase the penalty; for the Divine Law has only one penalty for all—death.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

Thought She Would Go Mad WITH HEADACHE.

In all cases of headache the treatment should be directed to remove the cause, for with the cause removed the headache vanishes for all time. Headache powders just relieve for the time being, but what is necessary for a permanent cure is something that will go right to the seat of the trouble. For this purpose it is impossible to find a better remedy for headaches of all descriptions than Burdock Blood Bitters, acting as it does on every organ of the body to strengthen, purify and regulate the whole system.

Mrs. Althea Bowman, Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I have suffered terribly with my head for weeks at a time till I thought I would go mad. A friend advised me to give Burdock Blood Bitters a trial, so I got a bottle and found relief. I have used four bottles in all and I am glad to say that I have had no more headaches since. I would advise all sufferers to give it a fair trial."

Divine mercy arranged for human redemption by providing that Jesus should pay the penalty for Adam's sin. This He did when He offered Himself and died, "the Just for the unjust." The unforfeited life of Jesus, as a corresponding price for the forfeited life of Adam, guaranteed the cancellation of Adam's penalty. Adam's deliverance will mean the deliverance of all humanity, the removal of the sentence for Original Sin from every member of Adam's race. Then the Messianic Kingdom will be inaugurated for the very purpose of helping mankind out of the sin and death conditions resulting from the fall of our first parents.

God could have associated with our Redeemer some of the angelic host to assist in blessing humanity during the thousand years of the Messianic Kingdom; but He purposed to select from amongst mankind some to be sharers with His Son in the great work of uplifting the world from sin, degradation and death. For this reason a call went forth for a Church class—for those who would separate themselves from the world, take up their cross and follow Jesus. This class is to be a peculiar treasure; they are a people that will be privileged to show forth the praises of Him who hath called them out of darkness into His marvelous light.—1 Peter 2:9.

For nearly nineteen centuries God has been gathering this people from various nations, kindreds and tongues. "The Lord knoweth them that are His"; and He is giving needed assistance to each one who is sincere in heart and earnestly seeking to know God. These, the Apostle declares, are "a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Their good works are not the building of hospitals, asylums, schools and colleges, although they rejoice that the world has the inclination to do these things. The Church engages in the same kind of good works that our Lord engaged in at His First Advent. The Scriptures assert that He "went about doing good." In line with this statement is the Apostle's injunction that the Church "do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the Household of Faith."—Galatians 6:10.

The Household of Faith includes all who are trusting in the precious blood of Christ for their redemption. These the Church will serve on every occasion. The greatest possible good that can be done will be that of serving them with the Truth. The Glad Tidings of great joy which shall be to all people is the very best Message that can be brought to any one—not only speaking peace through the blood of Jesus, but also inspiring the glorious hope of jointheirship with Christ in the Messianic Kingdom. The Bible tells us that the time is coming when all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped. That time is during the next Age. Meantime, God is doing a wonderful work. He is gathering here an... there the saintly ones—those who have an ear to hear His call. Of this class our Lord said, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear."

In gathering this special class, God is looking, not at the outward appearance, but at the heart. He desires those whose hearts are right. This does not mean, as once we thought, that all whom God does not select, or elect, are to be thrown to devils and roasted to all eternity. What a change comes over everything when we realize that God is not premeditating evil against even those who may be His enemies through wicked works, but is merely calling out a class now which He will use later to assist the Redeemer in blessing all the families of the earth!—Gala. xxx 3:16, 29.

The Scriptures declare that in choosing this special class, the Church, God is calling "not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble," but "the poor of this world, rich in faith"—those whom the world would consider the mean things, the weak, the ignoble. The Bible tells us that the rich have plenty to satisfy their hearts and therefore do not feel their need.

It is the same with the intellectual. They rather look down upon the average human being, and say that poor people do not know any better than to believe the story of the fall of man and all the rest of the Bible stories. Thus in what they think is wisdom they ignore the Word of God, in which His whole Plan for man's recovery from degradation, sin and death is shown as connected with the story of Adam and Eve, their fall and the redemption effected by the death of Jesus on Calvary. Whoever leaves out this part of the Bible loses the connecting link, and cannot perceive the Plan of God for man's salvation. Therefore the wise, according to the course of this world cannot understand the Divine Program.

"The Bible says that not many noble are called. One may be poor and uneducated, and yet have a very noble mind. This class know that they are morally above the average. Therefore they often have a self-satisfied feeling which does not permit them to recognize that they are sinners. And so they are not ready to see that they and all other human beings need a Saviour.

"Those whom God has accepted and forgiven through the blood of His Son, our Redeemer, are not looking under the former sentence of sin. These still have weaknesses of the flesh and are striving against them, although they may never be as successful as some other persons who were better born. But the Heavenly Father knows to what extent each is striving against sin, seeking to put down the old nature. Others may misjudge us; but He knows us.

Of this class the Apostle Paul says, "It is God that worketh in you both to will and to do His good pleasure." He has given us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these working in us, showing us the course to take and the result of faithfulness, we may gradually attain the Divine nature. This is the consummation, and comes to us by Divine Power—"changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." Whether we shall be granted that glorious change depends upon the zeal with which we love righteousness, and hate iniquity, and seek to do the will of God.

No matter how mean this class may have been according to nature, the transforming work of the Holy Spirit goes on in their hearts; and they become noble characters. Although they may never be able to control their flesh so that they will seem as noble as some of the world, yet the nobility of heart is what God is looking for. If in the heart He sees true nobility—loyalty to Him, to righteousness, to truth, to the brethren—then they have the evidence that they are His, and that His providences are working together for their good.

In some respects the Lord's work in this class resembles that of a lapidary. The lapidary will not pick up cobble stones or ordinary pieces of quartz and put them on the wheel for polishing, although these stones lie about everywhere. But a real jewel he puts on the wheel. So it is with the Lord's jewels. If you as His child find that the cutting process goes on in your life, it is because the Lord loves you; and all the trials and difficulties that He sees best to bring upon you are purposed to prepare you to be a jewel for mounting in His glorious diadem.

When God accepts any one and begets him with the Holy Spirit, that one is a jewel in the rough, and needs cutting and polishing. Each needs the skill of the great Master Workman in order to be properly shaped and prepared to shew forth the glory of God. Just as a diamond properly cut will radiate the glories of the sunlight, so God's jewels will show forth His praises. After each is cut and polished he is laid aside until the great Lapidary is ready to mount the jewels. This is the First Resurrection. Then all these jewels will be mounted in fine gold—symbolic of the Divine nature—and placed in the glorious diadem which is to be in the hand of our God.

Since the experiences through which the Church has been passing throughout the Gospel Age are all working out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, let us take them thankfully, joyfully, gladly, realizing that our Heavenly Father knows better than we do what we need; and that He has promised that His grace will be sufficient, that He will not permit us to be tempted above what we are able to bear, but will with the temptation provide a way of escape.

This is the message that we would leave with you to-day—that the Church is in the Lord's hands, and that He is preparing each individual member to be a jewel in His royal Diadem. When this piece of workmanship is finished, He will show it to the angels as the basis of one of the greatest lessons they have ever had. The angels who remained loyal to God have never known sin in the sense of experiencing it personally. They have always been holy, happy, obedient to Him. They have seen how the redemption of mankind manifests God's Love; and His willingness to exalt those of mankind who are obedient to Him now will be a further lesson to them.

In that Day, when they shall see how the Lord's blessing has eventually brought the Church to glory, the angels of God will all rejoice, even though the Church will be on a still higher plane than they—far above angels, principalities and powers, and Joint-heir with her Lord. The angels are in full harmony with God, and therefore will be ready to sing praises, as the Scriptures set forth, saying, "At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, of things in Heaven and things in earth." When the Bride shall be glorified with her Bridegroom, all the angelic hosts will bow the knee; for the Church will be on the highest plane of existence, associated with her Lord. Whoever of the angelic hosts are loyal to the Father and to the Son will also be loyal to the Bride, the Lamb's Wife, in that glorious Kingdom.

The Psalmist foretells that "of Zion it shall be said, This and that man was born in her; and the Highest Himself shall establish her." (Psalm 87:5.) Zion represents the Kingdom in glory. The Church in her glorified condition will be Zion, and every faithful saint of God will be born in her. According to the flesh, the Lord's people were begotten and born; according to the Spirit they have been begotten again. But until they experience their change from earthly to Heavenly nature they are not born again. This second birth, the spirit birth, is the First Resurrection. We have the begetting of the Spirit now, but the process is not yet completed; when it is, we shall be born again. Then the record will be made that this one and that one was born in her, born in Zion.

In due time the world will get the record. Then they will get the explanation of what they cannot now understand. They will perceive that the Church class were dumbbinded like the rest of mankind, but that they had their eyes opened

RAILWAY DOLLAR SHRINKS.

Why It Buys Less Than in Lamented "Good Old Days."

Further testimony of the rise in the cost of conducting railroad operations, if any were needed, is supplied by the Lehigh Valley, which has compiled some interesting figures to show how equipment and repair bills of to-day compare with those of a few years back.

In these compilations, no attempt is made to arrive at the unit cost which in some cases has undoubtedly gone down, as, for instance, while a creosoted tie costs more than the untreated tie, the added expense is cheerfully assumed for the longer life obtained. The higher cost of a locomotive and its necessary repairs figures out ultimately as a saving through reducing the unit cost of power. At the same time the cost of standard articles has generally advanced in late years.

Going back fifteen years, it was found that the maintenance-of-way expense per mile of track was $745 in 1898. Last year it was $1,524—more than twice as much. This is principally due to more expensive and heavier rails, ties that have almost doubled in price, heavier ballasting, and the increased cost of labor. The necessity for a heavier track to carry heavier equipment has, of course, had something to do with it, and then, again, creosoting ties has also doubled their cost, making the cost of ties to-day four times what it was fifteen years ago. Per mile of road the same proportion holds, the expense having jumped in fifteen years from $1,474 a year to $2,924.

A wooden passenger coach used to cost $8,000. The new steel coaches cost $12,000. Meanwhile, however, there is the assurance that they are safer. A standard freight locomotive costs $25,000, where it cost only $15,000 in 1898. Repairs have jumped in proportion per locomotive from $1,508 a year to $2,692. This is largely offset by the increased tractive power of the standard locomotive.

Where the high cost of railroading is most apparent is in general repairs and renewals. On a passenger car this item has increased from $510 to $824. On a freight car it is now $70 where it was $31 fifteen years ago.

For locomotives there is a difference in the cost of upkeep between 10 cents and 4 cents per mile.

In these items labour, of course, is counted in. This figures for all railroads as a 10 per cent. increase. In the operation of trains it is much more than 10 per cent., however, as the engineers, conductors, and trainmen have had the biggest increases in pay, and the full train crew bills in passenger runs have increased the pay roll by 40.2 per cent.

The comforting part of the comparison is that these extra expenses have been largely met by efficiency and better methods of railroading. As fast as they can, they are replacing wooden cars with steel cars, costing half as much again; their roadbeds are far ahead of what they were fifteen years ago, and the freight service to-day is far ahead of that of a few years back.

Everybody Has Two Brains Centres of Nervous Energy

Enormous Amount of Blood Consumed in Supplying Nerve Force to Mind and Body

Everybody has two brains, one to think with and the other to control the workings of the heart, lungs, stomach and other vital organs. This mechanical brain is situated low down in the back of the head and is the great centre of the nervous system which, through its ramification of branches, reaches every part of the human body.

Any lack of nervous energy is soon apparent in disorders of the bodily organs. Weakness of the nerves which control the digestive fluids means indigestion and similarly other derangements arise.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has fully established its reputation as a means of restoring vitality to the nervous system and thoroughly curing such ailments as sleeplessness, irritability, nervous headache and indigestion, partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia.

Mrs. Wm. Hay, Spy Hill, Sask., writes: "I am glad of an opportunity of recommending Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, for it restored my nervous system when I was badly run down. So greatly did this wonderful tonic benefit me that I have recommended it to friends and know they have obtained good results from the use of the Nerve Food many times. In my opinion there is nothing like it for building up a run-down system."

It is said that one-fifth of the blood in the human body is consumed by the brain in the manufacture of nervous energy. Because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food supplies the ingredients from which rich, red blood is formed, it is the greatest of nerve restoratives.

The Principal Essentials to Successful Dairying are Embodied Here

Good barns, a silo, a litter carrier and a first-class working herd are some of the features of the farm of Mr. C. W. Weaver, Souris, Man., here illustrated, that are worthy of emulation. A farm dairy scene containing so many desirable features is not a common one in Manitoba, and not as common as it might well be anywhere.

DR. CARREL'S HEART SURGERY

All surgery rests on the principle that the organs and members that make up the living body possess "factors of safety." Everybody knows that men may live minus arms and legs, eyes, ears, and noses, and that the functions of these may survive even when parts haev been cut away. A great portion of the public has been informed that most of the tissue in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, the spleen, and parts of the brain may be dispensed with by the living individual. But few know that the heart, which is generally regarded as a delicate organ, is really the toughest of all; that it will endure many and frequent strains without impairment, will often mend itself when injured, and will keep up its ceaseless activity even when some of its machinery has permanently got out of kilter. It may safely be postulated that when a man drops dead of heart disease it is not without previous warning, usually repeated over a series of years, that he must slacken his pace.

And now the experiments of Dr. Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute, may shut off the circulation long enough to enter the heart with their instruments and perform complex operations of repair.

The sigmoid valves, Dr. Carrel reports, have been exposed and cauterised. The pulmonary orifice has been cut and the wall patched with a piece of heart tissue from another animal kept in cold storage. Operations have been made practicable in the cases of inflammation, contraction, and dilatation of the cardiac openings.

Prof. Proust of Paris has sutured a boy's heart that had been pierced with a pistol ball, and the lad is living in good health. Gradually, as the "factors of safety" in heart surgery are being perfected in operations on animals, the new methods are applied to human patients. The time is not far distant, perhaps, when the lives of anti-vivisectionists afflicted with heart disease will be saved by the surgeons they are now attacking.

IN DREAD OF CROUP

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses, at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

To prevent death by poison tablets taken in mistake an inventor has brought out tablets coated with rubber, which is said to resist the stomach acids long enough for a tablet to pass out of the system.

According to a conservative estimate, in an ocean steamer of 100 feet beam, 950 feet in length, and 60,000 horse-power, no less than 20 per cent. of the horse-power, or about 12,000, would be consumer in overcoming head-wind resistance when the ship was steaming at 15 knots against a 65-mile gale.

Scientific exploration and excavation have brought to light the fact That the elephant, which had its greatest development in America as the mastodon and mammoth, originated on the site of the present Sahara Desert, says Warren H. Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborne, of the American Museum of Natural History, has made a careful study of the ancestry of this species, but up to a few years ago he, like the other geologists of the world, was at sea as to whence it came.

Them Went Into Mourning.

"Fifty dollars!" cried Batkins, after the judge had named the fine. "Why, judge, that's an outrage. I admit I was going too fast, but fifty dollars—"

"Them's the figgers," said the judge, coldly.

"All right, I'll pay," said Batkins, "but I'll tell you right now I'll never come into this town again."

"That so?" said the judge. "Wa-al, I'm sorry. You've been a mighty good customer, Bill," he added, turning to the sheriff, "hang crape on the courthouse, will ye? This here gentleman's about to pass on forever."

Down and Out.

"Did you ever feel that the world was against you?"

"Sure. I felt it this morning when I slipped on the sidewalk."

Two Viewpoints.

Modest Suitor: "I am going to marry your sister, Willie, but I know I am not good enough for her."

Candid Little Brother: "That's what sis says, but ma's been telling her she can't do any better."

What the Parrot Said.

Just outside of the city of E——, England, there was a landlord of a country inn that owned a parrot.

Now it was the custom then to have a free lunch on the counter, and, as many of the boys had walked quite a distance to get their glass of ale on a Sunday morning they were not any too sparing on the sandwiches.

At last the innkeeper hit upon a scheme whereupon he could curb the appetite of his customers so he taught the parrot to say: "One at a time, gentlemen, please, one at a time." He then hung the bird up over the counter.

As everyone knows sunshine is good for us all so it was for the parrot. Her master made a practice of giving her a little liberty in the yard on a good day, and one day on going outside to bring the bird in found her engaged in battling about a dozen sparrows. Everything went along smoothly and to the parrot's satisfaction for a while till reinforcements became unbearable, but the grand finale came when the good old bird, with a swipe of her foot to a sparrow's head said: "One at a time, gentlemen, please, one at a time."

Anticipated.

He was full of zeal for the temperance cause, and was holding a series of lectures in a workman's hall. But the audience was very unkind, and kept interrupting. So much so that at last he hired an ex-prize fighter to keep order. That night the orator contrasted the contents of home life with the squalor of drunkenness.

"What is it we want when we return home from our daily toil?" he asked.

"What do we want to ease our burden, to gladden our hearts, to bring smiles to our faces and joyous songs to our lips?"

He paused for effect, and in the silence could be heard the voice of the keeper of the peace.

"Mind," he said, "the first bloke that says 'beer,' out he goes with a bang."

He Got Them.

"I want damages," shouted the bruised and battered citizens who had just been beaten up by his athletic rival.

"I think," replied his friend and adviser, after a critical inspection, "that if you look in the glass you'll find you've got 'em."

Something Different.

"Oh, Willie, Willie!" exclaimed his mother, shocked and grieved. "How often have I told you not to play with that naughty Johnson boy?"

"Mamma," said William, who appeared in a regrettable state of disorder and with a bruised face, in utter disgust, "do I look as if I had been playing with anybody?"

The man with the unkempt hair and the roll of manuscript entered the music publisher's office with an air of assurance.

"I have here," he said, "a popular waltz song that ought to catch on quickly this summer."

"That so?" wearily replied the music publisher. "I really haven't time to have it played over. A brief description of your song will indicate its merits."

"Well, it has an original theme and"——

"Oh," said the publisher, "that is a fault easily remedied. But about the rhymes in it. Do you 'sue' and 'blue' and 'you' rhyme in the chorus, and does it contain such phrases as 'I love you so,' and 'won't say no,' eh?"

"Why, no. I have tried to steer clear of all such hackneyed expressions"——

"Do you mean to tell me that you have no line about 'the moon is shinin'' and an answering echo 'my heart is pinin''? Doesn't 'eyes' connect with 'prize,' and 'skies above' furnish an excuse for dragging in 'love'? Your song contains none of those things?"

"Why, no; this popular waltz song is original"——

"Original!" roared the music publisher. "Do you want to ruin me? I daren't publish such a crazy song! Get outside!"

Sir Homewood Crawford, the city solicitor, relating reminiscences of his experiences at the London institution the other night, told a story of King Edward.

As Prince of Wales, the late King attended the Guildhall, to preside over the centenary banquet of the Iron and Metal Ware Institution. The lord mayor, Sir John Knill, was also an invited guest. As the Prince and the lord mayor reached the top table, his Royal Highness made way and said:

"My lord mayor, there is your seat."

The lord mayor replied, "No, your Royal Highness."

The Prince then said, "Excuse me, you are king of the city, and that is your rightful place."

His lordship's reply to this was, "Well, your Highness, if I am king of the city, then I command you, sir, to take the chair."

"Blanche, dear," said the watchful aunt to her niece, "don't you think Fred spends too much money upon you?"

"Do you think so, aunty?"

"Indeed, I do, Blanche. I've been noticing, and I think he's really extravagant. You ought to check him and tell him to save his money. You will need a good deal when you begin housekeeping, and it is far better for him to put in the bank the money he is now spending on motor trips and luncheons, and tickets to this thing and that, than to be squandering it. Think over the matter, a minute or two, dear, and you will see it as I do."

"Oh, I've thought about it already, dear aunty. I'd take your advice if I were absolutely certain that we shall be married, but I've been engaged before, aunty, and I don't intend to advise a young man to economize for some other girl's benefit."

"Oo!" sobbed Mrs. Smith. "Oo, I've bin deceived somethink cruel, that I 'ave!"

"Now, don't take on so," ventured her friend, soothingly. "What's the matter? Poor dear, you're upset by the 'orrible haccident which your 'usband was run over in."

"It ain't that," snuffed Mrs. Smith, with a gulp. "'E ain't 'urt overmuch, and they're letting 'im out of 'orspital today. I've bin deceived cruel, I 'ave, and me 'eart's broke.

"Why, you know, when I married Smith I was that proud of 'im! A sweep 'e was, and doing well in 'is trade, and always busy. And then there was this 'ere haccident, and when they took 'im to the 'orspital and give 'im a bath and shaver!" Mrs. Smith broke down and sobbed, "I blowed if the man 'adn't 'is 'air cut to be curling after all!"

The [illegible] who inherits a vast fortune from relatives in Europe will at last have something interesting to talk about.

Distance Gone.

"A couple," said Mrs. Simpkins, "got married a few days ago, after a courtship which had lasted fifty years."

"I suppose," replied Mr. Simpkins, "the poor old man had become too feeble to hold out any longer."

Effective.

"Doctor," said he, "I'm a victim of insomnia. I can't sleep if there's the least noise, such as a cat on the back fence, for instance."

"This powder will be effective," replied the physician, after compounding a prescription.

"When do I take it, doctor?'

"You don't take it. You give it to the cat in a little milk"

Making His Mark.

"Professor, what has become of Tom Appleton? Wasn't he studying with the class last year?"

"Ah, yes! Appleton, poor fellow! A fine student, but absent minded in the use of chemicals — very. That discoloration on the ceiling — notice it?"

"Yes."

"That's him!"

"I'm not surprised. I always thought Tom would make his mark, if he got a chance."

The Waiter's Revenge.

Having proved unsatisfactory, the waiter was told that his services would not be required in the restaurant after Saturday night. When Saturday noon came he was in a reckless mood and ready to "come back" at the most valued guest in the house. Soon he had his opportunity.

"Waiter, confound it! This steak isn't tender enough," growled a fat patron.

"Not tender enough?" the waiter snarled. "What d'y 'xpect? Want it to jump up and kiss you?"

Wales' Luck.

Mr. Spencer Leigh Hughes, M. P., who was one of the guests at a recent Irish Club dinner, told an amusing experience.

He was once passing the new War Office building in Whitehall when his companion, a Scotsman, pointing to the emblematic devices engraved over the door, indicated the Scotch thistle, the English lion and the Irish harp.

"Where is the emblem of Wales?" asked his friend.

"Oh," Mr. Hughes replied, "I expect there is a leak in the roof."

A, e, i, o, u.

It happened at a school where the children were hopelessly involved in miscellaneous subjects, such as grammar, physiology, etc., etc.

Teacher: "What are the principal parts of the body?"

Sharp Pupil: "The body consists of three principal parts — the head, the chest, and the bowels, of which there are five—a, e, i, o, u, and sometimes w and y."

The Puzzled Patient.

"Um, yes! Ah! Um!" remarked the medico, in his best bedside manner, to his patient, as they stood in the consulting room. "I'll give you the following prescription." And he handed him the small packages.

The patient opened them and read the directions.

"A powder for my headache," he said aloud. "a pellet for my liver," he continued, "and a capsule for my grasty feet." Then he stopped, and pondered deeply for a moment. "I say, doctor," he queried, "how'll the little beggars know the right place to go when they get inside?"

Willie's Query.

Little Willie: "Pa, what's a redundancy of expressions?"

Pa: "Using more words than are necessary to express one's meaning, such as 'wealthy plumber,' 'poor poet,' etc."

Protection that Don't Protect.

Tommy was playing in the garden when he happened to notice that next door's blinds were drawn down.

"Mother," he asked, "why are those blinds drawn down?"

"Only to keep the sun out," said she.

Two days later his mother informed him that their neighbor had got a son. After thinking deeply for a few minutes, Tommy said:

"Seems to me, mother, it wasn't much good keeping the blinds down!"

Robinson Caruso.

"No man is as well known as he thinks he is," says Caruso. "I was motoring on Long Island recently. My car broke down, and while the chauffeur was repairing it I entered a farm house to get warm.

"The farmer and I chatted in the kitchen before the wood stove, and when he asked my name I told him modestly that it was Caruso.

At that name he threw up his hands.

"'Caruso!' he exclaimed. 'Robinson Caruso, the great traveler! Little did I expect ever to see a man like you in this here humble kitchen, sir!'"

Not a few wealthy Americans teach in the Sunday school, among them Mr. Wanamaker, who owns one of the biggest stores in America. One day, after Mr. Wanamaker had explained the lesson to the children, he said:

"And now, is there any question that any boy or girl would like to ask me?"

A girl of eight rose.

"Well, Martha, what is it?"

"Please, Mr. Wanamaker," said the little girl, "what is the price of those large wax dolls in your window?"

One Suggestion.

The [illegible] experienced newspaper deciding what to tax and what to leave untaxed recalls the story of an earlier chancellor of the exchequer, who was reduced to despair in similar circumstances.

Finally he decided to consult a friend who had on several occasions helped him to fresh sources of revenue, and wrote hopefully for his reply.

The friend's suggestion came by return mail:

"Put a tax on umbrellas," he wrote, "and make the bishops order the prayer for rain to be read in all the churches."

"What do you mean by coming in here with that tire all cut to ribbons?" shouted the enraged owner of the sixty horse-power racing car.

"I ran it over a milk bottle, sir," said the trembling chauffeur.

"A milk bottle, eh? Seems to me you could see a thing as big as that."

"The boy hid it under his coat, sir."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Respectfully Submitted.

An English youth who had just finished a very tedious journey in a very slow going train in South America said to one of the railway officials:

"Does this company allow passengers to give it advice if they do so in a respectful manner?"

The official replied in gruff tones that he thought it did.

"Well," the youth went on, "it occurred to me it would be well to detach the cow catcher from the front of the engine and fasten it to the rear of the train. For, you see, we are not likely to overtake a cow; but what's to prevent a cow strolling into the car and biting a passenger?"

Parliamentary Amenities.

Sir Henry Lucy tells how, after the home rule bill rupture, Sir William Harcourt and Sir Henry James still retained unbroken an intimate friendship.

One day, in conversation, Lord Morris remarked on the charm of this incident in the storm and stress of party warfare.

"Yes," said Harcourt, softly, with a wistful, faraway look in his eye, "we are, as you may say, brothers."

"So were Cain and Abel," said Lord Morris.

Quite Contrary.

Bings: "You say your wife is an anti-suffragist?"

Bangs: "Yes; she spends her time gadding around the country asserting that woman's place is the home."

What Would Happen?

"Had I the wings of a bird—" began the poet.

"You'd suffer," interrupted the prosaic person. "Your wife would take them away from you to trim a hat."

How Rude!

"That building at the last place reminded me of a straphanger," said Weary Willie.

"Elucidate," said Dusty Rhodes.

"As soon as I got up he took my seat."

"India, my boy," said an Irishman to a friend on his arrival at Calcutta, "is just the finest climate under the sun, but a lot of young fellows come out here, and they shrink and they eat, and they shrink and they die, and then they write home to their friends a pack o' lies, and say it's the climate as has killed them."

The wife of a wealthy manufacturer had occasion to call in the help of a new floor-polisher.

"Do you understand your business thoroly?"

"All that I ask, madam, is that you shall inquire for yourself at my last situation. On the floor of the large drawing-room alone five persons broke their limbs during last winter, and a lady slipped down the grand staircase. It was I who polished the floor and the stairs."

"You refuse me?" said the ardent youth.

"I do, indeed," replied the beautiful girl.

"Ah, then I shall go off to the war in Mexico. Suppose I return minus an arm, minus an ear, and minus a chin? Suppose I return a mere remnant of a man, what would you say?"

The beautiful girl brightened up. "I should accept you on the spot. I always had an irresistible fascination for remnants."

Famous Tenor (who has been invited to dinner): "I should be only too pleased to do as you ask and sing a little song, but I am quite hoarse tonight."

Hostess: "Oh, what a pity! Can't you do anything else?"—Fliegende Blatter.

THE BRUTE AGAIN.

Weary Hostess—"Yes, I've been having such trouble with baby. Every night I have to get up about twenty times, getting his things—"

Visitor—"Why don't you make your husband do something?"

Hostess—"Oh, I daren't wake my husband; if I do he always drinks baby's milk."

In the house of commons the other day a capital story was told by the Marquis of Tullibardine. An old lady in the Highlands engaged the young son of a crofter to act as page, and fitted him out with a livery which was to be worn only on special occasions. On the day of a dinner party a shock-head was thrust into the dining-room and a voice inquired:

"Please, ma'am, am I to put on my ain breeks or yours?"

A tourist called at an inn in Senegal and ordered a roll and butter and some tea. It was brought, and on cutting the roll he found a blackbeetle in the middle.

"Here!" he called to the waiter, "take this and show it to the proprietor."

"I wouldn't be either showing it to the proprietor if I wor you, sor," said Pat.

"Why not?" inquired the tourist.

"Terrible mane man, the proprietor is, sor. Shure, he'll be either chargin' ye for a mate tay."

MacBull—"I shall be a gay grass widower for the next two months—wife's gone for a holiday to the West Indies."

O'Bear—"Jamaica?"

MacBull—"No, it was her own idea."

"How did you propose to support my daughter, sir?"

"I didn't propose to her to support her at all. I only proposed to her to marry me."—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Judge: "Describe what passed between you in the quarrel with your wife."

Man on Stand: "The [illegible] was regular dinner size, your honor, and the teapot had a broken spout."—Boston Transcript.

Business Competition.

An enterprising young florist, in order to increase his trade, displayed this sign in his window:

"We give a package of flower seeds with every plant."

His competitor across the street promptly sought to meet the competition by placing in his window the following announcement:

"We give the earth with every plant."

Debtor: "I want to pay that little bill of yours."

Creditor: "Very well, sir."

Debtor: "But I can't!"—Life

A small boy who was sitting next to a very haughty lady in a crowded omnibus kept on sniffing in a most annoying manner. At last the lady could bear it no longer, and turned to the lad.

"Boy, have you got a handkerchief?" she demanded.

The small boy looked at her for a few seconds and then, in a dignified tone, came the answer:

"Yes, I 'ave, but I don't lend it to strangers."—Argonaut.

"I kept my head when I fell into the water," observed the young man.

"How fortunate!" replied the caustic maid. "It must have helped you so nicely to float!"—Judge.

Crawford: "What's the matter with that fellow who is holding onto the lamp-post and shuffling his feet?"

Crabshaw: "There was a time when I'd have said he was drunk; but now, perhaps, he's practising a new dance."—Puck.

Motorist (on country road): "I'll give you five pounds for that picture if you don't put another stroke to it."

Artist: "I am really very flattered by your offer; but it is not quite finished."

Motorist: "Oh! that doesn't matter; I just want the canvas to mend a busted tire with."—Chicago Times.

Ohio Government.

"In choosing a wife," says a phrenological journal, "be governed by her chin." The worst of it is that having chosen a wife one is apt to keep on being governed in the same way.

Of Course.

"How did you fare with that manuscript?"

"Got trimmed."

Only a Hat.

"Been to the theatre this week?"

"Yes."

"What did you see?"

"A lovely velvet bow, some tortoise shell combs, a couple of plumes, a ribbon knot and a stuffed bird about the size of a hen!"

His Finish.

"Your son was quite an athlete, wasn't he?" asked the feud by.

"Deed, yes!" said the mourner. "But on his last ascent he determined in the middle of a pixie of syrup and was lost before help could reach him."

Cruel!

"I'm certainly glad I was blessed with a pretty name," said Patience.

"Yes," said Patrice. "It is fortunate when one has little chance of a change."

"Monkey nuts are dangerous," said Dr. Round at an inquest last week. Judging by the mild-looking specimens one sees walking about in the streets appearances are certainly deceptive.

The lazies man in town chases a spaniel up and down in front of his house after every snowstorm just because the dog's ears sweep the ground.

The Chicago man who drank horse liniment and thought he was a horse should be more careful in the future. Some day he might drink cough medicine and think he is a coffin.

The Parisian women who have adopted the fad of painting flowers on their faces may furnish some members of the sterner sex a new excuse for the strawberry tint of their noses.

Well, Yes.

"Those women are trying to stop the manufacture of amber fluid."

"Beer cheese, eh?"

Colorado has eight women city treasurers, which shows the widespread popularity of the tendency to let mother carry the pocket-book.

The Nature Lover.

The lady had been out shopping. She returned home with a handsome sable scarf. She remarked to her sister who was admiring the purchase, "That stupid salesman tried to get me to buy a fur with two heads. I cannot tolerate the unnatural in anything. Who ever heard of an animal with two heads?"

Her sister looked critically at the scarf. Then a smile of amusement lit up her face. "Yes," she remarked, "you didn't buy a fur with two heads; but you have bought one with thirteen tails."

Gentle Demonstration.

"Did you water the ferns in the drawing-room, Norah?"

"Yes, mum. Don't ye hear the water drippin' on the carpet?"

Curate (forte)—" . . . To have-and-to-hold."
Bridegroom (deaf)—"Ah?"
Curate (fortissimo)—"TO—HAVE—AND—TO—HOLD"
Bridegroom—"To 'ave and to 'old.'
Curate—"FROM—THIS—DAY—FORWARD."
Bridegroom—"Till this day fortnight!"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MRS. FOGGERTY ON MARRIAGE

"I think that Mrs. Foggerty is coming," Miss Disney said, withdrawing her hand. "Let's ask Mrs. Foggerty what she thinks about this marriage question."

Mrs. Foggerty had come for the baby—"the deserted orph'n," as she called him. She may, therefore, have expected to be questioned concerning matters appertaining to the science of eugenics; but I doubt whether she had come prepared for ethical controversy. She replied to without emotion; which was a remarkable circumstance, bearing in mind the fact that Mrs. Foggerty was a black alpaca person, 50 years old, who went to chapel and that this was Coroline's inquiry:

"If you had your time over again, Mrs. Foggerty, would you trouble to marry Foggerty?"

Mrs. Foggerty, having thoughtfully adjusted a strand of hair which had become detached from its follows, gravely shook her head. "No, miss, thank you, miss," she replied, adding, "Not unless—"

"Unless what?" inquired Miss Disney.

"Unless Mr. Foggerty was to have his time over again. Did you mean that Mr. Foggerty was to have his time over again, miss?"

"Certainly," replied Miss Disney. "By all means!" exclaimed Simon. "Thank you, miss. Thank you, sir," said Mrs. Foggerty, quietly folding her hands.

"Well?" demanded Miss Disney. "Well?" echoed Simon.

Mrs. Foggerty looked up respectfully surprised, and said: "Sir? Miss?"

"What about it?" persisted Miss Disney. "If Mr. Foggerty had his time over again, what then?"

"He'd be better for it, thank you, miss," responded Mrs. Foggerty. Your're very kind, I'm sure, miss."

"But would you marry him?" said Simon.

"Thank you, sir, I think not," answered Mrs. Foggerty.

"You surprise me—after all these years of conjugal happiness." Mr. Honeyball looked sorry.

"What's the matter with the man?" demanded Coroline.

"Oh, miss, nothing at all, I thank you," Mrs. Foggerty replied. "Obliged to you, I'm sure, miss, but I have no complaints to make whatever. He's an agreeable sort of man, is Foggerty. So fond of pet rabbits."

"Then why, if you both had your time over again, would you refuse to marry him?"

"Well, miss," answered Mrs. Foggerty, "you're very kind, I'm sure; but it seems to me, however often a man might live over again, it wouldn't alter his mind. He's a pleasant man, is Foggerty—ser kind to dumb animals—but he ain't strong in mind. It's a pore mind he's got. I wouldn't purposely marry a man if I might say so, miss, which has got a mind what anybody could look down upon."

"Then why did you marry him, Mrs. Foggerty?" asked Simon.

"Oh, thank you very kindly, sir," said Mrs. Foggerty. "I didn't."

"Do we understand—" "Do you mean to tell us," exclaimed Miss Disney and Mr. Honeyball, "that you are not married to Mr. Foggerty?"

"No, miss, and sir, beggin' your pardon," replied the witness.

"Don't you believe in marriage?" asked Miss Disney.

"Marriage is for them as can afford it," answered Mrs. Foggerty. "I could afford to marry Foggerty, if I may say so, miss, me havin' a green grocery business to look after and a husband living at the time."

"Where is the husband?" inquired Mr. Honeyball.

"He was put away, if you please, sir," replied Mrs. Foggerty, "in the Borough asylum, up at Stoke Newington, where my home was. He run after me with a knife, sir. He was a gentlemanly man when sober, thank you, sir, but not safe to be trusted in front of a carving knife. I was very sorry to part with him, sir, but he got to be uncertain, sir; to that extent it tried my patience. However, sir, thank you, sir, he was very happy in the asylum. They put him to carry the coals on the female side, sir. That just sooted him. A gentlemany man!"

"Did he ver get better?" Coroline then asked.

"He got better, miss, in a manner o' speakin', thank you, miss," replied the witness, "but he never got out. They didn't 'ardly think it safe to trust 'im out, miss, the world being ser full of carving-knives. He died at last, quite ordinary, through gettin' a chill."

"You, therefore, became a widow?" suggested Mr. Honeyball.

"Yes, thank you, sir," said Mrs. Foggerty.

"And yet you didn't marry Mr. Foggerty?"

"No, sir, thank you, sir," said Mrs. Foggerty.

"You preferred to live in — you preferred an irregular union?" continued Mr. Honeyball.

"Yes, sir, if you please, sir," said Mrs. Foggerty.

"How long has this been going on?" demanded Simon.

"Nearly 20 years, I thank you, sir," replied the witness.

"But why? Don't you believe in marriage?"

"I don't believe in it, nor I don't disbelieve in it," answered Mrs. Foggerty. "It's very good of you to ask for my opinion, sir, and I'm sure I would wish to oblige you; but it's a matter what I ain't 'ardly thought about. Marriage suits some people."

"But . . . not you?"

"Oh, yes, sir," replied this somewhat unexpected philosopher. "Speakin' as a Christian woman, and beggin' your pardon, sir, I think it would suit me very well. But I ain't 'ardly found the right man yet, sir, thank you, sir."

"But . . . Mr. Foggerty!"

"Mr. Foggerty is a well-be'aved man, sir—so attentive to the blind—but, if I may say so, he's 'ardly the sort of person which anybody would care to marry. Him bein' a little weak in the mind, sir, he has a low opinion of women, and I think if he was ever to get married, sir, he would very likely look down on his wife. A home is never happy, sir, and miss, where the wife is looked down upon. In fact, sir, if there's any looking-down to be done, I think it's always better for everybody when it's done by the ladies, sir. It makes a more pleasant home of it, sir, when the woman does any despisin' what 'appens to be called for. It's easier to despise a man, sir, when you got a little over him, the same as I have over Foggerty."

"What power over Foggerty do you possess?"

"Well, you see, sir, thank you, sir," explained the witness, "he's liable to be dismissed."

"But you could dismiss a husband," expostulated Simon.

"Yes, sir, very likely," assented Mrs. Foggerty. "I shouldn't be at all surprised, sir, to find if it could be done, the same as you say sir. But it's difficult. And . . . more expensive."

"I see you have given this matter a great deal of careful thought," Mr. Honeyball observed.

"Thank you, sir. I'm sure you're very kind. Shall I take the little orph'n now, miss?"

"But before you go," protested Mr. Honeyball, "we want you to advise us. We—Miss Disney and I—have been discussing the question of marriage, and we can't make up our minds whether—"

"Beggin' your pardon, sir," interpolated Mrs. Foggerty, "that's not a think I 'ardy like to interfere with. You are a modest young gentleman at present, if I may say so, sir. But the most harmless men turn out despisers in the end. If the young lady will take my advice, it's a thing to be looked into very particular. Which looks down on which? That's the question. . . . But marriage suits some people."

"I am afraid your husband is of a choleric temperament, madam."

Terribly Afflicted With Lame Back.

Could Not Sweep The Floor.

When the back aches and pains it is almost impossible for women to do their housework, for every move and every turn means an ache or a pain.

Women are beginning to understand that weak, lame, and aching backs from which they suffer so much are due to wrong action of the kidneys, and should be attended to at once so as to avoid years of suffering from kidney trouble.

On the first sign of anything wrong with the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken.

They go right to the seat of the trouble.

Mrs. Wilfrid Jolicoeur, Nouvelle, Que., writes:—"I take pleasure in writing you stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not sweep my own floor. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I only used three boxes, and I am as well as ever. I highly recommend these pills to any sufferer from lame back or kidney trouble."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Toronto, Ont.

THE WORLD'S WORK DEPENDS ON THE WORLD'S DIGESTION

From the captain of industry to the lead cutter—from nobody in the suite to the woman with the scrubbing brush—the accomplishments of every one of us depend absolutely on the accomplishments of our stomachs. Backed by a good digestion, a man can give the best that is in him. When his stomach fails, he becomes a weakling.

To this loss of power no one need submit. Right habits of eating, drinking, sleeping and exercise, aided by Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, will restore and maintain the full efficiency of the human mind and body.

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets contain the active principles needed for the digestion of every kind of food. They go to the assistance of the weakened stomach, and enable the sufferer, right from the start, to assimilate and get the benefit of the food eaten. With this assistance, the digestive organs regain their tone, and soon the use of the tablets is no longer necessary.

The Old-Fashioned Parents.

The good old-fashioned mothers and the good old-fashioned dads
With their good old-fashioned lassies and their good old-fashioned lads, Still walk the lanes of loving in their simple, tender ways
As they used to do back yonder in the good old-fashioned days.

They dwell in every city and they live in every town,
Contentedly and happy and not hungry for renown;
On every street you'll find 'em in their simple garments clad,
The good old-fashioned mother and the good old-fashioned dad.

There are some who sigh for riches, there are some who yearn for fame,
And a few misguided people who no longer blush at shame;
But the world is full of mothers and the world is full of dads
Who are makings sacrifices for their little girls and lads.

They are growing old together, arm in arm they walk along,
Old their hearts with love are beating and their voices sweet with song;
They still share their disappointments and they share their pleasures, too,
And whatever be their fortune, to each other they are true.

They are watching at the bedside of a baby pale and white,
And they kneel and pray together for the care of God at night;
They are romping with their children in the fields of clover sweet,
And devotedly they guard them from the perils of the street.

They are here in countless numbers,
just as they have always been,
And their glory is untainted by the selfish and the mean,
And I'd hate to still be living, it would dismal be and sad,
If we'd no old-fashioned mother and we'd no old-fashioned dad.

HER LITTLE SON WAS DYING

Gave Him "Fruit-a-tives" And Saved His Life.

CARTIERSVILLE, Que., May 5th, 1913.

"Our little boy, Lawrence, was greatly affected with Chronic Indigestion, and the doctor did not think he would recover. He started with a sore mouth and it developed into this other trouble. Everything he ate just passed right through the system without change. He tried incessantly and life was a misery to him. My husband had been using Fruit-a-tives" for Indigestion, getting much benefit from them, and I thought what did him good, might help our boy. We tried "Fruit-a-tives" giving Lawrence ½ a tablet at a dose, and the result was marvellous. Today, he is the picture of health, and he is perfectly well".

FASHIONABLE FEATHERS.

How pleasant it is, in the trolley car riding,
Behind some fair creature, as sweet
as a rose,
To spend all the moments in dext'rously dodging
The plumes on her headgear that tickle one's nose.
O, the sharp, shiny feathers—the tall, skinny feathers — the broad, fluffy feathers, that tickle one's nose!
Vain, vain are all notions, to one side or t'other—
The plumage pursueth wherever one goes.
They whisk o'er one's face like a brisk feather duster—
Those fash'nable feathers that tickle one's nose.
O, the fat, fussy feathers—the long, dropping feathers—the feathers
enraging, that tickle one's nose!

Jeff Knows How to Spend His Money, at That

By "Bud" Fisher

Try It on the Dog.

The farmer looked at the stranger and shook his head.

"What d'ye call yourself?" he asked.

"The Orpheus of the barnyard," replied the caller.

"What's Tophet in that?" demanded the rustic orator.

The stranger smiled.

"A college professor has declared that hens will not lay at certain distances unless they are annoyed. I'm the man who sits on a barnyard fence and annoys them. See, here is my mouth organ, and here is my tambourine. I play and sing and crack jokes until the hens roll over in sheer delight—and all for 50 cents an hour."

The farmer eyed him moodily.

"I wonder," he said, "how your talents would improve the dogs? Here, Rover!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

One Way to Cure "Nerves."

We remember hearing of an Englishman, a distinguished soldier, who was naturally a very nervous boy, but who had cured himself of the infirmity through reading Lever's novels. The method in which Lever treats of all bodily pain as a kind of joke introduced him to a new philosophy that made any exaggeration of the advantages of bodily safety seem not only merited, but ridiculous.—London Spectator.

WITCHES ON TRIAL

Sardinia Has Remarkable Trial of Several Women

ALL ARE FREED BUT SIX

MILAN, April 18. — Stories of witchcraft which the most highly imaginative modern novelist would hesitate to print were related at the Assize Court at Sassari, Sardinia, during the trial of several women. Only six of the alleged witches were in the dock of the twenty-five original companions discharged during the earliest magisterial examinations. Their plea was that they acted under the powerful spell of the other six.

The existence of an influential witches' league was revealed by the evidence of some members professing mystic power for locating hidden treasure, working miracles and calling up the spirits of the dead. They victimized several [illegible] on the extent of thousands of dollars, and eighty victims gave evidence. One of them, a former prison governor who was being threatened with dismissal because of the escape of a ferocious Sardinian brigand, spent all his private means with the witches. The women undertook to have the brigand seized by demons in the mountain fastnesses, translated through the air, and set down securely in the prison cell again.

Returning emigrants from North and South America were despoiled of their savings and defended by the cunningly devised appurtenances of lost relatives. Some families have been content to forfeit not only modest household furniture for the benefit of the witches. One prisoner, Rosa Arca, a venerable matron of imposing appearance, and known as the Saint of Sassari, refused a lawyer's aid, saying that Saints Thomas and Augustine had been sent from heaven to defend her. In an eloquent speech she claimed to possess supernatural powers, which enabled her to heal scores of so-called incurables and even raving lunatics. The case is still proceeding.

Dynamite Is Busy.

KINGSTON, April 20.—Gunpowder carried to the city dump on Bagot street exploded when the dump was on fire Saturday morning, and three children, Earl Clark, aged 14; Teddy Tanner, aged 9, and a 9-year-old girl, name unknown, were badly burned about the face, arms and legs, but it is believed all will recover.

Stricken While Rowing.

BELLEVILLE, April 20. — While Capt. Wesley Weese, accompanied by his son, was rowing on the bay he expired suddenly from heart failure. He was 52 years of age, and was born at Rossmore, Prince Edward County, where he lived all his life. He was a member of the A. F. & A. M., Orange Prentice Boys and Canadian Order of Foresters' societies. He was for years captain of a company of the 16th Regiment.

Malta Storm Swept.

Terrific weather was recently experienced in Malta. The wind blew with hurricane force for several hours, greatly alarming the people, and causing great damage to trees. The sea ran very high, smashing and sinking many small craft and a large steam launch. Lighters went adrift, and merchantmen in the Grand Harbor broke away from their moorings and collided with each other. Two of them touched ground, and for a time their situation was most critical. Assistance, however, was soon forthcoming. The Admiralty tugs worked incessantly all night, whilst the warships kept their searchlights on the steamers owing to the pitch darkness until they were safely secured again. The transport Rena, with the 2nd Battalion of the Northamptonshire Regiment on board for Egypt, encountered the full force of the storm.

Professional Pit Thrower.

Professional poverty is a paying pursuit in London, and the strolling police know it. You may have noticed the lady who buries her head in her hands and howls on the steps of a west end restaurant. She is destitute and is in a fit. We run to her rescue, call the police. And when the lady has procured brandy and sundry contributions from the sympathetic public the constable explains that this is the lady who has nine fits a day. "And here's your cuffs, lady," says the constable, for the lady is careful to take off her clean cuffs before having her fit.—London Globe.

WHY ARE YOU SO TIRED?

The Weather Is Not To Blame for That "Dragged-Out" Feeling.

"This weather simply takes the life right out of me, I can hardly drag one foot after the other," said a run-down, tired-out woman the other day.

We want to say to every such person in this vicinity. Don't blame the weather, it's your condition. You need a strengthening tonic and the very best we know is Vinol which is a combination of the two most world-faved tonics, namely, the medicinal, curative elements of cod liver oil and tonic iron, for the blood.

A case has just come to our attention from Milford, Mich. "Mrs. Julia Barber says: "I was run-down and hardly able to drag about; my appetite was poor and I was not able to work. My druggist asked me to try Vinol. The first bottle helped me and after taking the second bottle I was able to work and felt well and strong. Vinol is the best medicine I have ever taken."

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

AFTER DEATH, WHAT?

Mr. John Carlisle Refers to Recent Lecture on Subject

Sir,—Does the spirit of man sleep when his body dies? The body is the house of day the man lives in. It is his earthly home, "the earthly house of his tabernacle." The body is not the man; it is only the tent he lives in. The Christians can say with St. Paul, "While we are at home in the body we are absent from the Lord," 2 Cor., 5: 6. St. Paul said, just previous to his death, when his body would die and as a dead corpse, "would know not anything, Eccl., 9: 5, but would return to the dust. He said, "the time of my departure is at hand," 2 Tim., 4: 6. Now if Paul believed that his body and spirit both remained unconscious until the resurrection in the grave, this speaking of his departure from the body was without meaning. He says again, Phil. 1, 2, 3, "For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better; nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you."

The apostle knew that the moment his spirit left his body and as the body without the spirit is dead and knows not anything, he himself, the occupant of that body, would immediately "depart and be with Christ." Now that one word depart proves the falsity the very prevalent teaching that the soul or spirit lies unconscious with the body till the resurrection. And that other expression of the great apostle, "Absent from the body, present with Lord," 2 Cor., 5: 8, silences forever all the Millinial Dawn preachers or International Bible student apostles under the sun.

Just before the first Christian martyr, Stephen, fell dead from the blows of the stones flung by his murderers, he had a vision, "he looked up steadfastly into heaven and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God and said, Behold I see the heavens opened and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God," and just as he was departing from his body he said, "Lord Jesus receive my spirit. . . and prayed Lord lay not this sin to their charge, and when he had said this he fell asleep."—Acts, 7: 55-60.

Now, when Stephen's body fell dead his corpse "knew not anything." Any child can understand that. His body was laid away in "silence in the grave" by "devout men." His dead body had no more remembrance of anything. His body of dust returned to the earth as it was, but what about his spirit?

The same preacher who wrote, "the dead know not anything," also wrote, "Then shall the dust return to earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God, who gave it, Ecc., 12: 7.

Where did Stephen's body go when his body fell asleep and "knew not anything?" His spirit departed from the body to be present with Lord Jesus Christ at the right hand of God. "Absent from the present with the Lord" was Stephens happy experience. Now that Christ had ascended up on high and led captivity captive and entered heaven with his own blood, all who die in Christ have a blood bought right to go where he has gone. So that the spirits of the departed are either with Christ at the right hand of God, where there is "fullness of joy and pleasures for ever more," or they have gone to the same place where the rich man went when he departed from his dead body. Although his dead body lay in silence in the grave and "knew not anything," he himself, the rich man, absent from his body, "lifted up his eyes in Hades, being in torments," Luke, 16 23. So that the spirits of the departed are not "wandering about as spooks, haunting houses and cemeteries," etc., as some foolish people think. They are either with Christ or in Hades.

JOHN CARLISLE.

Polar Bears in England.

We do not know why man should claim the right to outrage the feelings of any animal he pleases, and keep them under unnatural and unwholesome conditions for his own purpose. We are told that every year, about this season, the polar bear at the Zoological Gardens, London, gives birth to one or two cubs, who, however, invariably die from pneumonia after a few days, says The Animals' Friend. The experiment has been made more than once of handing these cubs over to female dogs to bring up, and the bear, who is "an excellent, affectionate mother," is said this year to have "lamented her loss with dismal, sorrowing roars." The cubs have died as usual, and we are told that the longest time that a cub has been kept alive is three weeks, and "that was achieved by Barbara herself." We certainly think the cubs might be left with their own mother as long as they live, and we suggest that the keeping of animals under such abnormal conditions is tyrannical and cruel.—Exchange.

NO MORE PAIN

"KEPHALDOL" CAN NOW BE HAD AT YOUR DRUGGIST'S.

Here Doctor Stohr the famous Austrian nerve specialist, first used KEPHALDOL prescription in his private practice and hospital work, in Vienna. Other noted physicians and surgeons adopted this formula in treating severe cases of Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago, La Grippe and Colds, Neuralgia and Headaches. The wonderful properties of KEPHALDOL became known in England, where a company was formed to prepare KEPHALDOL TABLETS and supply them to the public at a nominal price.

Canadians, visiting th Old Country, heard of KEPHALDOL—tried them—and brought them back to Canada. So great became the demand for KEPHALDOL here, that a Canadian office was established to distribute these tablets on this side of the ocean.

So what one famous physician did in Austria, has resulted in thousands and thousands of sufferers being cured of pain.

KEPHALDOL is absolutely safe, having no ill-effects on the heart or other vital organs.

If your druggist should not have KEPHALDOL, a 50c tube of tablets may be obtained by remitting the price to Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

Maxim Gorky, having returned to Russia, the public prosecutor of the District Court of St. Petersburg has ordered immediate proceedings to be taken against him on a charge of blasphemy preferred against him in 1906, in connection with his novel, entitled "Mother." According to Russian law, if he is found guilty he will be exiled to Siberia. According to a message from Paris the famous author has fled from Russia.

Attacked the Magistrate.

A prisoner assaulted a magistrate in a court at Howrah, India, not long since. After a protracted hearing lasting about two months the magistrate, Mr. Bysack, expressed his intention of committing the prisoner, Ramgopal Mutherjee by name, on a charge of cheating, to the Sessions. The prisoner did not like to have the hearing of his case further protracted; and pulling out a stone which he had concealed in his waist-cloth, threw it at the magistrate. The missile struck Mr. Bysack under his right eye. The prisoner was handcuffed immediately, while the services of a doctor were procured for the magistrate. The man was sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment.

Sage And Sulphur Darkens Gray Hair

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Restore Colour, Gloss and Lightness

Hair that loses its colour and lustre or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is restored by a few applications in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but, what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, APRIL 20, 1914

TO PLACE FIFTY MILLION DOLLARS AT THE SERVICE OF PRESIDENT WILSON

Bill Introduced in U. S. Congress This Afternoon—President Says That He Has No Enthusiasm For War.

LATEST DEVELOPMENT

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WAR FEVER SPREADS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 20.—The war fever is sweeping throughout the United States border. From every city and village ardent declarations telling of intense enthusiasm greet the president of Uncle Sam's army and navy forces, as orders go forth to try to straighten out things in Mexico. Crowds waited for President Wilson this morning at the stations when he arrived from Virginia and the route of his motor racing automobile from one station to the White House was lined with people. Wilson is clearly the ruler of the hour in the nation's affairs to-day, and it was evident that he appreciated his heavy responsibility. Wilson and Bryan held a conference immediately and the Cabinet went into session at eleven a.m. to agree on a message to Congress this afternoon. There is no doubt that Congress will back the President in anything he undertakes in the Mexican affair, but Wilson will first strive every effort to avert any action that resembles war.

The Navy Department here are not counting much on reinforcements from the Mexican navy, which could be wiped out, says the officials, in a few seconds by the United States vessels already in Mexican waters.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20. — "In no conceivable manner should we fight the people of Mexico. We are their friends and we want to help them in every way to recover their rights and their government and their laws." This was part of President Wilson's speech to Congress this afternoon. He continued: "I have no enthusiasm for war. I have enthusiasm for justice and for the dignity of the United States, but not for war. This incident need not eventuate into war if we handle it with firmness and promptness."

More

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 20.—Fifty million dollars was provided for the president, "to use at his discretion in national defence" in a bill introduced in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Chamberlain.

FIRST STEAMER TO LEAVE FT. WILLIAM

Special to The Examiner:

FORT WILLIAM, ONT., April 20. —The steamer Duluth cleared at one o'clock this afternoon from Port Arthur and Fort William, with grain, this is the first steamer to clear this spring. The ice fields Whalen and Superior ahead of her, however, is released through the ice.

THE CHEMONG BRIDGE HURT

The bolts were recently drawn from the swing bridge across Chemong Lake at Bridgenorth, and the moving ice swung the free end through an arc toward the shore. The ice has been gradually breaking up and has begun to move, but there is a vast amount of it still to clear the Chemong water. The bridge will be necessarily out of commission for a week or ten days. The ice, driven by the strong wind, battered the free section more than usual, and considerable damage was done. The ice began to move out on April 15th last year, with little or no damage to the bridge.

HAS NOT RETURNED

OTTAWA, April 20 — It was announced to-day that Premier Borden who was expected back at the capital to-day, will not return until until the middle of the week at least, and in consequence the budget debate will be allowed to drift along without possible developments of any kind until he does return. The presentation of Liberal amendments, outlining the tariff policy of opposition, has been further postponed and is not expected until Wednesday at the earliest.

Nothing is fresher and more springlike than the clean looking black and white checks.

BICYCLE SQUAD IS APPOINTED

Chief Thompson Has Delegated Two Members of His Staff for Special Roving Work Throughout the Summer

FRUITS ALREADY GATHERED

Chief Thompson has appointed a bicycle squad consisting of two policemen who will patrol the outlying sections of the City during the spring and summer. They have been given roving commissions and are really detectives to round up all the offenders they come across. Although they commenced their duties only a few days ago the wisdom of the Chief's plan has already been manifested. Last week four young men were fined in police court for disorderly conduct, on Thursday next another batch will receive attention and complaints about others now materializing in blue garbs being served. Such is the new work of the first few days' activities of the bicycle squad, and the citizens are assured that the work will be continued and will be made as thorough as possible, with the limited force at the Chief's disposal.

Around the Parks.

Special attention will be given to the several congregating places in the different wards, and rowdyism will lead to trouble. The parks will be visited and an effort made to keep out those who profane themselves undesirable. It is understood that the officers have no intention of interfering with the innocent fun that comes of the people, but only investigate the promised disturbance.

BROTHERS ARE FINED IN THE POLICE COURT

Robert Anderson, who was charged in the Police Court this morning with being in charge of a horse and rig on Charlotte Street, on Saturday, and not being able to drive the same to the public safety, and who pleaded guilty to the charge, was assessed $5.75.

Frederick Anderson faced a charge of being drunk and disorderly, in company with his brother, pleaded guilty, and was assessed $5.75. A crowd of some 200 people, a runaway horse, and a collision, were the outcome of the affair, according to the evidence of F. C. Hayward, who proved the case.

Charge Dismissed.

W. A. Hare, the local garbage collector, was charged with working a horse in an unfit condition. Evidence for the prosecution was given by Sanitary Inspector Spence. He stated that on Tuesday last he saw the horse in question, which was in a very bad condition. He ordered it to be taken off, but this order was not complied with. Dr. Rogers, V.S., stated that he was called to see the horse. The animal in question had what was called lamenitis, which was something like a contracted foot. In delivering judgment Magistrate Dumble said that he could not make a conviction. The horse evidently had tender feet, but then, many old men have rheumatism, which is something the same. The best thing you can do with this class of horse, is to take them to the Crematorium. To prove this case you have to show that the treatment was something inhuman. It is not in this case. Some of us have to work when we would rather not. I cannot make a conviction in this case.'

WINTER WHEAT AND CLOVER COME OUT RIGHT

We have had a fine old-fashioned winter, which has been hard on the coal bill and the cash box, but it hasn't left any wrecks in the open. In fact the lawns have come through sound and green as Ireland, and all tender perennial vegetation is "right side up with care." The farmers report similar conditions in the country. The fall crops seem to suffer from winter conditions are the winter wheat and the clover. The farmers say that both fall wheat and clover never looked better, nor gave greater promise of a good crop than they do this year. The disappearance of the snow left them in good shape and the conditions of growth since have pushed both forward splendidly. With good wheat and hay we may look forward to a supply of bread and milk. A timely rain will be better for both.

PRESENTATION TO MR. HAYES

Judge Designate of Wellington County is Honoured by His Fellows of Peterboro' Bar Association

REGRETS EXPRESSED

Yet another splendid tribute was paid to Mr. L. M. Hayes, judge-designate of Wellington County, by the members of the local Law Association, on Saturday evening last, in the offices of the departing member.

For twenty years Mr. Hayes has been an esteemed member of the Peterborough Law Association, and after so many years of extremely cordial relations with his fellow practitioners, his severance from the associations he has long enjoyed, will be keenly felt. That his promotion to the King's Bench necessitates his retirement from actual practice as a lawyer, but more especially from the City in which he has for long made his home, cast a feeling of regret among those who were present to wish him farewell on Saturday last. Congratulations were showered upon Mr. Hayes in his appointment, which will reflect an honour upon Peterborough, while expressions of confidence that Mr. Hayes would recognize his responsibilities as a distributor of the law were passed.

Among those present were Judge and Mrs. Hayes, Messrs. Dumble and Johnston, G. T. Gordon, S. T. Medd, R. B. Hall, B. O'Donnell, E. A. Peck, F. D. Kerr, and V. J. McElderry, J. Wesring, O. J. DeLaplante, W. M. Moore, E. L. Goodwill, R. H. Bradley, Judge and Mrs. Hayes, Mr. Gurney, Sheriff Hall, Gaoler Nesbitt and others.

An Esteemed Member.

Mr. Johnston, President of the Association, in making a few remarks, previous to the presentation, said: "You have been with us a long time, and we are here to-day to present you with some tangible proof that for over 40 years you have been in uninterrupted possession of the esteem of your brothers in the profession. I will ask Mr. Goodwill to bestow upon you this token of our esteem and appreciation of your associations, this silver coffee pot.

Mr. Goodwill then made the presentation, making suitable remarks.

Mrs. Hayes was also the recipient of a beautiful bouquet.

Continuing Mr. Johnston said:

"I will now call upon Mr. Dumble, as the oldest member of the Bar, to voice the feelings of us here present.

A Good Judge.

Mr. Dumble, somewhat surprised at being unexpectedly called upon, said that he was glad Mr. Hayes was going to the west, and not to the east. Your relationship with your fellow hope for her an even happier time one indeed. I can say that you will make a good Judge, because you are not hasty in saying words that might come to your mind, but you take time to consider before you do say anything, and I think you feel your way into a little law in order to dispense a little law. The time will come when men will speak of you, speak of you as a good fellow, and a good and successful Judge, and for Mrs. Hayes, I hope for her an even happier time than she has had here.

Similar Experience.

Judge Hayden, in paying a compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, said that sometimes Judges had to make lawyers toe the line, and likened that to his position they placed him in then. My feelings are mingled. It is not very long ago since my wife and myself passed through a similar parting, although not of so grand a character, and know something of the pang experienced at leaving your associations. You will find I think, that new friends are never the same as old friends. So that no matter how right the future may appear, it cannot be a duplication of old associations and acquaintances. All I can say to you is this, that I hope that your life, and that of Mrs. Hayes, may be unclouded and beautiful as the days go by.

"They's Not So Old."

Having heard from the Bar and Bench, Sheriff Hall was called upon and said that it would hardly be possible to imagine that Mr. Hayes had gone, gone to a terra of greater work. In that sphere he expressed the hope that the friendships which he would gain would be as cordial as those he has here. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes are not as old as Judge Hayden would have us imagine, and there is yet plenty of time for them to enjoy life. I wish them all happiness and success.

Mr. Hayes, in replying, said:

"I Thank You."

Judge Hayden, Mr. Dumble and brothers, believe me, I am deeply grateful to you all assembled here, to

No More Need for Being Drowned at Sea.—A novel apparatus has been most successfully tried for saving life at sea. It is the invention of the engineer, Heinrich, of Geestemunde. The central part is of watertight enamel, with two sleeves, the lower part is a metal basket, and keeps the life-saving apparatus, by its weight, in a vertical position. The top part allows the person to look out by a sliding door, which is watertight when shut. Inside the apparatus sufficient food and drinking water can be stored, and the shipwrecked man can float and hold out for weeks. The whole apparatus can be easily stored on board, and can easily be made ready for use in a minute or two.

SAYS ARMY AND NAVY WILL BE HELD IN CHECK

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 20.—President Wilson gave an interview to newspaper men this morning in which he deprecated the jingoistic attitude of some of the United States' newspapers in Mexican matters. He let it be understood that the action which the United States proposed taking was not war, but something very much short of that, namely, a hard-and-fast blockade of Mexican ports. He said the United States had no quarrel with the real Mexican people, but only with President, whom the United States had never recognized. Assuredly, said Wilson, the United States' army and navy would be held in check. Neither alliance nor hope in the matter was

Launches And Campers Have Already Appeared on Otonabee

The launches that have been tied up during the winter at the Otonabee boat house, foot of Lock Street, are slipping back into the water in preparation for the summer's pleasure. The craft that have already been unmoored are A. W. Patterson's "Myrtle," T. H. Hooper's "May-belle," J. Leyasmeur's "Bob Roy," Ernie Hubel's "Pool Moon," B. Garside's "O. U. Kidd" and Mr. Brodie's "Pungee." A number of new craft are expected to join the local fleet before summer arrives, and the citizens undoubtedly will take the usual pleasure the river affords.

Several of those who have been down the stream state that campers have already appeared, one group of tents being located near the foot of Park Street. Below Crawford's Grove trappers have been tenting for some time.

DUFFY WINS BIG RACE

"QUEEN ZEPHRA"

Mr. H. J. Booth, the manager of this great spectacle, has been requested by the participants and their many friends to give one more performance on Wednesday, April 22, of this merry musical extravaganza, and this will be your last opportunity perhaps of witnessing a truly beautiful production at popular prices, and it is hoped our citizens will take advantage of the generous offer of the Management, and pack the house to the doors. The sale of seats is now on at the Box Office.

Examinations Will Commence To-morrow

To-morrow the probationers' examinations for the Bay of Quinte Conference will be commenced in the George Street Methodist Church. The Rev. J. G. Lewis, Secretary of the Board of Examiners, has had sixteen applications, but it is not known definitely just how many will try the examinations. The successful candidates will be advanced a year in their studies in preparation for entrance into the ministry. The examinations will be concluded on Thursday. During their short time in the City, the probationers will be guests at the homes of some of the members of the George Street Church.

OTHER CITY WORK BEGUN OR COMING

Quite a number of workmen were engaged for drain construction work on Sherbrooke Street this morning and were immediately put to work. A surface drain is being constructed from George Street west to the creek.

There will also be work in a few days in connection with the laying of about 600 feet of cable on the section of George Street from the vicinity of Murray Street north to McDonnell.

Empty Cars Are in Demand At Midland

There is a great demand for empty freight cars at Midland and all the available "coaches" of the G. T. R. rolling stock are being shipped to that place with all possible despatch. The race for them is due to the efforts to get grain to clear the elevators of last year's grain before navigation and its accompanying rush begins.

MINER IS BEATEN UP BY GANG OF THREE MEN

Was Dragged Into a Shed and Hammered Into Unconsciousness—Robbers Missed His Roll

CONDITION IS SERIOUS

Special to The Examiner.

MADOC, ONT., April 20. — Lying covered with blood and in an unconscious condition, George Knight, a miner from Springbrook, about 15 miles west of Madoc, was found in a lonely shed. He said that he was accosted by three men and at the point of a revolver forced to accompany them in a buggy. He was driven into a shed and then beaten into unconsciousness. He had a roll of money, but the robbers overlooked it, and took but one dollar. His condition is quite serious.

THE NEW "MUTT AND JEFF"

Is a Veritable Innovation

With a sensational melodramatic story under the title of "Mutt and Jeff in Panama," Gus Hill's perennial success of that name reappears "spick and span," everything new, but the buttons, to clean up the coin again as it has done for the past two years. The irrepressible "Gus" has evidently kept tab on every line, thrill, laugh, song and situation during his entire "nearly a century" of theatrical experience. It seems that this season's "Mutt and Jeff" contains nothing but the real essence of true amusement without a hitch or a line that does not go over in great shape. There's catchy music, whistleable music, a laugh to every breath, a song hit or an entrancing dance number, whenever your sides begin to ache from excessive laughter, and a bunch of exceedingly pretty girls to give the whole thing zest. There you have "In Panama." To say it in a hit, is putting it altogether too mildly. It is a riot! With gorgeous scenic and light effects and a magnificent change of costume for every one of the twenty or more song and dance numbers. After all, it resolves itself into a "rip-roaring" side-splitting comedy such as you would expect after seeing the daily cartoons by Bud Fisher, which are still as popular with the readers of the thousand or more daily and Sunday papers as they were two years ago. "Mutt and Jeff," with the big fifty-thousand dollar production, comes to the Grand Opera House for one night only, Monday, [illegible]. You would not wish your worst enemy such luck as to miss "Mutt and Jeff." Get seats as soon as the advance sale is announced, if you want a good seat. That's good advice.

"Everything new but the title," is the way in which Gus Hill describes his 1913-14 offering of the famous Bud Fisher cartoon play "Mutt and Jeff," and their journey to Panama to assist "Uncle Sam" in properly opening the "Big Ditch." It's the one big laughing hit of the century.

MR. BURNHAM ON THE INCIDENT AT WINNIPEG

To the Editor of The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 20.—"An overt act of deliberate treason, which no patriotic Canadian would fail to take notice of," was the manner in which Mr. J. H. Burnham, Member for West Peterborough, speaking at the People's Forum in the Family Theatre, here last night characterized the placing of the toes to His Holiness the Pope, before that to His Majesty the King, at the Roman Catholic banquet at Winnipeg recently. The observations in connection with the above came at the conclusion of a speech on "Human Happiness" delivered before a large gathering by the Peterborough member. Mr. Burnham's conclusion consisted of a slashing attack on the Roman Catholic hierarchy, whom he accused of attempting to introduce at Winnipeg the principle of papal supremacy in temporal matters in the Dominion.

Fire Swept Through The Bridgenorth City Of The Dead Recently

B[illegible] T H, April 18 — The grass and was swept by a grass fire a few days ago, and the flames got through to an adjoining field, finding their way across it and threatening the cottages of Mr. T. F. Westwood, Mr. R. Neill and others. Among those who turned out to fight the flames were a number of women, some of whom had their shirts scorched and hands more or less burned. It was stated that the fire was unintentionally started by the man who accidentally upset a lamp at a recent gathering. Some of the Bridgenorth people were enjoying a laugh over the affair, stating that this citizen was not content until he had scorched the dwellings of the living and the dwelling of the dead, not to mention the slight element of danger to the living who fought the fire, and others who were present at the dance. There was nothing serious in either of the incidents, but the Villagers would have their joke.

THANKS TO THE PUBLIC.

The Examiner cordially thanks the public for its liberal and appreciated cooperation in making the Examiner newsboys' competition the great success it has been. Through this competition, the energy of the boys, and the appreciation of the public, helped in both cases, it is confidently hoped, by the merits of the Examiner, a very substantial increase of daily circulation was effected, bringing the total nearly up to the five thousand-a-day mark. The lads, especially the foremost winners, and, indeed, all of the competing boys, will have a keener appreciation of the necessity of energy, industry and enterprise, to insure success. The same qualities that are necessary for success in such a competition, applied in after life, will bring similar success in the game of business enterprise. This has been proven. It is a fact that many of our younger and successful business men on George Street began their business career, served their business apprenticeship, by selling the daily Examiner. Thanks to the lessons then learned, and the business spirit developed, they are now successful and still keep up their association with the Examiner, but, instead of being newsboys they are advertisers and important elements in the commercial life and activities of Peterborough.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, APRIL 20, 1914

NEW CHURCH CENTRE.

A new church centre of religious influence and accommodation has been established in the south-western part of the city at a place called Brown-town, making the fifth English church centre in Peterborough. Rev. T. Pryce, rector of St. George's has opened a mission at this place which, if the example of St. George is met, will soon develop into a settled parish. In accomplishing this, Mr. Pryce will need, as he deserves, practical sympathy and cooperation of the Anglican people of th city. This new church enterprise is at once evidence of a desire or determination to meet the religious needs of a new community, and of the rapid growth of the city southward. Within the past few years a new town of considerable proportion has sprung up beyond the city's boundaries.

GOOD FOUNDATIONS.

We have every day practical evidence of the importance of providing substantial foundations for what are regarded as permanent works. In many places we see subsidence of the surface of concrete sidewalks. This is due to defective foundations. At the time of construction it would have required only a little additional care and an additional expenditure, hardly worth mentioning, to have secured foundations that would hold. It would be considered bad workmanship to deliberately build concrete walks with one block here and there, an inch or two below the others, yet it is an equivalent of this, to neglect to provide foundations that will not sink. In the long run it is much more expensive to restore walk surfaces to a propert level, than to do the work solidly, as to foundations, in the first place. An example of the folly of building on the sand, is shown in the case of the west wall of the Hunter street bridge. This wall was apparently placed on the surface of the loose gravel on a level with the bed of the stream. This spring the high water has washed out the underlying gravel and the wall is in danger of collapse. At considerable expense the insecure wall has been temporarily shored up. This expense will be many times greater than would have been the cost of providing the wall with propertly substantial foundation in the beginning and the work of repair will, obviously, not be so well done. And this is not the first time that the walls of this bridge have been tinkered at considerable expense. The lesson is obvious. Whether we build streets or walks or bridge walls we should be sure of good foundations, the first condition of permanency. At the same time we can provide against obstruction of the streets. There is a good deal of building going on this spring, and many sewer connections will have to be made. The city should see that the trenches resulting are properly filled; so thoroughly tamped that there will be no after subsidence of the street surface with its consequent destruction of the smooth driving surface of the streets, which is the prime desideratum in street building, and—in the end—is economy. If figures were available, of the cost of patch work to repair defective street work the past twenty or twenty-five years, the total would be astounding.

THE THING NEEDED.

The Christian Guardian in a front page little article, refers to the unsatisfactory results of a "general test" school examination. It says that the answers given showed a great lack of "positive, definite knowledge" and adds—

And how like these students are many of us in the grown up and mature world; the things we know definitely and positively and all-around, seem to be in the hopeless minority. And isn't the reason with us as with them, that we are slip-shod and careless and haven't that most useful and difficult art of taking pains?

The Guardian is right in assuming that there is a great lack of positive knowledge in the world. But is not this inevitable? Every man cannot be an Admirable Crichton. There is such an infinite deal to know in this world, that like Goldsmith's schoolmaster it would be a wonder if one small head could carry all there is to know. And it is not probable that the human mind was ever designed to be devoted to infinite cramming with details. Who in this world is capable of reading one-tenth of the literature of the English language without consulting a dictionary or an encyclopoedia? It would be a foolish waste of time to commit the dictionary to memory, to avoid the charge of being "slip-shod and careless."

Mere knowledge is not education. While it is well to know something positively, it is well some times to know that we don't know something, as we think, positively. Then we would inquire and make sure of what we want to know. Ask any lawyer what seems to be a simple thing, regarding some specific point of law. As a rule he will not commit himself to an answer without consulting an authority. A lawyer knows more than a layman about law; and very little more positively about concrete points; but he has this advantage. He knows where to look and how to look for what he wants to positively know. He has learned of course, the cardinal principles, but in the matter of details the law books contain infinitely more of what a lawyer doesn't know than of what he is positive upon, or could be expected to know — his skilled understanding makes such knowledge available when he needs to look for it.

So with other branches of science. All we have time to learn in this short life, with our limited capacity for acquirement, are the broad, the fundamental principles of any branch of knoweldge. When we know these — generally they are comparatively few and comprehensive—we can, if we are properly educated, apply them in the various ways that circumstances demand. A thorough knowledge of the multiplication table up to "12 times 12" is as good for practical purposes as the same table committed to memory up to 12 million times 12 million. Take a child and cram his poor head exclusively with positive and definite facts, concrete knowledge, during his school life from 5 to 16 years, and neglect the inculcation of principles, and he would be little better than a trained pig. All we should have accomplished would be to make his brain—his mental attic—a limber room of more or less useless "hard facts" — make him another "Gadgrind." But if we had taught him principles, and in the process fixed a few cardinal, auxiliary facts, indelibly in his mind; if in a word we had educated his mind — sharpened the tools of the trade of thinking—we should have equipped him with the capacity for looking for and finding, when needed, the positive facts, his way and work in life might make it necessary for him to know. We should have taught him to think, to use the faculty that distinguishes man, from the brute, creation.

As in the secular domain, so in the spiritural and religious domain, we need the inculation of principles more than facts. A man might commit the whole Bible to memory from the first verse of Genesis to the twenty-first verse of the twenty-second chapter of Revelation, inclusive, and he would have his mind filled with useless lumber if he omitted the sum of the law, the key to all saving and regenerating religion—the commandment to love God with the whole heart and our neighbour as ourself—if he did not gain intelligent knowledge of the foundation facts and catch the spirit of it all.

CLOVER AND FALL WHEAT WINTERED WELL FARMERS SAY

Reports at the market state that the clover and fall wheat have wintered well and are coming up in good condition. The farmers want as little frost as possible, and if their hopes are fulfilled the crop should meet the summer weather in fine condition. The country is rather dry on acount of the light rainfall. Many of the farmers are plowing already. The grass is beginning to take on a green hue and it is expected that the cattle will be turned out within the next week. Messrs. Brown and Morris sent sixty head of cattle back to their ranch above Ball Lake to-day, and will have at least one hundred head on the grass in a short time. To-day's consignment will be held over night at Buckhorn, and to-morrow will complete the journey.

An automatic stopper to be attached to decanters opens when the latter are turned to pour out their contents, closing to exclude dust when the decanters are righted.

Petes Win First Game Easily Beat Combination Team 15-3

Fine Pitching of Cresswell and Good Work of Price, Byrne and Blount Featured Engagement—O'Hearn and Flanagan, Rival First Base Candidates, Each Had Two Hits—Tirrill Pitched Against His Team Mates.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, April 19.—The weather man did not hand out a very favourable brand for the first exhibition game of the Peterborough Canadian Leaguers, scheduled for this afternoon, at Wright Park. It was dark and cloudy with occasional sprinkles of rain, and the conditions not only affected the attendance which was very small, but also resulted in only four of the Goodlows, the local semi-pro team, turning up. However, the Bloomtmen had a rattling good practice game in spite of these drawbacks, and the battle gave the little manager a chance to look over a large number of his candidates.

In order to make a game possible Manager Blount loaned several of his squad to the opposition. Tirrell, Schrage, Miller, the young infielder, who is a brother of Catcher Mully Miller, and several local boys, who have been trying out with the Petes, were turned over to the Goodlows.

The Petes won easily, beating the Goodlow-Yanniagan combination by 15 runs to 3, hammering Pitchers Tirrell and Boggins for thirteen safe hits.

THE FIRST LINE-UP.

For the first line-up of the season Blount selected Stan Cresswell and Hunt Belting to do the twirling, while Ryberg and Kelly were selected as the battery-pair. Flanagan and O'Hearn, the two candidates for first base, both had a turn in playing the bag. Frank Fox covered second, and Eddie Price, the short-field, while Joe Byrne was at his old position at third. In the outfield Manager Blount looked after the centre garden, while Gaffney was in left and Dawson, the West Virginia boy, who arrived on Saturday, in right field.

CRESSWELL'S WORK A FEATURE.

One of the out-standing features was the work of Cresswell, who pitched the first four innings for the Petes. The lanky southpaw was in fine form for his first start of the season. Although he did not try to hook many, his offerings were a decided puzzle to the combination team whose best efforts with the willow were two scratch hits. No less than nine batsmen struck three times in vain while the left-hander was on the rubber, and the Goodlow-Yans failed to register a run. Belting finished the game, but did not exert himself to any extent. The opposition collected six hits and three runs during the Swede's tenancy of the slab, while he fanned four men.

PETES FIELDED WELL.

The Petes played good ball in the field, considering the fact that it was their first game. Joe Byrne was in especially good form at third base, while Price also starred at short, doing some brilliant fielding. Fox had a light day at second. Both first-base candidates fielded their positions nicely, and they were even up at the bat, each poling out two safeties. Manager Blount looked good both in the field and at the bat.

Sid Tirrell, the young Rochester Semi-pro pitcher, who is a candidate for the Petes staff, worked the first five innings against the Bloomtmen and got a warm reception. During his term in the box the Petes hammered his offerings for ten hits, and counted eleven runs, although to Tirrell's credit it should be stated that several counters were the result of poor support on the part of his team-mates. Boggins, a local boy, who has been working out with the Peterborough team, finished the game. He was very wild and, although not hit hard, the Petes managed to notch four more runs in the three innings he worked.

Frank Schrage played for the combination team, and the white-haired infielder tore off some very classy fielding around the difficult corner.

BLOUNT WELL PLEASED.

Manager Blount was very well satisfied with the workout and with the manner in which his men performed. He was especially pleased with Cresswell's fine performance. The Petes got some base-running practice out of the engagement, in fact had their best workout since the spring training opened. Several games have been arranged for the latter end of the coming week, and in the meantime two practices a day will be gone through.

Pitchers Sterling and Tracey, and Outfielder Swarts, were expected to arrive to-night, and with their coming the Peterborough squad will be practically complete. Manager Blount will soon commence to weed out his squad, and the weak brothers will be heading for home.

LOUIE SCHETTLER

Who is expected to be one of the mainstays of the Bloomtmen's heaving staff this year.

Three Ottawa Players Let Out

Manager Shaughnessy Has Already Commenced to Cut Down His Squad

Ottawa Free Press—The axe has started falling on the Ottawa squad before they pitch camp. Anderson, an outfielder, was given his emancipation at his own request. Durkee, a pitcher, and Fried, an infielder, have been let go. Manager Shaughnessy has such a good bunch of known material who will battle for places, he does not care to waste any time on recruits. It is probable the weeding out process will be slow, on account of the number of good players who will be on deck. A great deal depends on just how manly Shag will bring along with him from Fort Wayne.

If the Senators only get a week of the weather now prevailing, they will be in grand trim for their tour through Michigan and Ohio, which starts next Saturday. So far as physical condition goes, practically the whole squad will be in shape. Team work is about all that will be required to develop. The four exhibition games booked should prove of great benefit. Swayne Field, Toledo, where two games will be played, is one of the finest ball parks in America.

Ottawa will be about the last club in the league to start practice. London has been out two weeks and starts on Monday playing an exhibition tour. Peterborough has already started work at Youngstown. St. Thomas has gathered in Michigan, Erie, is working out at home, as are Brantford, Hamilton and Toronto.

ERIE COUNTS ON "OSIE, OLD BOY" TO BE A STAR

Lanky Pitcher of the 1912 Peterborough Club is Now With the Yankees

ERIE, April 18. — While Old Sol peeked out between the clouds at intervals, "Heinie" Smith and ten of his Yankees worked out for the first time at Perry Field to-day. The men who were in town were ordered to the grounds shortly after 10 o'clock and were subjected to a three-hour workout.

As usual the first workout consisted in merely tossing the ball about, but some of the younger ones who were over anxious to display their wings were cautioned many times by Smith and the older members of the squad. With good weather Saturday the men will be given two workouts in preparation for the game with Buffalo Sunday.

Dunn, an outfielder, and Brown, pitcher, secured from Buffalo, arrived last night and were out for practice this morning.

In Osborne the Yankees will have probably the tallest man in the league. When Sutton put in an appearance his size was the subject of deep conversation around headquarters, but he dwindled into insignificance when the lanky Osborne hove into view.

Smith has confidence that Osborne will be a star. The tall one has plenty of speed and good control, but his delivery is peculiar. Smith will endeavour to have him change his style of delivery in hopes of bettering the pitcher, and if Osborne can do it, Smith says he is sure to stick with the big leagues will be after him before the season is over.

Jack Butler, "Dummy" Taylor's ex-battery partner, reminds one of Schang. He is about the same height and build as the ex-Sailor who is now sojourning in the Switzerland with St. Joe.

Butler will no doubt be a mainstay of the Yankee bench and should be a great help to the younger pitchers.

DAVY ROWAN,

Manager of Last Year's Ball Team, Who Has Signed a Contract With Dubuque in the Three I. League. Rowan Will Play First Base.

TROUT AND SCHAEFFER ARE WITH LEAFLETS

TORONTO, April 18.—Acting Manager "Knotty" Lee announces that the following players will report here on Monday morning to try out with the Toronto Canadien League team:

PETERBOROUGH ATHLETIC CLUB ARE CITY CHAMPIONS

The Leaders defaulted Saturday night's City League fixture to the Peterborough Athletic Club, thus giving the double blue team the City Basketball championship and possession of the cup for a year. An exhibition game was arranged in which Harper, Rew and Stewart, of the Leaders, Physical Director Thompson, and Harold Hall, of the Queen's Intercollegiate team, clashed with the Athletic Club. The latter won after a battle royal, by 29 points to 27. It was a see-saw fight all the way, the teams alternating in the lead. The Athletic Club were in front 18 to 16 at half time, and in the second half each team scored eleven points. The double blue drew away in the middle of the period, but the Stars finished strong and nearly caught the winners. Thompson was top-scorer for the night, with eight baskets to his credit, while Long and Darling scored the majority of the points for the Athletic Club.

The teams were:

Stars—Rew, Harper, Evans; Stewart, centre; Thompson, Hill, forwards.

P.A.C.—Darling, Craig, defence; Flowers, centre; Long, Smyths forwards.

Refree—Mr. Power.

KEN TRACEY HAS REPORTED

Examiner Special:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 20. — Pitcher Ken Tracey arrived from Detroit last night and reported to Manager Blount. "Trace" has been unable to report sooner, owing to illness at home. He is looking well and anticipates a good season.

The weather this morning was cool but the lowering clouds cleared off, and Manager Blount chased his full squad out this morning. Fungo, hitting, batting and fielding were the order of the practice and a good two hours workout was gone through. The weeding-out process will start after this afternoon's practice and the least promising of the rookies and the allowed to go. Several players are complaining of sore arms and are thinking seriously of consulting "Bonesetter" Reese, the famous specialist, who is a resident of Youngstown. There has been no further word of Swarts and Sterling.

CHAMPIONSHIPS ARE NEARLY ALL SETTLED

The official league championships with the exception of the Southern decided, the interest has gone out of the remaining matches to a large extent. Blackburn Rovers claim the first league, Notts County the second, and Celtic the Scottish, and Swindon and Crystal Palace will fight right up to the finish for the Southern League flag. Nevertheless Saturday's games furnished several surprises. Preston North End trying to get away from the bottom position on the premier table, beat Derby County at Derby, but are still very much in the danger zone. The defeat of both the cup finalists was not expected, but it may be that the teams are holding themselves in reserve for next Saturday, when the great game at the Palace will be honoured by the presence of King George. Notts County completed their schedule, and though they allowed Middlesboro to whack them their position as second league champions was assured some time ago. Swindon only drew their game with Exeter, and now lead Crystal Palace by only one point on a similar number of games played, the latter capturing a useful couple by defeating Norwich. Celtic, who won the Scottish Cup during the the week against Hibernians by four clear goals, again tackled the Raster Rosstmen on Saturday, and chalked up three more goals, thus firmly establishing their position as dual champions. The results of the games and the tables up to date are appended:

EVOLUTION OF A PITCHER.

In the Village of Kazoo
Dwelt a hick named Ruben Glue,

Ruben passed the time away
In the meadow pitching hay.

Ruben was a pitching freak;
He could pitch six days a week.

Starting in at break of day,
Ruben pitched the fragrant hay.

When the hay had all been pitched,
Forty Horses Rube unhitched.

Then he milked a herd of kine,
Till a quarter after nine.

Then with labour he was through—
Pretty soft for Ruben Glue.

Came a scout one summer's day,
Piped our hero pitching hay.

Said the scout: "I'll sign that hick;
Ruben Glue will surely stick."

Ruben soon got city hooks,
He is now a flossy bloke.

Riding around in Pullman cars,
One of baseball's greatest stars.

He is still a pitching freak.
Now he pitches once a week.

If he pitches any more,
Ruben's arm gets very sore.

Carembeau of Bridge Over Chemong Lake Died Sunday Night

Mr. Wm. O'Leary Had Attended the Bridge Since It Was Constructed in 1900

The death occurred on Sunday evening of Mr. Wm. O'Leary, for years caretaker of the Chemong bridge. The deceased was 72 years of age and resided in Otonabee before moving to Bridgenorth in 1900, when the bridge stretching across to the Ennismore side was erected and Mr. O'Leary was placed in charge. Every spring since that year it has been his duty to cut loose the bridge in order to facilitate the movement of the ice from the lake. This year the bridge was freed as usual, but the old caretaker's life sands silently moved out with the ice. Mr. O'Leary had been ill several weeks with pneumonia.

He is survived by his wife, three sons, Daniel, William and James, and six daughters, Mrs. Jas. Bogue of Peterborough, Mrs. P. Bennett of Montreal, Mrs. L. Calse of New York, Mrs. Geraghty, Bridgenorth, Miss Frances of Toledo and Miss Minnie of Peterborough.

Y. M. C. A. Boys Enjoyed Hike

Thirty-five members of the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. enjoyed a splendid 'hike' up the Canal, Saturday, under the leadership of Mr. G. Galley, Secretary of the Boys' Department. The boys left the 'Y' about 10 o'clock and journeyed up the Canal to the woods, at Nassau. Here they had dinner, lighting fires and cooking their own meals. After the noon-day feast, which was an event in itself, the boys played baseball, football, and other games. The affair was a success, numerically and every boy had a great time. All were loud in their praises of the 'hike' and are anxious to undertake a similar one whenever they get the chance.

MURDERER IS ARRAIGNED

Examiner Special:

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 20. Abraham Pepper, who last February killed Mrs. Dorothy Dannhauser Johnson, a bride of a week, and then attempted suicide, was arraigned in court to-day to stand trial on a charge of first degree murder. Both Pepper and his victim were residents of Tacoma. According to the statements made by Pepper after the tragedy he and Miss Hannhauser were engaged to wed when the young woman suddenly changed her mind and married Johnson. The couple came to San Francisco on their wedding trip Pepper followed and called upon the bride at her hotel. A few minutes' conversation was followed by the fatal shots. It is understood that the slayer will rely upon a plea of emotional insanity for his defense.

THE TREATMENT OF STREET TREES

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—While I do not agree with you that the elm tree is more ornamental than the maple, it is true that the latter requires a richer and deeper soil. You deserve credit for your encouragement of tree planting, and your valuable suggestions. You must have been impressed, as I have been, with the bad judgment of most people in planting their trees too closely together. In that case the trees never spread out or become shapely, but recoil from each other, and suffer for the want of air, which they need as much as we do. Trees never should be planted closer than thirty feet apart where the soil is suitable. There may be exceptional cases where they might be planted twenty-five feet apart, but never less than twenty feet, which would only leave a radius of ten feet for each to spread. I have known trees to spread one hundred feet.

Yours, etc.,
Arbor.

Peterborough, April 20, 1914.

Note.—"Arbor" is right in asserting that street trees are generally planted too closely together. As a result, we have lines of swampy, struggling trees. Persons who plant trees are so anxious for shade, or have so little judgment that they plant trees as if they were planting a row of corn or potatoes. But the planting has been done, and it is a heart-break to any man of right feeling to cut down a growing tree, and thus fine rows of trees that badly need thinning are left to go from bad to worse. Where trees are standing too close, say, fifteen or twenty feet apart, and the branches are intertwining, a good way is to select the tree to be removed and trim it as high as possible, so that the trees on each side can throw out lateral growth in the direction of each other, which can't be done with the dense growth of the superfluous tree between. In a year or two this growth will be so great that the tree selected for removal, can be removed without creating an unsightly gap. We, however, can never have satisfactory conditions of street or park trees till they are placed in charge of a competent, intelligent body—somebody that cares—and dealt with in a systematic manner.

British figures credit British shipyards with launching a greater tonnage of new vessels in the last two years than all the rest of the world combined.

THE STREET RAILWAY PROBLEM OF SERVING THE NORTH AND SOUTH CENTRAL DISTRICTS

While the Street Railway service is decidedly satisfactory to the marginal sections of the City, excluding East City, there is a wide central belt which is more and more claiming the attention of the P. R. R. officials. It may be safely said that the street cars almost go around the City, but there is a great central section still to be tapped. An outline of the street car routes at present would present the form of a big H, and the new problem deals with the easiest method of reaching the central area.

For instance, there is Aylmer Street cutting through the entire City, but only a block, although a wide one, from the George Street line. Rubidge Street is another main artery extending all the way south to the river after it loses itself in Park Street near the C.G.E.

Again there is a wide sweep of territory north of Hunter Street, between the Jackson Park and the George Street lines. How can a good line be selected to extend through the centre of this area with the best results to both the company and the citizens?

The company even now is considering these localities for new lines, although there is nothing promised for the near future.

It is understood that there is some talk of extending the George Street line west on Parry Street, north on Aylmer to Romaine, then out past the De Laval to Crawford's Grove. This would aim to serve the area between Byersville and George Street south lines.

The present proposal cuts down George to Romaine, but strikes back again to the George Street rails.

In the same way Reid Street has been claiming some attention by reason of the fact that it stretches north from Charlotte toward a district that is at present unbonshed. The time is bound to come when the interest of the company towards this extensive central section will be reduced to the operation stage and some of it might be carried out this year.

The Second Coming Of Christ

Bible Lecturer Discusses Subject at Royal Theatre Yesterday.

"Christ's Second Coming: Why? subject of the I.B.S.A. Bible lecture delivered here Sunday afternoon in the Royal Theatre, by Jos. Krappy, of Stirling.

The speaker admitted that his subject was more or less unpopular on account of the foolish theories sometimes advanced. He claimed, nevertheless, that the subject is an important one for all Christian people to consider carefully, and that, viewed in the sensible and reasonable light of the Scriptures it is a most interesting and inspiring study.

Why?

The lecturer called attention to the fact that our Saviour had a definite purpose in coming to this earth at His First Advent; namely, to pay the penalty for Adam's sin—not eternal life in torture, but death. At His second advent, He has an equally definite purpose: to liberate Adam and his posterity from that death.

Man can not be liberated from the curse until the Ransom-price has been paid, secured and applied on his behalf. "The wages of sin is death." Jesus, therefore, became a man and voluntarily gave up His human life. After receiving His reward of resurrection to a spiritual existence, He could have at once applied the merit of His human sacrifice on behalf of Adam, thus bringing Adam and his race from the tomb. But God had planned to further reward Jesus by giving Him a Bride, the Church, the Lamb's Wife. The Gospel Age was set aside for the selection of this Church. Jesus, therefore, postponed the second feature of His redemptive work until a future time. It will not be accomplished till His second coming. Following this, Adam and all his race "both the just and the unjust," will be awakened from the sleep of death and be fully liberated from the curse. We see, therefore, that without our Lord's second coming our redemption would be incomplete and His death would avail mankind nothing.

Christ's second coming, then, is for the purpose of, delivering mankind from death and the grave. "Death and hell (margin: "the grave") delivered up the dead that were in them." "All that are in their graves shall hear His voice and shall come forth." (John 5:28). We read in Rev. 20:1-6 that the first work of Christ for the world at the second advent will be to bind Satan for a thousand years, that he may deceive the nations no more. Then will begin their wonderful resurrection for the dead. All who have died shall be restored to life again. What a grand reunion that will be! During the thousand-year Judgment Day of Christ's presence with the world of mankind will be judged, instructed, restored to perfection, as it was once possessed in the Garden of Eden. This earth will blossom as the rose. The Scriptures are full of the blessings that will come as a result of Christ's second coming—not that all will be given eternal life, but all will be granted a fair chance to gain this life.

How?

The speaker made the startling assertion that Jesus would never come again in the flesh. "Yet a little while and the world seeth Me no more."

If He should come in the flesh, they could see Him, but since He will come as a spirit being, they will not be able to see Him any more than they can see the angels who are spirit beings. Jesus was put to death in the flesh, but raised a spirit being, according to the Bible. The bodies which He took on different occasions after His resurrection were merely mediums of communication with His disciples, just as He and the two angels used bodies of flesh when they visited Abraham and Lot. We are not to think that Jesus still has His mangled body in Heaven. Heaven will not be filled with disfigured bodies of flesh. Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of Heaven. Human legs, arms, eyes and ears would be of no service there. The Lord, who is now "the express image of the Father's person," is invisible to the human eye. The Church alone of all mankind will see Him again; for they will be resurrected with spiritual bodies, in the First Resurrection. "We know not what we shall be, but we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him," not as He was, in the flesh, but "as He is," in the spirit, in glory.

We may expect our Lord to come as a thief in the night, stealing upon the world unawares, invisible to them. As in the days of Noah, so now, they will first perceive that He is present by noticing the results of His reign. Just as now we know Satan is the Prince of this world by observing the results of HIS reign on every hand, so they will learn that the Lord is present, that He is binding the "strong man (Satan) of the house, and spoiling his goods," when they see Satan's works being overthrown in the great Time of Trouble.

When?

The speaker did not startle his audience by setting a positive date for the Lord's return, as some have tried to do, to their disappointment and chagrin. He did state, however, that the Bible is quite definite in its time prophecies; that the Jubilee cycles and the parallel dispensations, together with many other striking time features, clearly indicate that we are now in the time of great "running to and fro," the "Time of the End," the Harvest of the Gospel Age. If the Bible be correct in its testimony, and if the signs of the times are at all to be relied upon, it is evident to all Christian students that our Lord's return is due. The Apostle, after showing that the world would not recognize the Lord's presence at first, continues, addressing the Church (I Thes. 5:4): "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that Day should overtake you as a thief." Those who watch, who diligently search the Scriptures will, in due time, be instructed concerning the Lord's second presence.

In conclusion, the speaker urged all to trim their lamps without delay and keep them burning.

"NEUTONE" WALL PAINT

A New and Pleasing Washable Paint For Walls and House Decoration

There is no home decoration more pleasingly simple than walls of plain, soft colour tints. Through the courtesy of Campbell and Best, the Examiner had the opportunity of examining a room finished in Neutone, a modern, washable Flat wall paint. This paint produces a subdued flat finish of a soft, velvety effect, and with great depth of tone that is pleasing and restful to the eye. Having the great advantage of being washable, it is both durable and sanitary. When a Neutone wall becomes soiled, a sponge or soft cloth and luke-warm water will remove dirt and finger marks and renew the soft, velvety appearance of this finish. Neutone is only one of the many excellent Martin Senour paint specialties carried by Campbell and Best, and should by all means receive the consideration of all those who desire to emerge from the house-cleaning season with bright, clean and artistically finished homes.

Police Discover More Of The Stolen Goods

The hang-out, hide or rendezvous of a band of thieves was discovered on Friday afternoon by chance, when the Chief of Police and Constable Foster were out on a business mission in the interests of law and order.

The two officers, who were on bicycles, visited the different wards, wheeling along in silence, or, to be painfully particular, they were enwrapped in meditation.

The banks of the river were closely scanned. Was it a drowning or a suicide? No one knew or yet attempted a solution of the secret movements of the officers.

Later on it developed that they were looking up some goods which were stolen, the facts in connection with which must of necessity be kept quiet, or it might undo what the police have undertaken.

In making this search the officers wended their way to the G. T. R. bridge, which crosses the Scugog in proximity to Durham Street east, when a hunt through the vacant property close by, which is covered with an undergrowth of willows and cedars, revealed the startling fact that a 'hide,' not as elaborate as the one found outside of Orillia was located in the bushes, and within this hidden resort were found wrenches, chisels and various tools which are used by burglars in perpetrating their crimes. The officers took the bunch of stuff in charge, and will follow the scent given them to the end. From articles found the frequenters of the place had not been long gone before the police arrived.

Some of the tools bore G. T. R. stamp, and are supposed to have been stolen from the company either in Lindsay or some other town.

FINGER TORN FROM HIS HAND

On Friday Mr. John Fox, of Emily had his right hand badly injured by having it caught in the cog of a sawing machine. The little finger was torn off and two other fingers badly injured. Dr. McAlpine attended the injured man, who is now in the Ross Hospital.

"How Are The Dead Raised Up And With What Body Do They Come?"

Eloquent Sermon on Interesting Subject by Rev. F. J. Sawers at St. Luke's Church Last Evening

BEST ATTESTED FACT

"How are the dead raised up?" and "with what body do they come?" was the subject of an interesting discourse by Rev. F. J. Sawers at St. Luke's church, last evening. His remarks were followed with rapt attention by a large congregation.

Mr. Sawers announced his text from the thirty-fifth verse of the fifteenth chapter of the first book of Corinthians, the words of which formed the title of his theme. Referring to his sermon of a week ago on the resurrection, the reverend speaker, quoting the great Dr. Arnold, said, it was one of the best attested facts in human history. With that important fact was the pledge that the resurrection was for all those who believed, and strove day by day to follow in the footsteps of the Master. It was a great call to newness of life.

In studying the records of ancient beliefs, remarked the speaker, there was found a hope of a continuance of life after death. The Egyptian, Chinese, the Mahommedan believed in a life to come, while the Indians of the North American continent spoke of their happy hunting grounds as a place where they met at death. Throughout all was a great expectation, a great looking forward. At the best it was only an inspiration to these people, the great proof being only, in the first Easter day, which brought to life a promise of a continuance in the world to come.

"How are they raised up and with what body do they come" asked the speaker. "The body when consigned to the grave goes back to its original elements. Will those identical elements be collected once more That would indeed be a marvellous miracle. Will the frame of man be the same The answer is that is found in the analogy of nature. Scientists tell us that we are continually in a state of change. The outward physical appearance changes, but the identity remains the same. You may stand on a bridge and watch the water flow underneath you. It is not the same as flowed five minutes before, but the river is the same. Then again with a seed. It is put in the ground and with the aid of God's sunlight, matured into a plant. Is the plant identical with the seed? Not at all. So it is with the resurrection of the dead. The body is sown in corruption. It is sown in weakness, but raised in power. It is sown a natural body and raised a spiritual body."

Rev. Mr. Sawers, continuing, said that one's identity was never to be lost. The spiritual body would be the complete expression of one's own spiritual self. Looking on faces of different people, one sees expressions of characteristics of the life of the person. But sometimes mistaken way marks. The expression did not always reveal a true story. In the spiritual body man's character would be more truly delineated than in the impression it left upon the physical frame. It cannot be said exactly of what nature the spiritual body would be, but man's identity would be retained. The perfecting of the spiritual self should begin here, and now, that a great spiritual personality may be fully ours in the life that is to come.

Presentation To Mr. L. M. Hayes

do me honour, and I feel that I can only say, "I thank you," and I say it from the bottom of my heart. I have spent many years in Peterborough. I came here when I was 24, and I have lived here ever since, and I cannot fully believe that I am going to leave this City, where in partnership with Mr. Hall, I have had a most contented life for over 27 years.

A Hallowed Office.

This office seems to be somewhat hallowed. My earliest recollections are with it, and with the kindnesses I received from you gentlemen of the Bar, and of the people of Peterborough, and which have been a great deal of satisfaction to me. We have seen many of our brother-practitioners depart, always with sorrow. Our relations have been of the most pleasant character, and it is my wish and hope that the relations that have always existed will always continue.

"To Have, Keep and Hold."

I thank you for the handsome present you have given me. I take it to have, to keep and to hold, and it shall serve as a memory to me and my dear wife of all the kindnesses you have bestowed upon us for so many years. I hope it will be my good fortune to come in contact with my brothers in Peterborough.

Due Consideration.

If any of you come to Guelph and appear before me, I can assure you that you will receive due consideration.

"Every time I pour coffee out of this dear little pot, I shall think of my many, many friends in Peterborough," said Mrs. Hayes when called on to speak.

Mr. and Mrs. Hayes were honoured with three hearty cheers.

Mr. Goodwill also presented Judge Hayes with an address from the Law Association, voicing the regret of all the members at the severance of the relations that for so many years had so peacefully existed.

Knocked Down By A Vehicle

An accident which, luckily, was attended with no serious results, but at the same time caused a great deal of excitement, happened about 9.30 on Saturday evening, at the corner of George and Hunter Streets. Traffic at that time was much congested, and it was with difficulty that pedestrians could cross the road. Several people were waiting their opportunity to cross, two ladies, who live in the west end, being in front of several people on the south side of the west corner of the junction of the streets mentioned. Several vehicles had passed, and a favourable opening presenting itself, the foot traffic began to wend its way across the street. A horse and rig at this moment came dashing across George Street and pushed its way between the people, who justifiably began to draw back. The horse got by safely, but according to the story of one of the ladies who was knocked down, the mind whirled the latter struck her and her companion, and both fell heavily to the roadway. Willing hands lifted them and took them into a neighbouring store, where it was found that several bad bruises were the only injuries sustained. F. C. Hayward secured a taxi and escorted the ladies to their home in the west end of the City.

CHORAL SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S

Splendid Programme of Easter Music Was Given

The fully choral evensong, with Easter numbers afterwards in place of the sermon, given in St. John's Church was a splendid tribute to the faithful work accomplished by this fine body of singers. Numbers by Handel and Berthold Tours were included. Excellent solo work was accomplished by Mr. H. W. Morphet in Granier's "Hosanna," with quartette refrain, by Mr. T. Ward in "Lead Thou Me on," and Master Sam Whitehouse in "O Happy Day." Mr. Morphet received a cordial welcome to his old seat after two years in the wardenship.

The accompanists were finely played and an inspiring service ended with a spirited rendition of the Hallelujah chorus by choir and organ. The choristers were heartily thanked for their good work by the Rev. Canon Davidson, and Mr. R. J. Dovey, on returning to the vestry.

Celebration Of St. George's Day

As already announced the St. George's Day service will be held this evening in St. John's Church, at 8 p.m., when the sermon will be preached by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Kingston, and Archdeacon Warren, and a number of clergy from the surrounding districts will also attend. The following bodies and societies will be represented:- The Mayor and members of the Corporation, St. George's Society, Sons of England, and officers of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers. There is no doubt that this will be one of the most impressive St. George's Day services ever held in the City, to mark the anniversary day of the Patron Saint of England.

It is also understood that a private meeting of churchmen will be held in the Savoy, this evening, at 6 p.m., at which the question of opening the fifth Church of England Mission in the City will be discussed.

THE DUST EVIL

Anti-microbe Makes Suggestion to the Sanitary Inspector

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The press has devoted much praise to Mr. Spence for his efforts in keeping down disease and deservedly so, but the greatest cause of disease has been sadly neglected. I refer to the spring dust. It is true that the Council has been remiss in not performing its duty every succeeding spring. Why, no one can tell, when fraught with such terrible consequences. But could not Mr. Spence, by virtue of his authority, under the Health Act, compel some action that would bring relief to a long-suffering community?

Yours truly,

Anti-Microbe.

Peterborough, April 20, 1914.

Split Log Drag In Operation

LINDSAY, April 20.—A representative of the Post saw a standard split log drag in operation on the Chemong road in Peterborough County on Saturday, as it was doing good work in levelling off the highway. This machine is similar to the one the Council will purchase for the Board of Works.

Thirteen Were Baptized At Park Street Church

Crowded congregations were the order of the day at Park Street Baptist Church yesterday. The pastor at the morning service preached on "Life's Greatest Problem." Four were baptized. In the evening Mr. Connors spoke on "Union With Christ." Nine were baptized.

Five of those baptized during the day were heads of families. At the Men's Bible Class in the afternoon thirty-three were present.

Firemen Had A Ladder Drill

This morning the fire brigade had a couple of hours' ladder practice at the Y. W. C. A., and went through all sorts of manoeuvres in splendid style. Quite a number of people saw the drill, which included some very hazardous climbs to the higher stories. Next Monday morning the firemen will be put through a hose drill at the corner of Simcoe and Stewart Streets. During the summer the drills will be continued every Monday morning. Mayor Buller was among those who watched the drill this morning and he was pleased with the fire laddies' performance.

EMILY FARM HAND ASSAULTS EMPLOYER

Constable Cornwall, of Omemee, brought a man, W. Whittaker, to town Saturday morning charged with assaulting a farmer called Blackwell, yesterday near the village. The case came up before County Magistrate Moore this afternoon. It is alleged that Whitaker, who was employed by the farmer, ran amuck the other morning and threatened Blackwell with a pitchfork.

MANY MEN DISAPPOINTED

Hundreds of Unemployed Told for Jobs on Street Paving Work

Work was commenced by Messrs. Foley and Gleason this morning in connection with their contract to pave the central streets of the city. Fifty men were taken on, and the taking up of the street railway between Brock and McDonnel streets was started. Heavy rails, the same weight as those already in use on George street between Brock and Charlotte streets, will be put down, and as soon as that is done, the paving of the street between Brock and McDonnel streets will be commenced. It is expected that the actual paving of this portion of George street will commence in a week and a half, and the work will be pushed with all possible speed.

This morning fifty men were employed, about fifteen of them being local labourers. A large number applied for work that could not be hired to-day, but before the work has been long in progress one hundred and fifty men will be engaged in the paving. More will be taken on each day until the working force is at its largest. Asked this morning how many men had applied for work on the taking up of the rails, one of the officials replied: "Oh, there must have been about five hundred." He modified the statement a moment later however, and explained that what he intended to convey was that a very large number had applied. The men in charge of the work have no idea just how many local men expressed their anxiety for a job this morning, but say that there were too many to estimate the number even approximately.

All of the street paving to be done this year will be completed, if nothing unforseen interferes, by the 15th or 16th of June. The streets to be paved include Water street from Murray to Charlotte streets, Charlotte street as far west as Park, George street south to the C.P.R. station, and north to McDonnel street, Aylmer street between Charlotte and Murray street, Murray street from Water to Aylmer, Brock street, Hunter street and Simcoe streets from Water to Aylmer.

At present the patrons of the street railway have to cover the distance from McDonnel to Brock streets on foot as the track is torn up there.

Mr L. M. Hayes Left For Guelph This Afternoon

Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., left this afternoon for Guelph, where to-morrow morning he will take the oath of his new office as senior judge of Wellington County. Judge Hayes will return to the City Friday evening for the week end and expects to make a number of these visits to Peterborough before permanently taking up residence in Guelph.

SOUTH CITY C. M. B. A. ATTENDED IN A BODY

The members of the Sacred Heart branch of the C.M.B.A. received Holy Communion in a body on Sunday morning at the 8.30 o'clock mass. About 75 members were in attendance. Mr. Joseph Picard, Sr., acted as senior marshall.

DEATH OF LUMBER KING

KANE, Pa., April 20.—T. D. Collins, the Forest county lumber king, is dead at his home in Nebraska, at the age of 83 years. Mr. Collins was born at Cortland March 3, 1831, and came to this section of the county 60 years ago and settled at Beaver Creek near Hickory, Pa.

Buying up timber lands in Forest county at small prices, Collins amassed a fortune estimated to be $25,000,000. He owned large saw mills at Nebraska, Mayburg and Kellettville, all in Forest county. In 1900 he built the Sheffield and Tionesta railroad, which gave him an outlet for his large supply of lumber. He owned large tracts of timber in California, Oregon and Washington, which experts claim it would take 20 years to cut down.

Mr. Collins did not belong to any lodge and never mingled in society, working the same as any common labourer up to the time he was taken ill. He even milked his own cows. Collins was an active Methodist, once giving $50,000 to foreign missions. He is survived by an only son, Everill F. Collins, who resides in Oregon. The funeral was held in Tionesta, where he was buried beside his wife, who died six years ago.

C. P. R. HELD FIRM ALTHOUGH THE DAY'S MARKET WAS WEAK

C.P.R. leaders showed a ray of hope from the market to-day from the fact that the Canadian stock held its ground firmly under conditions that appeared quite bearish. The American stock struck a new level at 98 7-8, and Baltimore and Ohio dropped to 87 5-8, another new low for some time in the quotations of this stock. Lehigh dropped to 138 3-4 and is sympathy with the new lows. C.P.R. was practically the only strength in the rails, Southern Pacific, U.P., M.O. P. and Reading and other rails showing more or less weakness. U. P. seems to be approaching a usually good buying price under normal conditions. Unquestionably the Mexican situation affected the whole market. Steel lost a half point on the day's trading. The market seems to be hanging in the balance waiting for some decisive action one way or the other in the Mexican affair.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"When shall I ask to have my pay raised?"

It is most this question in my office, in my club, and on the street.

With many, with most, the question is one asking for a higher wage seems to be the uppermost of all.

Why not?

Those who work labour, primarily for money, and their income is dependent upon what is paid them by the day, by the week or by the month.

Not to be interested in one's salary, or not to think about a raise of pay, is indicative of laziness.

If you are a salary-receiver or a wage-earner, you should think about a raise, whether what you receive is small or large. The more you can get legitimately, the more you have a right to have, and should have.

But wait! As a worker, whether you are behind the loom, a salesman on the road, a clerk behind the counter, a stenographer or a bookkeeper, you are a commodity, commercially considered, just so much merchandise. What you have, and what you can do with it, are your stock in trade. To attempt to sell your goods—that is yourself—for more than they are worth is sheer folly. To be satisfied with a cut price, or with one below your worth, is equally unprofitable and absurd.

You should sell your ability for its market price, at neither a discount or a premium. If you sell at a discount, you are a fool, unless necessity offers no alternative. If you oversell yourself, you are equally foolish, because you cannot hold your job.

The time to ask for a raise of pay is when you are convinced that you are worth more, and when you have reasonable proof to back your opinion. Unless you are worth more, and can prove it, say nothing about more pay.

What you are worth to yourself is not the only thing to be taken into consideration. What your particular ability is worth to your employer is all important to him. Therefore, you cannot hope to have your pay raised unless you are worth more to yourself and worth more to the man for whom you work. When you believe that the conditions are right, go to your employer; do not demand more pay, but have a heart-to-heart talk with him. If you are worth more to yourself, and he feels you are worth more to him, and business conditions are right, he will give you more, if he is the sort of man for whom you ought to work. If he isn't, make a change as early as expediency will allow.

Let me caution you against a premature request for raise of pay. Better wait a little while, and have it come to you without the asking than appear to force the issue.

The right kind of an employer is interested in you, and he will not resent any suggestion on your part or any request for advice. He will meet you half way, but him him a chance to come his half of the way first. Then, if he does not, take the initiative yourself.

Get your price, provided your goods — and that means you — are worth your price.

IMMIGRANTS ON SPECIAL TRAIN

This forenoon a special C. P. R. train arrived at the local station en route for Toronto.

On board were several immigrants from Southampton, England, under Salvation Army auspices, who came by the Cunard Liner, Alsunia, which arrived at Halifax, on Saturday. The future Canadians were five hours late at Montreal, owing to a freight wreck, the other side of St. Johns, which necessitated the special train to Peterborough and Toronto.

The immigrants all looked well, and seemed to have had a fair passage, excepting a snowstorm before reaching Halifax.

SUSTAINED A BROKEN LEG

Mrs. H. S. McDonald of 338 Rubidge Street, met with a painful accident on Saturday evening last at 5.30 p.m., when she was boarding a street railway car, at the junction of Charlotte and George Streets. She was in the act of stepping into the interior part of the car when her right leg doubled beneath her, causing a simple fracture of the tibia, between the knee and the ankle, of the right leg.

Sergt. Brown, P. C. Thymister and P. C. Patterson assisted her from the street car into an automobile, and removed her to her home. Dr. McPherson was called and reduced the fracture. According to medical testimony the weak condition of the limb caused the accident. The street car was not in motion at the time the accident occured.

PETERBORO' CLUB REGRET DEPARTURE OF MR. L. M. HAYES

Judge and Mrs. J. M. Hayes were honoured Saturday night by the presentation of a handsome cabinet of silver from the members of the Peterborough Club of which Mr. Hayes has been a member for many years. The presentation was made in the Club Rooms, a large number of members being present for the occasion. Mr. E. G. Patterson, President of the Peterborough Club, read the address and made the presentation on behalf of the other members. The address expressed the regret of the Club at losing Mr. Hayes and conveyed to him and to Mrs. Hayes the best wishes for their bright future in their new home. Mrs. Hayes was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses.

Judge Hayes made a brief reply, thanking the members for the gift, and expressing his sorrow due to the fact that his appointment to the Judgeship of Wellington County necessitated the severance of his connection with the Peterborough Club, and its very pleasant associations.

Other members of the Club spoke of the regret of the Club at Mr. Hayes' departure, and all united in giving three hearty cheers in honour of the departing member and Mrs. Hayes.

CHOICE RECIPES

LEFTOVER ROAST BEEF STEW.

Put in a kettle the leftover bits from a roast of beef. Saw the bone in pieces and add that. Stew gently. Add vegetables and dumplings in the usual way. Any leftover gravy is added to the liquid to form a part of the gravy for the stew.

MOCK CHERRY PIE.

Chop one quart of cranberries, add two and one-half cupfuls of sugar, or, if preferred, two cupfuls of sugar and one-half cupful of molasses. Then add one tablespoonful of flour, with one-half cupful of water, or one tablespoonful of corn starch, wet with a little cold water to which one cupful of boiling water is added. If liked, add one cupful of chopped raisins. Sufficient for two pies.

With the Household Editor.

HAM SCALLOP.

Two cups chopped ham, two cups cream sauce, two hard-boiled eggs chopped fine; one cup fresh bread crumbs. Stir meat in cream sauce. Put half this in baking dish, spread eggs over this; then put the remainder of meat on top, cover with bread crumbs and brown in oven. If you like chili or green peppers, put little in cream sauce. Delicious lunch dish.

INDIAN PUDDING.

Pour 1 quart of hot milk gradually over 3 tablespoons of granulated Indian meal, cook over boiling water for one hour, stirring frequently to prevent lumping, then add ½ cup of molasses, 3 beaten eggs, ¼ cup of melted butter, 1 teaspoon of salt, ½ teaspoon each of cinnamon and nutmeg and 1 quart of cold milk. Turn into a buttered baking dish, bake in a slow oven and serve with whipped cream sweetened and slightly flavoured with vanilla.

A Bit Hasty.

Husband—Did that dress-suit case come?

Wife — The one full of dreadful clothes from the office? Yes; and they came just in time to give away to the missionary society.

Husband (in a sepulchral voice)—It belonged to a countryman I have invited home to dinner. (Doorbell rings.)

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The market was weak at the opening was quiet, with nothing to indicate and at the end of the first hour trading was quiet, with nothing to indicate the development of definite tendency. There was still the possibility that use might be averted. New Haven was firm, notwithstanding the announcement that the financial plan would not be published to-day. Permanent recovery in the general stock market should take place, beginning with the completion of liquidation in U.S.S. We have taken this position and do not see any reason to change this view.

The raiding of U. S. S. is effective in clearing up the final reaction from the January rise.

We believe scale down buying of good securities advisable on declines.

THE UNITED STATES MAY SEIZE MEXICAN CUSTOMS HOUSES TO-DAY

Policy of Administration For Immediate Drastic Action Against Huerta is Supported by All But a Small Minority in Houses.

PLAN OF ACTION

WASHINGTON, April 21. — In thirty-six hours, possibly less, the United States Government will have taken possession of the Mexican customs houses at Tampico and Vera Cruz.

Detailed plans for landing of marines at these two important coast towns were completed at a conference at the White House between President Wilson, Secretaries Bryan, Garrison and Daniels, Major-General Wood and Rear Admirals Fiske and Blue and John Lind.

"No order to the army and navy will be issued to-night," was the announcement made after the conference, action temporarily being referred until Congress acts on the joint resolution approving the President's purpose of using the armed forces of the United States to enforce its demands against Huerta, growing out of the arrest at Tampico of American bluejackets.

The resolution passed the House last night by a vote of 337 to 37, after a spirited debate. For several hours it was considered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, with prospects of an all-night session of the Senate or a recess until early to-day.

The House adjourned until to-day, and President Wilson, worn out by the day's work, retired after hearing that the House had adopted the resolutions.

Persons who were in touch with the President said the steps which would be taken by the United States "short of war" were of a nature which would not require formal notification to the powers in the same sense that a declaration of blockade or other preliminaries to war would. Foreign Governments will be kept informed of developments, however.

The debate in the House brought out the fact that while the navy probably would block Mexico off from commerce with the United States, it would not interfere with the passage to and fro of foreign vessels, though cargoes discharged on the shore might be held at the customs houses if they were occupied by American forces.

The joint resolution passed by the House, and which was before the Senate at a late hour last night, read as follows:

The joint resolution justifying the employment of the armed forces of the United States in enforcing certain demands against Victoriano Huerta: Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, in Congress assembled, that the President of the United States is justified in the employment of the armed forces of the United States to enforce the demands upon Victoriano Huerta for unequivocal amends to the Government of the United States for affronts and indignities committed against this Government by Gen. Huerta and his representatives."

A bill to appropriate $50,000,000 to be expended by the President was introduced by Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the military affairs committee, to which the bill was referred.

The Chamberlain bill provides:

"That the President of the United States be and he is hereby authorized to expend in his discretion for the national defence and for each and every purpose connected therewith the sum of fifty million dollars out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, which sum shall remain available until expended."

This is identical with the bill passed before the war with Spain.

Justification Strong.

LONDON, April 21.—The Times, in an editorial on the Mexican crisis, says this morning:

"The crisis has come in a form which, as sincere friends of the American people, we could well have wished different. Their justification for forcible interference in Mexican affairs is far stronger than the particular pretext upon which the President decided to abandon his policy of watchful waiting.

What About Japan?

BERLIN, April 21.—The German press as a rule is remarkably sparing in comment on the Mexican situation.

The Taegliche Rundschau asks:

"What will Japan, the natural enemy of the United States, do, and what will the other powers do?"

The Boersen Courier sees in Gen. Huerta's refusal to salute "The first admission that he does not feel sure of his position and is now playing his last trump earlier than was expected—namely, the policy of rallying all elements in Mexico against the foreign aggression."

TORONTO, April 21. — Although the matter has been kept secret it is learned that Sir James Whitney has paid a visit to the Parliament Buildings. The Premier was escorted to his own office and he took a seat at his desk.

The visit was made during the morning while the Premier was out for a walk with a friend. PROBE MUST GO ON

Municipalities Reject John W. Moyes' Settlement Plan

OFFERS BOND AND BONDS

KINCARDINE, April 21—John W. Moyes, promoter of the West Shore Railway, which is now under the probe of the Ontario Railway Board, has made an offer of settlement to the municipalities concerned. This offer was considered at a meeting of representatives of the municipalities yesterday and was rejected, the representatives agreeing unanimously to press the inquiry and take chances on the final outcome.

The offer from Mr. Moyes is to return to the municipalities $179,000 worth of unguaranteed bonds secured and $2,000 in cash, plus the railroad as it stands at present. In the latter is included the right-of-way, the steel and ties laid, the value of grading and other work done, and the equipment at present on the road. There was nothing to indicate what was wanted in exchange, but it is understood that had the proposition been accepted the inquiry, so far as the municipalities are concerned, would have been dropped.

The proposition, which was in writing, had been given to Mr. Wm. Proudfoot, K.C., M.P.P., and was read by him at the meeting, which was held in Kintail, the central point for all the representatives in the heart of the district affected by the railroad.

After the offer was considered the following resolution, moved by James Brown, of Huron, and seconded by Charles Stewart, of Ashfield, was carried unanimously: "That the offer of settlement now made by Mr. Moyes be not accepted, and that the solicitors be instructed to press the inquiry to a conclusion as speedily as possible."

The investigation resumes before the Ontario Railway Board to-day.

FRANCIS JOSEPH ILL.

Anxiety In Anxious About Condition of Emperor.

VIENNA, Austria, April 21.—"The Emperor Francis Joseph passed a fairly comfortable night. His health otherwise is not unsatisfactory." This was the official bulletin issued at the Palace of Schoenbrunn yesterday. It was also stated that his majesty rose at his usual early hour and transacted official business.

The guarded language of the official bulletin caused apprehension in Vienna that the Emperor's condition was graver than was admitted by his physicians. Fear was expressed in court circles that unless the catarrh from which he is suffering diminishes within a short time serious complications may develop.

Child Is Killed.

ST. CATHARINES, April 21.—While Mrs. Chauncey Dittrick of this city was visiting Sunday with relatives in Buffalo, her three-year-old son Chauncey was killed by the accidental discharge of a revolver in the hands of his cousin, who was in the act of cleaning it.

The child climbed on the young man's knee, moving the trigger by accident, the bullet entering his temple, passing through his brain and coming out at the back of his head.

He was a member on the A. F. & A. M., and major and paymaster of the 15th regiment. A widow, one son and two daughters survive.

TO GO TO CAPITAL?

Plans For U. S. Campaign Include Capture of Mexico City.

WASHINGTON, April 21. — The war plans of the Government—for all the preparations show the intention to resort to the actual use of force within a limited area of Mexican territory—embrace the use of the army as well as the navy and the marine corps. The program agreed on calls for joint operations of the three branches of the military service with the marines.

In the discussion of an aggressive plan of operations short of war, having for its object either the rescue of Americans and other foreigners in the City of Mexico or the lesser task of holding the town and port of Vera Cruz against a force of Mexicans, it was agreed that the marines after landing at Vera Cruz should push forward along the line of railway leading to the capital, for a distance of eight miles, to a point where a concrete bridge spans a canyon. This is a place of great strategic importance, and will be one of the hard nuts to crack if an advance on the City of Mexico should be considered necessary.

The elaborate plans drawn for marine corps operations contemplate the taking of the City of Mexico, for the purpose of rescuing Americans and other foreigners if necessary. A quick dash for the Mexican capital before the arrival of any troops at Vera Cruz is the keynote of the plan. All the offensive military plans for the navy and the marine corps have not been completed, but the basic principle of the program of operations decided on contemplates the seizure of Vera Cruz and Tampico and the blockade of both coasts of Mexico.

BECK HAS NEW BILL

Province Will Build, Equip and Operate Hydro Radials

CHANGES IN LIQUOR LAW

TORONTO, April 21. — A provincial control and operation of radial railways was presented by Hon. Adam Beck in the Legislature yesterday. The bill while repealing the special measure of 1913 provides that funds secured by Hydro-Electric bond issues guaranteed by the province may be used for the construction of the new railways.

The change in the plan relieves the municipalities from their responsibility of operation and supervision and provides a more substantial financing arrangement than that of floating municipal debentures. The burden will be distributed equally between province, commission and municipalities.

To save the Government and commission each municipality interested will deposit debentures equalling the expenditure, and they will also provide for the deficits which accrue from interest or sinking fund.

Following out some ideas suggested by deputations bonds for construction will be issued on a 50-year basis and for the first ten of these when the lines are struggling to get on their feet municipalities will not be charged any sinking fund deficits at all. No chance will be taken, however, of a municipality failing in its obligations, and their debentures may be sold in the market if the commission thinks necessary, the commission bonds being a first mortgage on the radials.

Before any municipality enters agreement the Lieutenant-Governor's approval must be gained and the electors who vote on money bylaws will then vote on it at the polls.

The change in the Government policy is understood to have been caused by the desire to centralize the management and to ensure certain capable men being in charge. This bill is now taken to open the way for all places so desiring to advance at once upon electric railway schemes.

Hon. Mr. Hanna introduced amendments to the provincial liquor license administration. One thing arranged for is the enforcement of the Scott Act by means of the Government banking with consolidated revenue from the operation of the act in municipalities where the fines collected are not large enough to permit adequate enforcement. Government and municipality will each contribute one-half and a separate account subject to audit will be kept. The operation in unorganized districts will be under the Government entirely.

One change is to include Good Friday along with Christmas as one of the days on which liquor cannot be sold.

The right to question an intemperated person in local option districts will hereafter be allowed in any "dry" district, and he may be forced to explain the circumstances.

It is now left to the magistrate to place on the ballot list any person he thinks proper.

Druggists as well as licensees will have the privilege of appealing from convictions and the fines and penalties accumulating in local option districts will be placed in a common fund for the use of the constituency in enforcing the law.

"MILLIONAIRE" WAS CRAZY.

So Judge Sets Aside Will Providing Medical Institution.

MONTREAL, April 21.—The will of Abraham Lincoln Pacaud, who died at Verdun Asylum on Jan. 29 last worth $200, has been annulled by Justice Charbonneau on the ground of insanity.

Pacaud, who was a well-known insurance broker in the city, seemed to be under the illusion that he was a millionaire and left annuities totalling about $50,000 a year to various parties, including young ladies the testator had known many years ago in Chicago. After the deaths of the parties named the estate was to go to McGill University to found a department for the cure of malignant diseases such as cancer, to be known as the "Abraham Lincoln Pacaud Foundation."

Fall Fatal After All.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 21.—Achilles Morand, aged 18, who fell 45 feet from a windmill last Tuesday, and was apparently unhurt, took suddenly worse Sunday night and died in a few minutes. Morand, who weighed 260 pounds, had got up after his fall and walked away without any apparent injury, after bouncing into a water trough.

R. H. Clemens Goes to Monteith.

GALT, April 21.—It was announced yesterday that the resignation of R. H. Clemens, local district representative of the Department of Agriculture, has been tendered, to take effect on the first of June. Mr. Clemens is going to New Ontario to become a member of the Government demonstration and experimental farm at Monteith.

HALIFAX, N.S., April 21. — Subpoenas have been issued for practically all the staff of The Evening Mail, the paper which insinuated in an article published last week that if the Legislature passed the Tramways Bill now before it the public could only conclude that the members had been bought.

MAJ.-GEN. COTTON DEAD.

Former Inspector-General of Militia Passes Away Suddenly.

ALMONTE, Ont., April 21.—Maj.-Gen. W. H. Cotton, former inspector-general of the Canadian Militia, died suddenly at the residence of his son-in-law, Alex. Rosamond, here last night at 11 o'clock.

The late brigadier was well known throughout Canada and especially in Ontario, having commanded No 2 military district with headquarters at Toronto, before being appointed inspector-general of the militia in succession to Gen. Sir William Otter. He was the son of the late Henry Cotton, of Montreal, and was born in that city on Jan. 7, 1848. He was educated at Quebec High School and received his commission as a second lieutenant in the Quebec Garrison Artillery in 1866.

In 1883 he was promoted commandant of the Royal Canadian Artillery, with rank of lieutenant-colonel, and 13 years later was made full colonel. In 1907 he was appointed brigadier-general. His staff service was long and varied, he having served as A. A. G. for artillery and quartermaster-general at Ottawa.

His widow, four sons and three daughters survive.

JOBLESS INVADE HALL.

Montreal's Out-of-Works Seek Employment From Mayor.

MONTREAL, April 21. — Mayor Martin's rush invitation to out-of-works to call at the City Hall yesterday morning was answered by fully 3,000 men of all classes. By 10 o'clock it needed about 100 policemen to handle the mob. The recently-elected mayor promised work for 2,000 on street cleaning and repairs, and there ensued a wild scramble for tickets entitling the bearer to work nine hours for the city for $2.25.

A detachment of three to four hundred disappointed ones rushed one of the entrances and forced its way to the door of the mayor's office. All that he promised them was that they might be employed later on in the spring.

THE KIKUYU AFFAIR.

Something About the Struggle Waging in the Anglican Church.

A strange word, Kikuyu, which few persons ever heard until within recent weeks, has suddenly become the battle-cry of the severest struggle the Church of England has known for a generation.

Kikuyu is a small inland town of British East Africa, the Protestant missionaries of which saw themselves confronted by a great spread of Mohammedanism and Roman Catholicism among the native while doctrinal differences hindered and stultified their own propaganda. To minimize the results of overlapping and sectional antagonisms, a conference of Church of England, Baptist, Methodist, Congregational and Presbyterian missionaries met at Kikuyu last June and agreed on a division of territory and a general scheme of co-operation. A united communion service was held in the Presbyterian kirk, the Episcopalian Bishop of Mombasa officiating.

The admission of non-conforming missionaries to the communion service of the Church of England was promptly denounced as heresy by the Bishop of Zanzibar, who pressed for the impeachment of his two responsible colleagues, the Bishops of Uganda and Mombasa. The Archbishop of Canterbury has decided against impeachment and the matter is now to be referred to the consultative body of bishops of the Church of England, which meets in July and which will have to decide whether the church is Protestant, having broken its continuity with the primitive church, or whether it is a branch of the Catholic Church. Meanwhile the strife is raging in England between the high church and low church parties.

The setting of all the strife opens the door to one of the most romantic stories of modern Christianity. Uganda was first discovered by Captain Speke, in 1862. Henry M. Stanley explored it in 1875. He was so impressed with the readiness of the 3,500,000 natives for Christianization that he sent to The London Telegraph his famous appeal to Christian England.

The Church Missionary Society sent out Dr. Wilson and Alexander M. Mackay, the famous mechanic-missionary, and then began an adventurous history for the Christian enterprise. Many converts were burned at the stake. Bishop Hannington was murdered. Now, there are few Christian congregations in the world as large as that at Uganda. There are only 500 white persons in the whole province.

The whole district represented at the famous conference has an area of 140,000 square miles, being bounded by Abyssinia on the north, German East Africa on the southwest and the Indian Ocean on the east.

That part of the district, known as Uganda, and in which Kikuyu is situated, is a veritable island of progress in the midst of a huge sea of black savagery. When the first explorers reached that country half a century ago they found a semi-civilized region

Saintest Place in England.

The little village of Seathwaite in the famous lake region of England, has the distinction of being the rainiest spot in that country. It is a place of gray stones and gray rain. The roads are of loose gray stones and the fences that divide the pasture of bigger gray stones and the houses are built of still larger gray stones.

The mountains rise close about it—Scawfell, Great Gable, Glaramara, beloved by Wordsworth — and many more gray and misty giants. A little brook rattles among the stones, and on the dark sides of the mountains one may see here and there a milk-white streak, where some stream pours down in what the people call a "force" or "gbyll."

But it is a singular fact that up on the mountainside, above the village, in Sty Head Pass (Sty is Cumbrian for ladder and it is an appropriate name), there is a little strip of ground that for some reason catches a positive deluge whenever rain is falling anywhere in the neighborhood.

On that narrow ribbon of territory, only about 250 yards long by a few yards wide, the rain-guage shows an average rainfall of about 200 inches annually. Outside that little space there is an immediate drop of some fifty inches in the annual rainfall. Of course there is a reason, but it is not plain to the eye, or to the explanation of the natives.

"While on a trip with a survey party in Northern Ontario two years ago, I contracted rheumatism through exposure and sleeping in damp clothes. When I returned home I was very bad, and the pain in my joints was something awful. I was advised to try Wesden's Kidney Pills, and after taking four boxes my rheumatism was entirely gone. Last year I was up on the survey party again, but I was never without a box of Wesden's Kidney Pills, and have never had the slightest return of it.

ONLY SIXTEEN, GIRL VERY SICK

Tells How She Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

New Orleans, La.—"I take pleasure in writing these lines to express my gratitude to you. I am only 16 years old and work in a tobacco factory. I have been a very sick girl but I have improved wonderfully since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now looking fine and feeling a thousand times better."—Miss AMELIA JAQUELAND, 2031 Tchoupitoulas St., New Orleans, La.

St. Clair, Pa.—"My mother was alarmed because I was troubled with suppression and had pains in my back and side, and severe headaches. I had pimples on my face, my complexion was sallow, my sleep was disturbed, I had nervous spells, was very tired and had no ambition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has worked like a charm in my case and has regulated me. I worked in a mill among hundreds of girls and have recommended your medicine to many of them."—Miss ESTELLA MAGUIRE, 110 Tiewing St., St. Clair, Pa.

There is nothing that teaches more than experience. Therefore, such letters from girls who have suffered and were restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be a lesson to others. The same remedy is within reach of all.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

where the people manufactured their own cloth; where they had good workers in iron; where they tilled the ground and used many kinds of musical instruments; where they had, curiously enough, joined to a very cruel despotism of the regular African type a system of representative government. The English rulers have been wise in the way they have cared for these people. They have developed them along their own lines, instead of trying to turn them into something entirely different. Many of the chiefs are distinctly semi-civilized, and some of them write and read English well.

Stealing Opera Glasses.

After the picture ball at the Royal Albert Hall, London, recently thirty of the opera glasses provided for the convenience of the guests at a charge of 15 cents each were missing.

The Electrophone Company, which supplies the glasses used for hire in about twenty-five theatres in London, states: "We have lost 20,000 glasses in the last ten years, and 2,219 have been stolen during the past twelve months in London, excluding the few returned. They are generally stolen from the more expensive seats, the stalls and grand circle—very seldom from the pit. We have scouts everywhere on the lookout and frequently find people using our glasses in other theatres or in exhibitions or shows. We had a pair returned from South Africa, which were found on the body of a colonel in the British Army in the trenches during the war."

"Tiger Tim's" Maiden Speech.

No living British Parliamentarian ever so astonished and shocked the House of Commons by his maiden speech as the witty Mr. Tim Healy. "Tiger Tim" had only been a quarter of an hour in the House of Commons when he rose and delivered himself as follows: "Mr. Speaker, if the noble marquis" (the Marquis of Hartington) "thinks he is going to bully us with his high and mighty Cavendish ways, all I can tell him is he will find himself knocked into a cocked hat in a jiffy, and we will have to put him to the necessity of wiping the blood of all the Cavendishes from his noble nose many times before he dispenses of us."

Tribute to Burns.

For the 112th annual celebration of the Greenock Burns Club the following greeting from the mother club by Dr. Robert Bridges, the poet laureate, appears on the invitation card:

To Burns, Brave Scott's laurel's son,
Who drove his plough on Helicon,
Who with his doric rhyme erewhile,
Taught English bards to mend their style,
And by the humor of his pen
Fairly befool'd and Nickle-Ben.
Blithe Robbie Burns, We love thee well,
Because thou' wert so like thysel'
And in full cups with festive cheer
We toast thy fame from year to year.

Watch the Clock.

If the passion for efficiency accomplishes nothing more it will—indeed, it has already—upset one of the most sacred tenets that altruistic employers ever put into the constitution and by-laws for the observance of employees. That tenet is, Don't watch the clock. It was hoped, of course, that if employees could be made to forget the clock they might also forget to go home at the expiration of the time for which they were paid.

Efficiency now makes the revolutionary demand that you should never take your eyes from the clock. To be a topnotcher in efficiency you must go even further. You must get a stop watch with split second hands and make sure that each minutest division of time has assigned to it a precise and particular action, being or state. Watch the clock, my boy—watch the clock if you want to make a success in this world.—Ellis O. Jones in Lippincott's.

CHARGED BY AN ELEPHANT.

A Plunge Through a Tree and a Rifle Shot Just In Time.

Captain C. H. Stigand tells in his book, "Hunting the Elephant In Africa," of a narrow escape he had from a young bull elephant. The animal had charged the hunting party, with the usual result that the natives fled at their best speed. He dodged sharply from the path of the enemy and tripped over a fallen tree, dropping his rifle and just managing to seize it by the muzzle as the elephant was about to tread on it. He then dived headforemost into the branches of the fallen tree.

"I made frantic efforts to crawl through, but a stout branch resisted my progress, and at the same moment the galeagwa pushed in after me and pushed me through the branches on the other side. Two drops of blood from his forehead fell on my shorts, one on the thigh and one on the knee. Instead of pushing me straight through in front of him, though, he kicked me sideways. The impetus he gave me beat aside the stubborn branch, and the next moment I found myself crawling out on hands and knees on one side of the tree, with a rifle still grasped by the muzzle, while the elephant was executing a dance and stamping up the ground the other side, five yards from me, evidently thinking that I was under his feet.

"I quickly changed my rifle round and discharged it into his stern. It was the last cartridge in the rifle. Having fired, the rifle was taken out of my hands, and I found Matola, who had counted the shots, standing beside me, serving me the second rifle as a waiter might offer a dish. By some oversight it had not been loaded, for I had given strict orders that none of my men were ever to load or unload my rifles. Being a good soldier, Matola had not disobeyed this order, even under these extreme circumstances, but had gone the nearest to loading it he could.

"The breech was open, and he was holding the clip in position with his thumb just over the magazine. All I had to do was to press it down as I took hold of the rifle close to the bolt and I was ready to fire. The elephant was turning round and I shot him in the brain, dropping him dead."

SWP

SWP means Sherwin-Williams Paint, Prepared. This is the best paint for you to use because it is made of pure materials—pure lead, pure zinc, pure Linseed Oil, and pure coloring pigments which are thoroughly mixed and ground in scientific proportions by powerful machinery.

It is better — It is better than the old fashioned hand-mixed paint because the materials are put together according to correct chemical formulae which have been tested out in a practical way. Its fine grinding makes it cover nearly 50% more surface than hand-mixed paint.

It is more economical — SWP is an economical paint because it will cover the greatest amount of surface, wear longest, and look best.—Ask us for color cards.

Hospital Of a Nation.

In the near future Switzerland very likely will present to the powers a request that in the event of a great European war all of Switzerland be constituted into a Red Cross camp for the care of the wounded of all the nations involved. That Switzerland is now convinced, it is the only way that not only its neutrality, but its very existence could be preserved.

Although the neutrality of Switzerland is guaranteed by the leading powers, the Swiss Government has recently become convinced that unless it has some actual way of insisting on the respecting of that neutrality, that in a war between any of the four great powers surrounding it this guarantee would amount to very little.

In addition it is also convinced that the first step in any European war would be the prohibition by all the powers involved of the exports of coal and provisions which they would need for their own armies. As Switzerland is entirely dependent upon the surrounding powers not only for coal, but for its grain and practically all its food supply, the cutting off of these imports would reduce the entire country to starvation within a few weeks.

It is in the hopes of exacting a guarantee from all of the four powers surrounding it not to interrupt these imports in case of war that Switzerland is considering the project of having the entire country declared a great international Red Cross camp, and to undertake the care of the wounded of all nations in the event of any general European war.

Doctors Only Gave Temporary Relief.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup CURED HIM.

Bronchitis is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather, and is a very dangerous inflammatory affection of the bronchial tubes. Neglected bronchitis is one of the most general causes of consumption, so cure it at once by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Mrs. C. G. Dring, Hamilton, Ont., writes: 'Our little boy has been subject to severe bronchitis ever since birth and different doctors claimed to be only able to relieve him temporarily. A neighbor advised us to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, so I got a bottle, and after the third dose noticed a decided change, so kept on with it, and a couple of bottles were enough to completely cure him. Now we always keep a bottle on hand, and give it to him as soon as we notice him troubled with a cold, after which it disappears as if by magic. We recommend it to all our friends who find it is just as good as I say."

Price, 25 and 50 cents a bottle.

Be sure and get the genuine "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. Put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PANTO TRICKS.

How Some of the Startling Stage Effects Are Secured.

Visitors to the various pantomimes in London are annually puzzled by many little stage effects designed to deceive the eyes of those in the audience. Children and grown-ups alike go away wondering how it is done, but a peep behind the scenes reveals how simple are the solutions to these stage mysteries.

One of the best pantomime illusions produced in recent years is "The Growing Candle," which to the people in the audience is a most mystifying affair. A comedian settles down to read in a haunted chamber, by the light of a short candle set in a large candlestick on a table.

As he reads, the candle commences suddenly to grow, sprouting from its stick until it has attained the height of about eight feet above the table. For a moment it remains high up in the air still burning brightly, until suddenly, with a swift swish, it rushes back into the candlestick and completely vanishes from the sight. The trick is accomplished as follows: The candlestick is a hollow one, and is placed over a hole in the table, connected with a metal tube running down to the stage. This tube is concealed from the view of the audience by the front leg of the table.

When the time comes for the candle to grow, an assistant under the stage pushes a long pole, the thickness of the candle and painted white, up through the table, forcing the candle high into the air. Then he suddenly allows the pole to slip through his fingers, giving the effect of the vanishing candle as already described.

The means by which falling snow is allowed to filter evenly down on to the stage are very ingenious. A large canvas sheet is hung across the stage into the wings so that it forms a sort of bag.

In the centre of this bag the torn paper snow is deposited, where it lies out of harm's way until the time comes for the snow-storm to take place.

A favorite trick of the pantomime demon's is to deliver his speeches on a darkened stage with brilliant flashes of fire coming from the sword in his hand each time he strikes the stage with it.

The sword is connected with an electric battery concealed under the demon's cloak, and instead of striking the bare stage, as the audience imagine, he really scrapes a plate of metal sunk flush with the floor boards so that electric sparks are produced.

INDEX HOWLERS.

Alphabetical Guides For Readers Are Frequently Misleading.

In these days indexing is an art, and a good index adds immeasurably to the value of books of biography, history, or travel. Nevertheless, it is very easy to make howlers, even in a task of this kind. For instance, the following item occurred in the index of a book on English Law, "Best, Mr. Justice, his great mind." Naturally the searcher in the index would turn with great expectancy to the page given, hoping to discover indications of as great a legal luminary as Bacon himself, or even the mighty Blackstone. The reference, however, proved to be a mare's nest, for upon the page indicated there appeared only this, "Mr. Justice Best said he had a great mind to commit the witness for contempt of court."

One of the most amusing indexing howlers occurred in the catalogue of a suburban library which, let us hope, had been compiled by the young assistant librarian. Two consecutive entries read as follows, "Mill, On the Principles of Political Economy," "Mill, On the Floss."

This reminds one of the howler committed by a second-hand bookseller, who sent out a catalogue to dozens of prominent persons, with Ruskin's book, entitled "Construction of Sheep Folds," under the heading of Agriculture, and Hugh Miller's "The Old Red Sandstone" under the heading of Fiction, and Lytton's "Last of the Barons" under Politics. It is evident that he thought the last-named a treatise on the final abolition of the Upper House.

But even these cases were beaten by a catalogue prepared at an institute in the Australian Bush, to which a retired sea-captain had been appointed as curator. That honest worthy catalogued Max Muller's "Chips from a German Workshop" under the heading of Carpentry, and put Ruskin's "Ethics of the Dust" in the Hygienic section.

A WEAK HEART

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is Nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

BABIES SORES,

Every mother should realize that the skin of her baby is so tender that the secretions of the body often lead to rashes, eruptions, etc., all of which may be removed by Zam-Buk. Scores of restless, crying babies, upon examination, are found to be suffering from some form of skin irritation or "heat." Don't let the little one suffer when Zam-Buk will cure!

Mrs. L. Head, of 61 Alexander Avenue, Winnipeg, says: "I have proved the value of Zam-Buk when applied to children's sores. Some nasty sores broke out around my baby's mouth, and caused all the poor little one's body to become one mass of heat. I took him to the doctor, who prescribed for him, but I found there for two months. At the end of that time he was no better, and we again took him home. I was then advised to try Zam-Buk, and obtained a supply. The effect of the first few applications was very gratifying, and I continued with the use of the balm. A little perseverance resulted in a complete cure."

Mrs. E. Cordner, of Yorkton, Sask., says: "My little baby girl had a bad rash on one cheek and over her little chin. A few applications of Zam-Buk healed the sore in such a peaceful manner that no scar was left behind."

Scores of similar cases could be quoted. Zam-Buk is absolutely pure—contains no animal fats, no mineral coloring matter, no astringent poisons. It is also ideal balm for baby.

Zam-Buk cures eczema, rashes, ringworm, chapped hands, scurvy, bad legs, ulcers, bad breasts, abscesses, piles, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Don't take the risk of using harmful imitations!

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

The Invalid's Room.

The invalid's room should be, without exception, the brightest and most cheerful room in the house. The custom of putting the invalid in a dark or dusty room in order to isolate him is a foolish one. It is essential that the patient, who must spend twenty-four hours a day in a room, should have as much light and air as possible. It is conceivable that a room, desirable because of its light and airiness, may be noisy, but noise is less of an evil than darkness or lack of fresh air. Ventilation is exceedingly important. Even in winter there is no reason why the windows should not be kept open if the patient is well covered and out of drafts. It is a mistaken idea, unfortunately deeply rooted, that colds and sore throats are the result of too much air.

Penal Servitude For Life.

It is a popular error in England that penal servitude "for life" means in reality "for twenty years." Of course it is no such thing. Penal servitude for life means precisely what it says, neither more nor less. True, all life sentences are reconsidered at the end of twenty years, and if the convicts' conduct has been all that it ought to be during the whole of that long period he may be tentatively released on a ticket of leave. But obviously that is a very different thing from letting him go free altogether. He is still a convict and will remain one to the end of his days. He has to report himself every month until death frees him, and if he swerves from the narrow path ever so little—and is found out—he goes straight back to jail without even the formality of a trial, to be released, as a general rule, never again.—London Answers.

LIFE IN A WILD LAND.

Little Variation in Monotonous Round.

There must be a few men who have nourished at some time in their lives to exchange the dull monotony of life in a great city for an untrammelled life in the open air, and the thrilling adventures which are usually supposed to be the daily lot of a pioneer in a wild country, writes an Englishman resident in West Africa.

Yet how many of these men would change places with the pioneer if they could look behind the scenes and see how he has to endure in order to earn more or less honest living? He envies the stay-at-home man just as much as that man envies him, and longs for a watertight roof over his head.

I am writing this, sitting at the door of a mud hut in a tiny village in a little-known part of northern Nigeria. Outside the rain is falling steadily; the air is so heavy and still that the smoke, rising through the thatch of the native huts, ascends in slowly curving blue columns till it gradually disperses and drifts away among the trees. In the middle of the village, and not far from my hut, is a great spreading tree, under the shade of which meet the few inhabitants of the village. Here the women pound up the yams and guinea corn which forms their staple food; here, also, collect all the animals of the village, evil-looking little black goats, fowls and the inevitable pariah dogs.

Weaver birds swarm in the tree, gorgeous little creatures, all golden yellow, brown and black, and they fight like little devils. Swallows roost in the roof of the hut, and fly in and out all day. The roof leaks in a dozen different places, but one gets used to that, and it only becomes really annoying when the blankets get wet, or too much water falls on to the table at meal times. Not that it could make much difference to the flavor of the food, as a menu card is seldom necessary, breakfast in the bush being always composed of fried eggs and yam, and probably chicken "cutlegs" (Anglice cutlets), while lunch and dinner also consist of chicken and yam.

Traveling is apt to prove weary work. To a man who is accustomed only to motor omnibus it would, no doubt, be novel and intensely interesting to ride, at the head of a long string of carriers, through rolling bush-covered country, broken here and there by rugged granite hills, past fields of cotton and guinea corn, crossing boulder-strewn river beds, dry half the year, but filled with a roaring torrent of brown water in the rains, to halt at last for the day in some strange little mud-walled village, where the lepers sit in the shade of the gate, exhibiting hands without fingers, feet without toes and dull, sightless eyes, each with his little bowl into which charitable travelers may drop a few cowrie shells. But to the old travelers, though all in the day's work, it becomes monotonous: the sun is hot, the flies are maddening, the saddle very hard, and he would give a lot for the chance to travel by the humble "bus" once more.

Yet to a man who loves sport there come opportunities which more than repay him for hardships and discomfort. Such an opportunity occurred to me a few weeks ago; after a long, weary walk through bad country, where not a stream showed a color of gold in the pan, I came on fresh buffalo spoor. A few minutes brought me up to them in the dense bush. A quick shot was followed instantly by a savage charge from the wounded beast; another shot at short range, and the great animal came down with a crash. It was all over in a few seconds, but it was an experience one does not forget.

Again, an elephant passed near the camp at night; three hours' spooring through long grass and dense jungle brought me up where he stood, looking like a huge mass of gray granite. One shot did it at that time.

We all envy the men who live easy, comfortable lives at home, and yet we cannot leave the bush for long. It is pleasant beyond all words to return to wife and children, to a cosy fireside and good food, but the call comes to us again in time and go we must. Perhaps in years to come we shall not hear it so plainly, but there will be younger, stronger men to take our places, while we wait peacefully at home among our dear ones for the last call of all.

Hard on the Young Preacher.

Rev. Dr. Ingram, Bishop of London, has a way of appealing to the masses. Once at a Church Congress he told this story: "I remember my first Sunday in Bethnal Green I addressed a meeting of 500 men, and at the end of the service I said to them: 'Well, now, what shall we talk about next Sunday?' And immediately 500 voices yelled out: 'Eternal Punishment.' That was a nice little subject to hurl at a young man who was out 'on his own' for the first time in his life. And then, of course, they wanted to know who was Cain's wife—they always do. Well, we settled that question, and we buried the poor old lady in Bethnal Green, once and for all."

A Warlike Family.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Newell, of Gosberton Risegate, South Lincolnshire, Eng., have seven sons serving the King. The eldest has eighteen years' service in the navy to his credit, and the other six are all in the Lincolnshire Regiment, the youngest, who is fifteen, being a trombone player in the band.

His Chance at Last.

The busybody was circulating a petition calling upon the powers that be to abolish something or other.

"It will be presented at the next meeting," he said, "and a copy of it will be printed in all the papers."

The struggling young author made haste to sign.

"What's it all about?" asked a friend.

"Oh, I don't know," said the struggling young author, "but I couldn't resist the temptation to see my name signed to something that will appear in print."

Whig Statesmen Ran Races.

When Charles James Fox stayed at Chatsworth in 1777 foot racing was a favorite pastime among the guests at country houses. To the intense delight of his hostess, Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire, the Whig leader proved the victor in two races, which, she writes, "considering his not having been to bed and his size, is doing a great deal." Seeing that Fox, although under thirty, then weighed close on twenty stone, his performance did him credit. The duchess also derived keen enjoyment from his conversation. "He talks like a brilliant player at billiards—the strokes follow one another, pell-mell." — London Tatler.

Rats as Food.

Rats are not entirely unknown as a food in England. Not so very long ago rat pies were comparatively common in Nottinghamshire, and one inn near the county town made a feature of periodical rat suppers and did very well out of it. And rats have been proved to have a medicinal value, for one Arctic explorer has recorded that those of his crew who were not too fastidious to eat of the good rat soup set before them by the cook enjoyed an immunity from scurvy, when all the abstainers from rats were stricken down.

The Moors of To-day.

The Moors of to-day are the descendants of those who conquered Spain, who were practically paramount in the southern portion for two centuries and relics of whose wonderful buildings are to be found at the present day in that country. Indeed, it is strange to consider the position of the Moors of to-day when we see the work of their hands in past centuries, and the only explanation lies in the fact that they are unable to adapt themselves to modern conditions.—Strand Magazine.

Salvation Army In India.

An experiment of great interest is being carried out in India through the co-operation of the police department with the Salvation Army in teaching honest work to the so-called criminal tribes. These tribes comprise nearly 3,000,000 people, most of them nomadic in their habits. Many have now settled down and no longer actively engage in crime, but a large number still practice stealing as their chief means of livelihood and teach their children to steal.

The Salvation Army has over 1,000 of these men, women and children, representing 12 tribes, at its 20 settlements, its industrial schools, and its three childrens' industrial homes, and it is expected during the next few months that as many more will be turned over to the army by the police authorities of India. They are being taught to earn their living by working in dairies, weaving, silk reeling, poultry raising, washing clothes, etc. Sometimes antagonistic at first, they are usually so pleased, after a period of residence, with their environment, good pay, and relief from police surveillance that they urge others to join them. The people are separated according to caste and degree of criminality. When any seem no longer a menace to society they are released, and some have already made good workers in outside industries.

The Mullingers and the Hapsburgs.

The Mullingers are one of those old Swiss families concerning whom my friend Dr. Curti, distinguished Swiss national historian and director of the Frankfurter Zeitung, recently told me the following amusing incident, writes a correspondent.

Years ago a Mullinger was one of the staff of the Swiss legation at Vienna. On being presented to the Emperor Francis Joseph he bluntly expressed his pleasure at making the acquaintance of his majesty, which pleasure, he added, was all the greater since "in times gone by the Hapsburgs were mere retainers of the Mullingers."

"In that case," the emperor is said to have replied, "I think you will admit that my family has got on better in the world (hat es weiter gebracht) than yours."—London Chronicle.

BOX HILL TRADITIONS

MESMERISING MOOR HAS LONG BEEN PLEASURE RESORT.

Since Jane Austen's "Emma" Picnic Parties at One of England's Most Beautiful Spots Have Been a Popular Amusement—It's Box Trees Are Famous Throughout the Country.

One wonders when Box Hill first became a favored spot for pleasure parties. We associate so much of our ideas of travel and enjoyment with railways that it is natural to imagine that they must have been the first to popularise it, says Arthur Henry Andersen in The London Chronicle. If so, however, we should only get back to mid-Victorian days, for the South-Eastern line which passes the base of the Hill, was opened in 1843, and that part of the London, Brighton and South Coast Railway line was only completed in 1867. But early novels show that our eighteenth century ancestors thought as much of al fresco parties as we do, and it is unlikely that so glorious a view point as Box Hill would be missed. There is, in fact, direct evidence available, and for much longer than one might imagine Box Hill has been the resort of these on pleasure bent.

It is not every such delightful spot that gets immortalized in a novel. Truro, Bath and Weymouth, Lyme Regis and Brighton, figure as scenes of gaiety in the early novels, but they were well known. Box Hill figures in but one of them, though in that it bulks largely. It is in Jane Austen's "Emma." This takes us back a hundred years for visits to Box Hill to be a customary form of entertainment.

It is not, it must be confessed, a very happy precedent, since the party was a melancholy failure. Of all the long record of misunderstandings, so skilfully worked out, in which Emma Woodhouse found herself involved, the party to Box Hill proved no small part. "During the two whole hours that were spent upon the hill, there seemed a principle of separation between the parties, too strong for any fine prospects, or any cold collation, or any cheerful Mr. Weston to restore."

But the excuse of the illustration is not that the party was dull, but that there was a party, and that this was a hundred years ago. "Emma" having been published in 1816, so that we get a very respectable ancestry for those outings which make of Box Hill a sort of outer and more refined Hampstead Heath.

But the essence of the illustration is not that the party was dull, but that there have chosen it, and Nelson would not have stayed—on his way to Portsmouth for Trafalgar—in the romantic little inn, whose gardens open to the box-clad slopes, and Keats would not have come to the same inn in 1817 for country calm to sustain, and natural beauty to inspire him during the labors of "Endymion." These did not suddenly discover and set the vogue for Box Hill. Its famous grove of box-trees brought Evelyn there in 1655, and Defoe, as a faithful chronicler of England's beauties, had also to come to admire and to write about the view.

These same box-trees are notable. They give the hill its name, which suggests that they are older than the tradition of their planting in the reign of Charles I., for though the tradition is specific in name and date and concerns a period almost within recollection, from its first appearance everything points to the famous grove, the finest in England, as indigenous, a native and characteristic growth. It is not likely that they will ever—at the hands of the National Trust—be cleared again, but in the past they have had a high value. They were sold—at the beginning of last century—for a figure which is variously given at $50,000, $60,000 and $75,000—and the precipice which they now cover as gleaming dark velvet was then left white as a cairn of bleaching stones.

At about this time, too, Box Hill came into notoriety because of the eccentric burial of a certai Major Labelliere. Everyone knows that a man is buried deep in concrete in the tower on Leith Hill. There is the tower to keep alive the story. But few who tread the soft turf of Box Hill imagine that this officer of Marines was buried at his own choice—some say head downwards; others, in an erect posture, but at all events with the coffin placed perpendicularly—under the summit of the hill.

But a truce to box-trees and eccentrics. It is of Keats and Meredith we think. Keats came but for a brief time to finish "Endymion," but even that short stay has linked his name for ever with Box Hill. Burford Bridge Hotel is altered since that day, but his room remains.

As for Meredith, for more than forty years, the years of his prime and his golden age, he lived in the modest cottage, separated only by width of the road from the gentle grassy slope that formed his constant outlook. Roaming far and wide over the hills he loved, he saw, and marked, and treasured, the story of their beauties, and worked them all lovingly into his novels, as in "Diana of the Crossways," and into many of his poems. It is in "The Thrush in February" that we get the closest, most direct, of his portraiture of Box Hill and the view from his chalet study, but in "Love in the Valley"—most beautiful of lyrics—we get again the hill, its trees, its valleys, and the winding, shadowed Mole, in a score of entrancing aspects and combinations.

Box Hill as a public possession we now owe to the generosity of a single giver. Box Hill as a revelation of the beauty and poetery of nature we owe to George Meredith, and more and more as the years go by, as appreciation grows and reverence deepens, we shall come to regard it as his indestructible memorial.

Wife—Charles, wasn't that a good box of cigars I gave you on your birthday? Husband—I never saw a better box, my dear.

It must be Bovril

Even were it double the price, Bovril would still be an economical and indispensable article in every home, for Bovril has been proved to possess a Body-building power of from 10 to 20 times the amount taken.

UNEXPLORED ISLANDS.

Some Places From Which Adventurers Have Never Returned.

News has just come that still another explorer has met his fate on Tiburon Island. His name is Wayne, and he is said to have been a clever mining engineer.

Wayne went across to Tiburon in October last, and not a trace has since been seen of him. Nor is it likely that his fate will ever be known.

He was warned of the dangers that were before him. In spite of offers of double pay, he could not get a soul to accompany him. So he crossed Hell's Passage alone—and like all others who have preceded him—has never come back.

Tiburon is so lonely island in savage Melanesia. It lies in the Gulf of California, separated from the Mexican mainland by only a few miles of salt water.

Yet it remains one of the world's black spots. It has never yet been explored by white men. Its only inhabitants are a tribe of Indians who, armed with bows and arrows, dipped in some unknown but deadly poison, shoot down all who try to land.

The expedition of 1879 vanished into the interior and was never seen again, and the same fate befell the party headed by Professor Millies in 1904.

There is only one other island in all the world which can match Tiburon, and that is Malayta in the Solomons. Match it, that is, in the way of savagery! And even in Malayta there are white men on the coast. Valuable plantations of cocoanuts and other tropical produce have been planted on the shores of Malayta, but inland is a mountainous country covered with thick bush and inhabited by fierce tribes of cannibals.

Gold is believed to exist in the interior of Malayta, and more than one expedition has been organized to search for the precious metal. But the bushmen, who steal noiselessly as serpents through the tropical forest, have wiped out every one of the explorers, and their smoke-dried heads decorate the dark temples in the central mountains.

Other islands there are which are as impregnable as Tiburon and Malayta, but for different reasons. One such is Tromelin, a remote spot of land 30 miles north of Mauritius. It is surrounded by a terrific rampart of coral which is fully 150 yards wide. A mile out on any side of the island the sea is from 10,000 to 30,000 feet deep. The surf, which always breaks on the rocky shore of this submarine mountain top, makes landing practically impossible.

Yet it was here that, in 1761, a French transport was wrecked, and 118 survivors out of 300 aboard, got ashore alive. Of these, seven, all black women, were rescued in the year 1776, having by some amazing miracle kept life in themselves for a space of fifteen years, with no food but shell-fish and no drink but brackish water.

In the year 1607 that famous navigator, Henry Hudson, reported the existence of a rocky island 200 miles east of Greenland. It was named Jan Mayen. That island was never seen again until the year 1909, when a party of English people, among whom was Lord Dufferin, caught a glimpse of it.

Then it vanished for another fifty years, to be seen once more in July, 1910, by the tourists aboard the yacht "Oceana."

No one has ever set foot on Jan Mayen. No one is ever likely to, for no navigator would willingly approach it. It is the centre of the thickest fogs on the surface of this planet, and from one year's end to another usually remains totally invisible.

Bouvet Island, in the Antarctic, is almost equally inaccessible. It is the summit of a dead volcano, which rises steeply from immensely deep water, and it has only been sighted twice since its discovery in 1730.

Mauritius Stamps.

The most valuable stamp in existence is said to be the "postoffice" Mauritius, which is worth about $6,500. Just after the postal authorities had received the issue the postoffice was destroyed in a hurricane. But the governor had given a ball and as an act of courtesy had sent invitations to friends in England. The only specimens of the stamp known to exist are those which were affixed to the envelopes of these invitations.—London Opinion.

ELBOWS AND FINGERS WERE CRAMPED AND NUMB

Lived in Dread of Paralysis---Nerves Upset---Could Not Sleep ---Well Now--Thanks To Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Paralysis is frightfully common these days. We are living at high tension, and too often the nerves give way under the enormous strain. The only way to be safe is to be warned by symptoms, for the nervous system does not go to pieces without giving you many danger signals, if you only know how to interpret them.

When you have frequent headaches, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, feel discouraged and down-hearted, cannot rest and sleep well, and find appetite fickle and digestion bad, you may know that the nerves are in bad condition. Don't wait for these symptoms to become chronic, but start in early with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and head off disaster.

Mr. John Matthews, farmer, Fawn Lake, Alta., writes: "I had cramps in my legs, pains in my knees and elbows, and my fingers would get cramped and numb. I could not sleep nights, and would have to get out of bed to rub the cramps out of my legs. For two years I suffered this way, and could not get relief. Then I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with splendid results. I sleep well now, enjoy my meals and feel well generally. I only had cramps last winter and feel that my system has been greatly benefited by this food cure.'

Cures like this are reported almost daily in the public press, and you are invited to investigate these cases for yourself. If you cannot call personally write for particulars, enclosing stamp for reply. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A HEART CONQUEST

Mrs. Calhoun was happy. She was going to have Mr. and Mrs. Kent and their daughter, Edna, in to dinner that evening and everything was going beautifully. Mrs. Calhoun liked Edna very much, and she was trying to make Sands, her son, like her too. That was why she had asked the Kents to dinner.

Dinner was to be served at 6:30. That would give Sands plenty of time to arrive and dress. He had been away for a day or two on business in the city. She believed his firm had sent him although she did not know definitely. Sands did not make as much of a confidante of her as she would have liked. She had never been able to bend him to her pleasure. He was like his father there.

Yet Sands was well enough as young men went. He was very good looking, and he could be very genial when he chose. He might have been popular in society, only he rather scorned society. He wanted work. As if work was necessary with all the money that he had.

She had selected Edna for him. Edna would have money some day—more than Sands, even, and that would be very nice. One couldn't have too much money. Then Edna was fond of society and she could do duty for two there. She was handsome, too, and gifted.

She took up a pearl brooch and was beginning to fasten it when the doorbell rang. Cornelia, the maid, answered it and came skipping upstairs and knocked at the bedroom door.

"Well?" Mrs. Calhoun said. And then she saw what Cornelia had in her hands. "A telegram!" she exclaimed. She tore it open and read: "Married Helena Bowes yesterday. Letter to follow. Sands."

Mrs. Calhoun looked up dazed at Cornelia, who was watching her very anxiously.

"You don't look right, missus," said the maid.

Mrs. Calhoun, instead of answering turned back into the room and shut the door. There again she read the telegram. After a while her head cleared and she began to think connectedly. She was conscious at first of a great despair that gave way presently to anger. Sands had known exactly what he was going to do when he went away yesterday morning. He had had every arrangement made. She remembered that he had not promised to be at the dinner party. But she had commanded him, and had taken his smile for assent.

Mrs. Calhoun knew Helena Bowles by sight and sound merely. Twice when she had been obliged to seek her son at the office she had been aware of the girl sitting there at her typewriter, with her fine hair haloing her head against the big office window. Once, she recalled, Sands had voluntarily spoken to her about the girl. "I wish you'd look after her a bit, mother, if you find time," he had said. "She'd appreciate any kindness, I'm sure. She's so young and so alone—does not know anybody. A town of this kind's hard on little office girls who don't care to be common." She had put him off with some vague, half promise to see the girl, and never had allowed the thought to trouble her again.

She never would be resigned to this wild marriage as long as she lived. And Sands should know it. That girl should know it, too.

After all, the dinner was a success; There was no visible drawback. Miss Kent looked her best and was at her gayest and her parents supported her admirably. She was as delightful as possible and made her hostess feel how much she had missed in not having her for a daughter.

Mrs. Calhoun, excited and tired though she was, slept very well that night. She woke early and lay thinking things over. Angry as she was she knew that there were appearances to be maintained, and it seemed that she was the only one to maintain them. Calhoun had overstepped all bounds but people should not know more about that than they must if she could prevent it.

His letter did not clear up matters any. It was brief and business like. He had married Helena Bowes and they were staying for a fortnight at the Arlington; Not one repentant note; not one apology. But he did ask her to answer. She decided to answer in person.

After her four hours' journey a taxi took her to the hotel Sands had named. She asked the number of his apartment and went up to it in the elevator. Her hand trembled as she knocked on the door. Sands opened it. He said merely, "Mother!" and kissed her through the veil. Then he led her within.

The room was a sitting room, and at a little desk, writing, sat the girl that he had married. She apparently had been too absorbed to be interrupted by the opening door. But when Sands said, "Helena!" she turned instantly, and rising, came forward. She was younger even than Mrs. Calhoun had thought and her hair was fairer. She was pretty, too, in a shy, gentle, sweet way.

"Helena," Sands said, "this is my mother and yours."

It took all of Mrs. Calhoun's courage to hold out her hand. She let her greeting go at that. She was not ready to kiss this bride of her son.

"You got my telegram?" Sands asked.

"And your letter. I have come to see what it all means."

"Why it means I'm married," Sands said. "But take off your things and sit down, mother, and we will talk it over."

Mrs. Calhoun sat down, but she did not take off her things. Sands sat down too, near her. But his wife took a seat some way off.

"I'll tell you how it was," Sands said. "Helena knows. I met her on the train that morning. She was going home to her aunt's for over Sunday—the aunt she lives with when she isn't working. I'd heard something that I doubted—Strauss told me in the office, and I asked Helena about it. We got to talking and I found out what Strauss had told me was true. But it wasn't that that made me ask her to marry her. It only hurried things up a bit. And so I eloped with her then and there." He laughed softly, and turning to the girl held out his hand to receive her. "Come, here, dear. Tell mother that what made me so mad on your account was the fact that you are own cousin to Edna Kent and the whole Kent family ignores you because you have to earn your living. But you haven't got to earn it now—" he drew her close—"you've got a husband to take care of you. And he's going to, by —" He stopped, grinding his teeth. Then he laughed softly and drawing Helena down, kissed her.

Mrs. Calhoun got up and went over to the window and came back again. It was a brief journey but she did a lot of thinking while about it. She remembered, too, that when she married Sands' father she had been poor herself, with everything to learn. It ought to make her generous just to recall how glad she had been when Mr. Calhoun had married her and how awful his people had acted toward her for a while. She wasn't going to act that way towards Helena now that she knew.

She was just close enough to kiss, and she did. And Helena responded. And Sands laughed.

"I knew that you'd take it that way, mother," he cried.

Tomatoes and Mushrooms.

Select eight medium-sized, smooth tomatoes. Cut a hole in the stem, and scoop out the insides. Chop one onion fine, add to it a tablespoonful of butter and slolw to simmer slowly in a saucepan. When coloured a deep yellow, add one ounces of breadcrumbs which have been prepared by first soaking in water and then pressed nearly dry. Also add one dozen chopped mushrooms, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a pinch of salt, one peppercorn, a dash of cayenne, and four tablespoonfuls of tomato catsup. Mix all thoroughly; Then fill the tomatoes and sprinkle with breadcrumbs and melted butter. Bake in a moderate oven until brown, and serve with sauce made as follows:

Tomato Sauce.—Put half a teaspoonful of butter in a saucepan with an onion, a carrot, and a half clove of garlic, all cut fine. Simmer gently for ten minutes, then stir in a tablespoon of flour. Add half a pint of stewed tomatoes and half a pint of stock. Boil gently for thirty minutes, season, and strain.

MADE WITH PRUNES.

The word prunes calls to mind—to some minds, that is to say—a cheap and wholesome food that has no other claims to the attention. But really prunes, thoroughly utilized, can be made a valuable part of the diet, not only from the point of view of wholesomeness, but from the point of view of temptingness.

Tons of Stamps Used.

The official storehouse of stamps in Britain is not the General Postoffice, as might be surmised, but Somerset House. Here several strong-rooms, in various parts of the building, are entirely used for stocking postal stamps. Often the value of the stamps held at Somerset House is nearly ten million pounds—the limit value of the stamps which the law allows the Controller to stock at one time. A special stamp staff is employed to deal with the five-ton weight of stamps which are despatched daily, an amount which is not easily imagined in figures.

To Put On Flesh And Increase Weight

A Physician's Advice

Most thin people eat from four to six pounds of good solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folks eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bunk to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Thin folks stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They just absorb enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a semblance of health and strength. Stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "stay there" pound. All the fat-producing elements of their food just stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare those fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body—something, too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood's carrying power.

For such a condition I always recommend eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is a scientific combination of the most effective and powerful flesh-building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless yet wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often does the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.

RESOLUTION COMING

Liberal Criticism of Budget May Be Strengthened by Amendment.

OTTAWA, April 21. — The House devoted another day to the discussion on the budget, and the debate will probably continue until Thursday. As yet no amendment has been offered to the formal motion by the Finance Minister that the House go into committee on ways and means, but it is expected that a resolution will be offered calling for free food, free wheat and free agricultural implements.

Yesterday's debate was carried on by Messrs. Turgeon (Gloucester), Smith (N. Ontario), Wampole (Mc Leod), Weichel (N. Waterloo), Neely (Humboldt), and Clarke (N. Wellington).

The debate was resumed by Mr. Turgeon (Lib., Gloucester, N.B.) He was followed by William Smith (Con., N. Ontario), who said that the Liberals from 1878 to 1896 had threatened the tariff with destruction and many people had been deterred from investing in manufacturing enterprises on that account. Once in power, however, the Liberals had maintained the tariff, which they found in force, and the country had greatly progressed.

Mr. Warnock (Lib., McLeod) said reciprocity in wheat between Saskatchewan and Alberta would mean nothing at all, as both provinces were seeking an export market. He said the opposition to free wheat appealed to prejudice by saying that the demand came from American settlers. There no so-called "American settlers" were in the west repudiated Canadians, who had been driven out of Canada by the fiscal policy of the former Conservative Government.

Mr. Weichel (Con., Waterloo) declared himself as favoring moderate protection as Canada's fiscal policy.

Dr. Neely (Humboldt) said if a referendum were taken in the prairie provinces 95 per cent. of the people would vote for free wheat.

Fine Distribution of Seed.

GALT, April 21. — This week all children in the rural schools who are participating in the seed-test fairs will receive the seeds. Fifty dozen eggs have arrived and will be distributed for those who prefer raising chickens to growing grain or vegetables.

Those entering will plant the seeds and care for them during the summer, when representatives will visit and mark progress being made. At school fairs in the fall prizes will be awarded.

Guiana's Reformers.

The goldfields of Guiana are probably the largest undeveloped auriferous area in the world, according to Prof. Harrison, director of Science and Agriculture in the colony. He says that "there is not the slightest doubt that the Guiana's goldfields are in all probability the largest undeveloped gold-bearing area in the world. There is evidence not only that they are the most extensive, but also in placers among the richest." Despite the fact that the methods employed for the extraction of the gold from the soil have hitherto been practically of the most primitive nature between 1884 and the present date more than $40,000,000 worth of gold has been obtained.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get excited and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 50 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will get fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so no longer is a source of irritation thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

TRYING TO BEAT BLOCKADE.

German Steamer With Guns For Huerta Starting to Vera Cruz.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, via Galveston, Texas, April 21.—Intense interest was created here yesterday when it became known that a German steamship is running for this port at the topmost speed of her engines in order to unload her cargo of 300 machine guns, a quantity of small arms and ammunition before the American fleet under Rear Admiral Fletcher can establish a blockade of the harbor. All the guns and munitions are for the forces of Gen. Huerta, but the European port from which the vessel sailed has not been disclosed.

Under international law, a blockade must be effective to vessels in the category of the German ship are to be prevented from landing their cargoes.

A question may arise concerning whether war exists under the present status of things. At all events, the American battleships must be standing guard off Vera Cruz if the German vessel is to be prevented from entering the port.

No More Troublesome Superfluous Hairs

(The Modern Beauty)

Nothing is quite so annoying to a woman as ugly fuzzy growths on the face, and while the electric needle brings relief, it is no more effective than a simple paste made with powdered delatone and water. This paste is spread on the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off. After this treatment the skin should be washed to free it from the remaining delatone and it will be soft, clear and hairless. Be sure, however, that you get the real delatone.

SINGULAR SERMONS.

Discourses Provided For In Legacies Are Delivered Yearly In England.

At the Church of St. Catherine Cree, in Leadenhall street, London, there is preached every year, on Oct. 16, the sermon known as the "Lion Sermon." It commemorates the providential escape of Sir John Gayer, Lord Mayor of London, who, in 1630, when journeying in the east, encountered a lion, which, however, on his repeating the prayer of Daniel, allowed him to pursue his way unmolested.

In gratitude for this miraculous deliverance, Sir John left directions in his will that a commemorative sermon should be preached annually, for which the preacher should receive the equivalent of five dollars; the clerk, fifty cents; the sexton, twenty-five cents, while forty-four dollars should be distributed among the poor of the neighborhood.

Another thanksgiving sermon of a somewhat similar nature, says The Globe, was that preached at the charge of Joseph Taylor, a Paternoster Row bookseller, who, to commemorate his preservation during the great storm of 1703, that caused the death by drowning of eight thousand people, destroyed the Eddystone Lighthouse, and did damage, it is said, in London alone to the extent of $10,000,000, left $250 for a sermon to be delivered annually in Little Wild Street Chapel, Lincoln's Inn.

Annually, on Easter Tuesday, in the "Spital Sermon" delivered before the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London at Christ Church, in Newgate street. It originated in an old custom by which the Bishop of London was wont to appoint some distinguished cleric to preach at St. Paul's Cross on Good Friday on "Christ's Passion," and on the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday following, to nominate three other divines, in the person of a bishop, a dean, and a doctor of divinity, to deliver three sermons on "The Resurrection," at the pulpit-cross in the Spital. On the Sunday immediately after these addresses, yet another divine was selected to hold forth at St. Paul's Cross, criticising and passing judgment on the discourses that had been delivered by the preceding preachers. On this occasion, as on Good Friday and Easter Wednesday, the civic fathers attended in state.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 20.—It was only for a brief interval today that the very sentiment prevailed in certain colleges of the corn market. Bidders, especially, seized the opportunities given the side of bulge amounts, and to pay in line with the sharp competition from Argentina. Prices closed unsettled at a loss of ⅜c to 1⅛c, compared with Saturday night. Wheat finished 1⅛c off to ⅛c up, and oats a shade down to a little advance, but provisions were demoralized almost as much as corn, with declines varying from 30c to 67½c per bbl.

Milkers and Springers.

Very few milkers and springers were offered for sale; those sold at $60 to $100 each.

The calves on sale yesterday were not of a very good class, the bulk of them being of eastern production. Choice veal calves are worth $9.50 to $10.50; medium to good, $7.50 to $9; common to medium, $6 to $7; rough eastern, $5 to $5.50.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were not as large, with prices very firm. Sheep, ewes, sold at $6.50 to $7.10; rams at $5 to $6.50; yearling lambs at $7.90 to $8.25; spring lambs at $9 to $9 each.

Hogs.

Receipts were light, and out of 777 reported on the market, 600 of these were of northwestern production and consigned to the Swift Canadian Company. Prices were reported 10c lower, at $9 for selects fed and watered; $8.90 to $8.75 f.o.b. cars; $8.65 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 20.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending April 18, were 1200 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 2550 hogs and 1750 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale amounted to 1100 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 500 calves.

A falling off of the trade today was the weaker feeling in the market for cattle, and prices declined 25 cents per 100 lbs., which was attributed to the fact that offerings were much larger than expected by the trade.

There was no change in the market for small meats, prices being steady. The supply of sheep and lambs was equal with a fair demand. Spring lambs sold at from $3 to $6 each, and a few extra choice ones brought as high as $8 to $10. The trade in calves was active, and offerings were ample to fill all requirements. The tone of the market for hogs was weaker.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8.40 to $7.35; do., medium, $6.90 to $6.35; do., common, $6 to $5.50; canners, $3.75 to $4; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.75 to $7; do., medium, $6.75 to $6.50; do., bulls, $5 to $7.25; milkers, choice, each, $90 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $70 to $75; springers, $60 to $80; sheep, ewes, $7 to $7.50; bucks and culls, $6 to $6.50; lambs, $8.50 to $9; hogs, off cars, $8.90 to $9.25; calves, $3 to $10.

Thought Nothing But Death Would End Her Misery.

WAS TROUBLED WITH Heart Disease.

Mrs. J. D. Talbot, Owen Sound, Ont., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from heart disease, and leaking valves. I have had recourse to every kind of treatment I could think might help me, including the skill of several doctors. I suffered so for years that at times I have felt that nothing but death could end my misery. I was advised by a friend, who had suffered untold pain and misery, just as I had, and had been cured by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, to give them a trial, so I decided to do so. I am delighted with the result, as I am now completely cured, and can eat and sleep as I have not done for years.

You are at liberty to use my name at any time as I am convinced they are the best pills on the market for any form of heart disease."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR HOME WOMEN HAVE BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Next time you go to the theater or to the "movies" just notice, if you please, how many of our home ladies have beautiful hair—glossy, lustrous, and well-dressed. Then, if you will pick out five or ten of those whose hair seems to be particularly pretty and will ask them whilt they and on it, we feel sure that at least more than half of them will say "Harmody Hair Beautifier." It is fast becoming the rage with both men and women who are particular about the appearances of their hair.

Sprinkle a little Harmony Hair Beautifier on your hair each time before brushing it. Contains no oil; will not change color of hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich lather that immediately penetrates to every part of hair and scalp, insuring a quick, thorough cleansing. Washed off just as quickly, the entire operation takes only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair; leaves no harshness—stick to—just a sweet cleanliness.

READ THIS BOOKLET "THE HAIR AND ITS CARE"

Sent Free Upon Request

The Herpicide Company want every one to have a copy of their booklet telling how to take care of and possess nice hair. The booklet contains much valuable information on the subject of saving and cultivating the hair.

If the present-day men and women would begin to live up to the teachings of this little booklet it is doubtful if the next generation would find a bald-headed man or lady wearing false hair.

It is just as easy to have robust and beautiful hair as to have thin, scraggy hair, or no hair at all. If the scalp is kept clean and free from dandruff the hair grows naturally and luxuriantly.

The booklet tells how this may be most effectively accomplished by the use of Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide destroys dandruff, frees the head from dirt and scurf skin. The hair becomes light, fluffy, and beautiful.

Newbro's Herpicide is "the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ," for which there are many imitations and substitutes said to be just as good. But nothing but the original.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Send 10c in postage to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., and a nice sample will be sent with the booklet.

BLOODY BATTLE BETWEEN MILITIAMEN AND STRIKERS

Miners Illinois Engaged in a Pitched Battle With State Troops and Thirteen Are Killed and Scores Injured.

THOUSANDS ARE HOMELESS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

DENVER, Col., April 21.—Thirteen persons are dead, mostly strikers, scores injured, and thousands of women and children homeless. That is the result at an early hour to-day of the bloodiest battle in labour warfare ever waged in this state. Troops had been reinforced to-day and it is thought that better order will be secured. The striking miners are sullen, however, and it is stated that fifteen hundred armed miners from the outlying camps are on the way in to give another pitched battle to the militiamen.

Board of Management to consist of three members, appointed for ten years each.

PROTECT YOUR POCKET-BOOK

Extraordinary Scenes in a Clothing Deal by Messrs. H. Lebrun & Co.

It is the duty of all of us to use every fair means to protect our own pocket-books. That is thrift in its best sense. When we spend money we should be sure that we are getting something of substantial value for it.

The representative of a well-known clothing manufacturing company, who—like a good many other companies, just now, are rather badly tied up for money—made a special trip to Peterborough on a business visit with Mr. Joseph Picard, Mr., of the clothing firm of H. Lebrun & Co. The visit resulted in the closing up of a big bargain deal by which Messrs. Lebrun & Co. secured five hundred spic-and-span new Spring Suits for men, young men and boys, at a price actually less than one-half of the manufacturers' regular selling price.

In order to make such an extraordinary offer known to the public of Peterborough, Messrs. Lebrun & Co. announce in a half-page advertisement in to-day's Examiner, the very unusual bonafide money-saving features which this lucky deal offers to the purchaser.

On Thursday, April 23th, a number of these Spring Suits will be placed on sale at the lowest price to secure quick selling. In all probability not one of the next six months will offer such an opportunity to secure such high class clothing at such a low price. Only $10.85 each for Suits, which in the regular way of business would be sold at $20.00. Read Messrs. Lebrun & Co.'s three-column announcement in to-day's issue and be sure to be on hand early on Thursday morning.

FINES FOR THE INDIANS

Richard Henry and Dick Perry Are Mulcted $20 and Costs as Result of Disturbance on Buckhorn Road

SMOKE REMANDED

Albert Smoke, Richard Henry and Dick Perry, the three Indians arrested last Thursday by County Constable David Montgomery, of Buckhorn, came again before Magistrate Edmison in County Police Court this morning. It will be remembered that the three of them created a disturbance on the road to Buckhorn, and threw their companion out before they reached that place. In that village they continued their misbehaviour and were arrested by County Constable Montgomery. Their whole conduct was due to a liberal stock of the "stuff that cheers," which they managed to secure before they left the city on Thursday.

On Friday last they came before Magistrate Edmison and pleaded guilty to being found drunk in a local option district. They were remanded until this morning because the stories they told about sympathetic strangers providing them with bottles of whisky without charge did not appeal to the Court as being based on fact. This morning they were again questioned and cross-questioned as to where they got the liquor, but the only result was to discover the unsuspected generosity of the strangers who walk the streets of this city patiently waiting for an Indian to put in an appearance and present him with a bottle of whisky.

Richard Henry and Dick Perry were fined $20 and costs each, amounting to $27.50, for being drunk in a local option district. They were allowed to go and given until the 1st of June to pay their fines.

Smoke, however, was confronted with another charge, that of assaulting the County Constable and resisting arrest on Thursday, the 16th day of April, 1914. This charge was laid by County Constable Cochrane after a long argument with Magistrate Edmison as to whether Smoke should be again remanded on the charge already preferred against him. The Magistrate said however:

"All three are charged with the same offence, and I am going to give them all the same treatment. I don't like to have respectable people paying for such characters as these. Smoke didn't abuse the constable."

"He certainly assaulted the constable," said Mr. Cochrane.

"But there is no charge against him for that."

"No, but there is a charge against him for which he can be held in gaol."

"I think I'll deal with them all alike," repeated the Magistrate.

"Then I'll swear out an information against Smoke right now for assaulting the constable and have Mr. Montgomery come here and prove it."

"Well you can do that but I think it's unwise," replied the Magistrate, as he commenced to draw up the necessary papers.

On this charge Smoke was remanded until Friday at 11 o'clock. The others left the Court Room. If they do not pay their fines before the 1st of June they will spend that balmy month in the County Jail.

HARRY LENNOX'S DEATH ACCIDENTAL

Jury Render Verdict at the Inquest of the Late Harry Lennox Who Was Killed on Tuesday Last.

THE EVIDENCE

That the late Harry Lennox met his death accidentally by being run over by part of the C.P.R. freight train, Fleet 76, going East about 5.45 p.m., was the verdict handed in at the concluding session of the inquest to inquire into the death of Harvey Lennox of Bowmanville, who was killed on Tuesday evening, April 14th, held last evening before Coroner Dr. S. N. Gossé.

The jury, of which Mr. J. M. Brooks was foreman, was composed as follows: Messrs. Thos. Boyle, John [illegible], Wm. Grey, J. Davis, D. Flynn, Wm. A. Millan, A. Johnstone, E. Gainey, J. Mothersl, J. B. Larocque, and J. B. McGill.

THE EVIDENCE.

Five witnesses were heard.

Mr. Patrick Gorham, East City, was first called. He told of first seeing the body on his way to work on Wednesday morning. It was lying about forty feet from the west side of the water. He went to the station and telephoned the police.

Mr. Henry Falkner, car inspector of Havelock, called, stated that he received instructions from Assistant Superintendent Rogers that a man had been killed east of Peterborough and to examine freight train First 76. He found blood on five cars, the first on which it was noticed being the seventh one from the engine. The deceased wasn't struck by any car ahead of the seventh."

Messrs. Arthur Quibbell, John Miller, and Sam. Sewell testified to having seen the deceased in Ackerman's shop on the afternoon of the fatality. Quibbell also saw him going south on George Street about 6.10 of the same evening.

The jury was about ten minutes in reaching the above verdict.

Assistant Crown Attorney Wearing conducted the investigation.

WATER HAS RISEN AT BOBCAYGEON

Some of the Logs Released Out to Relieve the Situation—The Forerunner of the Spring Flood Apparently on the Way

NOT ENOUGH THIS SPRING

Mr. E. Bartlett, of the Trent Canal office, stated that a report had been received from Bobcaygeon to the effect that a freshet had arrived there and swollen the water above the dam. Several logs were ordered out in order to control the flow of the water.

At Young's Point it was stated that the water was down several inches, but this is regarded as only a temporary condition, due to the fact that 31 logs had been put in at Buckhorn and 4 at Lovesick.

As the water gradually rises with the spring gathering of the waters the dams will be manipulated to the best advantage.

It is not expected that the water will be as high as in previous years, although the report from Orillia indicates that whatever is coming this spring has begun to show itself.

"STAND BY OUR TOWN"

The Examiner's Campaign to Encourage Fair Shopping

Following up The Examiner's efforts to stimulate and encourage local trade in this district, as demonstrated by its recent "Dollar Day" success, we will begin shortly a series of articles in a campaign against the "Mail Order Evil," and general marketing by mail.

Believing that the newspapers of Peterborough can assist materially in discouraging out-of-town shopping, and educate the people to stand by their own town merchants, The Examiner enlists its influence in this campaign of loyalty to our city.

Loyalty to our own town, honesty with our subscribers, and fairness to our advertisers, are the motives which prompt this action.

We have our Merchants' Associations, our Board of Trade, and other agencies, but the evil still exists. And now that the new Parcel Post law has been inaugurated, a wide avenue seems to have been opened for sapping the life of local trade and diverting it to the Mail Order Houses of the big cities.

No outside City Departmental Store or Catalogue House ever sends a dollar to the rural consumer; they employ no help in the small cities or country towns; neither do they pay any taxes. They do nothing but draw the money away to exploit their own projects in the cities.

Before the consumer will come to patronize the Mail-Order Houses he will require to be shown that his method of buying his necessities is not only an injustice to his local merchant, but will eventually work an injury to himself.

Once each week, therefore, The Examiner proposes to devote a portion of its space to this all important matter, and the first of the series will appear in to-morrow's issue on this page.

FARMERS' MAPLE SYRUP DOUBTED

Lakefield Man Bought Two Gallons on Saturday and Now Says It Is Mostly Sugar of Some Kind.

APPEALED TO MR. SPENCE

A Lakefield man's purchase of maple syrup on the market last Saturday illustrates the wisdom of the council's new regulation requiring farmers to display their names.

Two gallons of maple syrup did the Lakefield man buy, but this morning he is of the opinion that the only maple element in the preparation is the name. He called upon Sanitary Inspector Spence to-day and produced a honey jar full of the alleged syrup, and asked the Inspector to find the maple. Mr. Spence stated that his capabilities were not as comprehensive that he could undertake the test for granulated or brown sugar, glucose or whatever other sweet was believed to have been used in the product.

AN INCH OF SUGAR.

The sugar was probably four inches tall and almost two inches at the bottom registered a white, sugary sediment. The syrup was of a light brown colour, and undoubtedly there was a maple flavour to the syrup but it did not strike the palate with the true maple syrup taste.

The Lakefield man, who asked that his name be withheld, stated that he had bought maple syrup for many years, and he felt that he knew the genuine article. But he claimed that the two gallons purchased on Saturday were not pure maple syrup. He brought the sample to Inspector Spence for a verification of his suspicions.

This purchaser said he had tried to secure the salesman's name from Market Clerk Shakleman, but the latter either did not know or declined to divulge it. In any case the salesman's identity is unknown to the Lakefield man, who, from his experience, is a strong supporter of the idea that the farmers should be required to display their names.

The syrup appeared to the Examiner reporter to lack the texture of genuine maple syrup, although some makers obtain good quality and a thinness that is explained by the poor methods of preparation. But there was also a lack of the true maple taste. To a fairly well-cultivated taste the product was questionable, and the Lakefield man might feel safe in doubting his money on the probability of his having been stung.

Seventeen Men Added To Force

Seventeen men have been taken on on by Messrs. Foley & Gleason since yesterday morning and there are now sixty-seven men working on the stretch between Brock and McDonnel Streets. The rails have been taken up and the grading for the heavier steels is now in progress. It is expected that the actual paving of this part of George Street will begin in ten days' time.

Hydro-Electric Cable

The Hydro-Electric cables are being continued north on George Street to McDonnel and east on McDonnel to Water streets. This work is also being carried on in an effort to have it done before paving is started. When this work is completed the whole area included in Water, Murray, Aylmer and Charlotte streets will be lighted by the new magnetite lamps and will be paved.

Stole Large Sum From His Employer

BROCKVILLE, April 21.—A rather daring robbery was made yesterday afternoon when Hugh Kippen, the piano-player and acting manager of the Brock Theatre, was deprived of a wallet containing about $120. Kippen suspected a young man named Harold Kuschonat, who he had had beating carpets for him.

Kuschonat, who is of Jewish extraction, was employed at the Revere House as night bell boy. He lost that position, and was hard-up for something to do, and Kippen gave him his meals in return for cleaning his carpets. Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. Kippen were entertaining some Cornwall friends, and left their rooms on the corner of King and Buell streets to go to the Strathcona Hall for dinner. During their absence Kuschonat returned to the Kippen house for his dinner. The maid gave him something to eat, after which he made his escape and went upstairs.

The wallet was located in a dressing table. The key was in the lock, and Kuschonat opened the drawer and took the wallet.

The theft was discovered by Kippen on his return home and he immediately suspected the youth. Inquiries revealed the fact that the suspected lad had gone to Gananoque. He was arrested there and brought back to Brockville for trial.

ANGLO-SAXON REFUGEES ARE FLEEING FROM MEXICO

Situation Is Unaltered To-day—No Action by United States Until the Senate Carries Resolution.

FOREIGNERS NOT SAFE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 21.—Grave developments in the Mexican situation were indicated this morning about ten-thirty by an emergency conference between President Wilson, Secretary of State Bryan and Secretary Daniels. It is understood that it related to a report that a German vessel is rushing towards Mexico with machine guns for the Mexicans. The question is, will the United States have a right to seize a vessel on high seas. "We must not do anything to offend Germany at this juncture," said one official to-day. Little official word filters through from Mexico City, and all press messages are so severely censored that there is nothing in them. The United States Consulate reports the city quiet, but the United States and Canadian refugees are rushing to the coast. Not much faith is placed in Huerta's promise of protection for the Anglo-Saxons. He could not protect them entirely if he wanted to. It is realized here that the Canadians and British are in just as dangerous a position in Mexico as the United States-ers, as the average Mexican is ignorant and knows them as one people of the same language, and therefore all equally to be hated.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, April 21. — Nearly one hundred United States and British refugees arrived here to-day from the interior, and immediately boarded ships under the protection of the United States Government.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 21. — Meeting was quiet all over a long meeting of the cabinet this morning except the statement that no action would be taken in regard to army and navy operations until the Senate had carried the resolutions authorizing President Wilson to act.

The Senate met at noon and again seemed inclined to balk at the nature of President Wilson's message being aimed too directly at Huerta personally. At two o'clock it looked as if the Senators would spend another ten hours in talk before anything is done.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 21. — It is rumoured that United States Rear Admiral Fletcher at Vera Cruz has practically matters by already seizing his Mexican customs house to get at the arms brought in by a German steamer. The cabinet sent a special messenger to Senate Democratic leaders asking them to hasten the passage of the resolution at all costs.

$100 FINE IS INFLICTED

Magistrate Finds Defendant Guilty of Keeping a Common Gaming House—Sentence to Imprisonment

BOYS ARE CHARGED

Magistrate Dobbin this morning delivered judgment in the case in which Raymond Sullivan was charged with keeping a common gaming house.

The judgment read in part as follows:

"Defendant herein is charged with having, on Wednesday April 8th, kept a disorderly house, to wit, a common gaming house, in the City of Peterborough contrary to the criminal code.

"I have considered many cases to which I was referred, and the judgment of the authorities is plain.

"I find that the pool room in question was a gaming house, that Sullivan is guilty of keeping it, and that I had absolute jurisdiction to try this case. I adjudge that Sullivan is guilty, and I adjudge that in lieu of imprisonment he do pay a fine of one hundred dollars without costs, forthwith; and that in default of payment, he be imprisoned in the County Jail, of the County of Peterborough, for a term of six months, or until such shorter time, as such fine be paid in."

The case has aroused much interest among the young men of the City, and each time the case has come up a crowded court room has been the result. It was a case where two charges, from an outside point, came to the City to find a unit "roll," but the biter got bit.

Mr. Gordon, acting for Sullivan, asked that the time be made fifteen days, but His Worship was absolutely final in his judgment.

The fine was paid, but under protest. It is probable that further litigation will arise in connection with the case.

Six young lads were charged with having created a disturbance at the corner of Romaine and Park Streets. F. C. Reid, in giving evidence, said that last evening he watched the defendants for over half an hour, and heard them making a great noise, interminged with words which have as yet been assigned no space in the English Dictionary.

The case was enlarged until Friday, to allow of outside witnesses to give evidence, as His Worship said that it was unwise to always make a conviction on the evidence of a police officer. He would rather convict on the testimony of outside persons sometimes, so as to uphold the credibility of the police.

Mr. McElderry appeared for defendants.

The two men who were charged with playing pool in a common gaming house were, after the same evidence as that taken in the case against the former charge, had been heard, allowed to go until a week from to-day, when His Worship will deliver his judgment.

STERLING IS NOW THE ONLY ABSENTEE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 21.—More favourable weather greeted the Peterborough Canadian Leaguers to-day and Manager Blount had his men out for a two-hours' workout this morning, the time being spent in batting and infield practice. Martin, a young southpaw pitcher from Pittsburg was on the rubber during the batting practice. He is seeking a berth on the team.

Outfielder Willie Swarts arrived at noon, looking fit and well. The little left fielder has been working out at home for some time and reports in good shape. The only missing member of the squad now is Pitcher Bob Starling.

With the weather bright and warm Manager Blount is making the best of it and he will put the gang through a twelve-innings' workout game this afternoon.

BIRTH.

WAINWRIGHT—To Mr. and Mrs. S. Wainwright, 276 McDonnel street, on Monday, April 20, a son.

CLARK.—On 18th April, to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Clark, 56 Victoria Ave. —a son (still-born).

NEW PIANO AND MUSIC STORE TO BE OPENED

Mr. George Leader & Sons will open a new music store on Hunter Street, opposite the Oriental Hotel, in the premises formerly occupied by Lane & Eano. The firm is expected to open for a public reception about 1st May.

The new firm have secured the agency of the Gerhard Heintzman and Dominion pianos, which they propose to sell widely in Peterborough and the surrounding district.

Mr. Leader has been in the piano business in Peterborough during the past eight years, and for seventeen years before was engaged in the same business in the Old Country. With an experience of 25 years behind him, and with the assistance of his sons, he feels confident in making an announcement of his new business to the citizens. The new firm will be in a position to undertake tuning and repairing on a large scale, and promises the Peterborough people a first-class service.

MEETING OF THE WOODMEN OF WORLD

A meeting of the Woodmen of the World was held in their rooms last night, when Mr. D. Cinnamon of Lindsay and Mr. Walter Mann of Parkdale, Toronto, were present.

The subject under discussion was that of the rates, which it is understood may be raised in the near future. One of the prominent members of the Grand Camp was to have been present to discuss the question, but was unavoidably detained.

At the conclusion of the meeting a luncheon was held at Coleman's, with about twenty-five members present, but owing to the lateness of the hour there were no speeches. The attendance at the meeting was unusually large.

TRADE AND TREASON.

If trade with the United States is regarded as treason, as having a tendency towards annexation, Canada is galloping annexationward under the Conservative Government. According to trade figures supplied by Mr. Borden's Minister of Finance, in his budget statement, Canadian exports to the United States increased from 112 million dollars in 1911 to 161 million dollars in the fiscal year 1913-14. In the same period imports from the United States into Canada increased 87 millions—from 274 millions to 361 millions. The total "truck and trade with the Yankees," which was 386 millions in 1911, has, under the "no-truck-nor-trade" Borden Government, grown to 522 millions, an increase in two years of 147 millions. This brings Canada into the position of being the second best customer of the United States, Great Britain being the first. Canada's trade with the United States is growing much faster than with Great Britain or any other country. There does not seem to be any objection to trading with the United States, and there is a just reason why reciprocal trade is growing. The markets of the two countries are natural to each other; that is, trade follows the line of least traffic resistance. In spite of artificial barriers in the form of tar. His the fact that under a truly loyal Conservative Government trade between the two countries is growing is evidence that the cry raised at the general election —that trade between the two countries would promote our political absorption, and be treason, was a foolish and deceiving cry, a companion, in this regard, to the "loyalty" cry which helped the Conservative Government to power, which they have exercised with the greatest disregard to the "loyalist" propaganda which helped them in, thanks to the gullibility of a sufficient number of electors.

THE POWER OF PAINT.

There's a hint to the housewife and householder in the tuneful lines of Tennyson: "In the spring a brighter iris gathers on the burnished dove." Spring is the season of rejuvenation, when all nature grows young again, and man follows suit. In the spring a heartier hustle gathers on the harassed housewife; from attic to cellar the house-cleaning goes on. Carpets, curtains, etc., are renewed with ammonia or soap, or made new if the cash holds out. The home is made cleaner, sweeter, and brighter within. Then why not take a turn at the outside? The grounds and the large or little lawns are raked, swept, and garnished. In this setting the finishing touch will consist in new paint. In our trying climate paint loses its lustre soon, and a shabby outside to a house that is bright and clean within, and has tidy grounds and clean lawns, is a false note in the harmony of beauty. No one who has not noticed will have noticed how the brightening touch of paint glorifies the humblest house. To be in keeping with the spring spirit of universal renovation, a little, or if needed, a good deal of painting will, as charity covers a multitude of sins, cover a great deal of shabbiness, and remake the house and help remake the beauty of the home. Soon the trees will be in leaf, the lawns dressed in their living green, and the full beauty of the summer be displayed. In the setting of emblowing trees, emerald lawns, splashed here and there with the tinted glow of flowers, your house, with its dingy paint, will have a shabby and shamefaced look, and will not harmonize. If every street, every lawn in the city were tidied to the possible point, and every home brightened with paint, the brightness and beauty of Peterborough would be immeasurably amplified. Let the householder or householdress consider the matter, and it will be seen that with all the house cleaning and renovation, house painting cannot be consistently neglected.

THE EXPERIMENTAL FARMS REPORT.

The information contained in the annual reports of the Experimental Farms of the Dominion Department of Agriculture is so varied and complete as to render these yearly volumes almost worthy the name of "Encyclopedia of Agriculture." The Experimental Farms System embraces the Central Farm and twenty Branch Farms and Stations, each manned by a staff of specialists. At these wide-spread, well-equipped institutions practically every phase of agriculture, from the study and suppression of plant diseases to the breeding and raising of all manner of orchard, garden and field crops and classes of farm animals, are taken up. In addition, seven outlying sub-stations carry on and report upon work of an agricultural nature.

The report for the year ending March 31st, 1913, makes a volume of nearly 700 pages crammed with the meat of what was accomplished and found out during the year. The information is so classified and treated as to be readily available to the reader in whatever subject he may chance to be interested. A large edition has been printed so as to supply for some time at least every applicant who will drop a card for a copy to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

BAD CONDITION OF THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT

The Government of Ontario is going to pieces. Every new day brings new signs of Cabinet dissensions. These dissensions are the result not of strength but of weakness breeds more weakness. Already the bots are drawn and the bands broken that hold a Cabinet together—the bolts of high public interest and the bands of personal integrity and mutual confidence. The Cabinet is going to pieces.

The situation is similar to the situation in the Dominion Government at the time of "the nest of traitors" before 1896. Following the regime of Sir John Macdonald, and immediately after the brief leadership of Sir John Thompson, the Ottawa Cabinet broke up because of disintegrating forces working from within. There was no dominating public purpose, no masterful mind, no supreme and unifying motive. The warring elements, each ambitious for its own ends, made the Government a public menace. Selfish regard for the perquisites of office honeycombed the Cabinet and destroyed the party. It was a case of political suicide.

That ugly history is repeating itself in the Government at Toronto. Never in Ontario's experience has there been such a spectacle of Governmental ineptitude, incapacity and sudden paralysis as the Legislature has manifested during the present session. Sir James Whitney may not have had the magnetic and compelling personality of Sir John Macdonald, or any of that old chieftain's statecraft, but he was master of his Cabinet. From the beginning of his Premiership until within the past year he was the autocrat of his party in the Legislature. His word was law. He might not inspire his Ministers with even the semblance of statesmanship, but he did hold them back from confessions of helplessness and he did surround them with at least the pretence of public integrity.

As soon as Sir James Whitney's hold on his Ministers slackened the rifts became plain. From the very beginning there had been division over the electric power policy. Mr. Beck early espoused the policy of Provincial control, and partly because of the shortsighted folly of the private power interests he ultimately secured the support in the Cabinet of the Premier. Hon. W. J. Hanna was then, and still is, the friend of the private monopoly. With him stand Dr. Pyne, Dr. Reaume, Mr. Duff, and very effectively, Col. Hendrie. Between Mr. Beck and these colleagues, especially Mr. Hanna and Col. Hendrie, there is unrelenting, almost undisguised, antagonism. Mr. Foy, as acting Premier, is a complacent, but not keenly interested, observer. Mr. Lucas and Mr. Hearst each has his eye on Number One, cherishing vague hopes concerning the Premiership when the new choice must be made and the rupture between Mr. Hanna and Mr. Beck brings about the rejection of both. In the meantime there is in Cabinet circles eagerness for a general election, with Sir James Whitney's name as a rallying cry for all cliques and candidates.

And all this time degeneracy is going on in the Government, and the consequent imperilling of Provincial interests. The unprecedented procedure of the Government in borrowing several millions for the sole purpose of current general expenditures under an authorization explicitly confined to Northern Ontario development is matched in braveness by the Provincial Treasurer's defence of that gross misapplication of public funds. Never before in the Province's history was such an unwarranted borrowing and spending attempted, much less openly and shamelessly defended.

There has been no educational leadership since Hon. Dr. Pyne became Minister. He never can lead because he does not understand. The ignorance of the University and its needs manifested last Friday was hopeless and pitiful. When Sir James was in his pace he handled University matters himself. Now there is neither intelligence nor prudent alience.

Mr. Hanna has swung down the ladder several rounds since the facts in the compromising Taylor case were suppressed. His determined effort to suppress the equally suspicious Snider evidence suggests equal guilt to be concealed. The whitewashing of Mr. Howard Ferguson was fit for tat. Mr. Hanna's star is on the wane, for which he has himself to blame.

As for Dr. Reaume and Mr. Duff, from them nothing was now expected. With an autocratic Premier in control they could at least mark time—put but to themselves they face backwards.

For years the Globe gave to Premier Whitney and his Government all reasonable consideration. Had they continued even to seem devoted to the public interest that considerateness might have continued despite manifest incompetence. It may be that Sir James Whitney deserved encouragement up to the end of his active leadership. The collapse which followed heard upon his withdrawal tells how heavy and deadening his burden was. Now that the strength of his mastership is gone, and the break-up of the Government irreparable, the sooner the worst is over the better alike for the Conservative party and for the Province.—The Globe.

Splendid Address To Astronomical Society By Mr. F. H. Dobbin

Subject of Earthquakes Was Discussed in Very Interesting Manner Last Night.

OTHER ADDRESSES HEARD

The Astronomical Society meeting held in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute last night, was a very successful one in spite of the fact that the attendance was small. The audience more than made up in enthusiasm and keen interest in the subject under discussion what they lacked in numbers. The subject of "Earthquakes" was dealt with, and all who heard the splendid address of Mr. F. H. Dobbin evidently appreciated the privilege that had been extended them by the invitation for all to attend the meeting. Mr. Dobbin was the speaker of the evening, and handled his matter in such a way as to keep the audience intensely interested during every word of his address. When he lead his listeners into the interior of the earth, explotting complex, technical, geological theories he always relieved the situation by an original and apt comparison of the theory to something of every day use and common knowledge. Each time that he dealt with geological facts that seemed about to overtax the knowledge of the lay mind, the complicated theory was brought away from geology and science, and an illustration of it was given by reference to something that was of such common occurrence as to be self evident. Thus treating the subject of earthquakes with the utmost simplicity, the most difficult theories were brought vividly before the audience. Messrs. A. Mowat, T. A. S. Hay, J. F. Hawey and S. [illegible] also spoke briefly.

Before the address a beautiful solo was rendered by Mrs. J. H. Renwick. The piano accompaniment was payed by Miss Ida Sanderson.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay, President of the Peterborough Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society, ably officiated as Chairman.

In opening his address Mr. F. H. Dobbin said that we who lived in Eastern Canada were very fortunate people, because as we are near the upper edge of the temperate zone w are never likely to know the devastation of a cyclone; because of our distance inland we are never likely to suffer the destruction of a tidal wave, and being situated as we are, never likely to experience the dread horrors of a severe earthquakes. Although the earth was usually spoken of as solid, the crust of the earth was in reality, porous, and absorbed immense quantities of water. It had been estimated that if all the water were liberated from the earth it would raise the levels of the oceans of the world three feet.

The systematic study of earthquakes had only been carried on during the past sixty years, and during that time 160,000 earthquakes, most of them local shocks only, had been recorded. The depth or thickness of the crust of the earth was determined by observation and deduction. By actual observation the temperature increased one degree every fifty-eight feet we penetrated into the earth's crust or, roughly speaking, one hundred degrees for each mile. It was known that the temperature at which iron rock would melt was 2500 degrees. Therefore the earth's crust would be about twenty to twenty-two miles thick. The actual centre was a solid with some of the properties of a fluid. This was illustrated by considering a lump of putty which would knock a man down if thrown at him with force, but which would flatten out when pressure was applied to it.

The bottom of the ocean was four or five miles nearer the centre of the earth than the land. Some earthquakes resulted from volcanoes. These were local quakes. But in epoch-making, phenomenal earthquakes, volcanoes at the most, were only a tributary cause.

The earth was like a giant thermos bottle, with the heat of ages throttled in the interior. The earth was a splendid non-conductor, and with fifty or sixty miles interposed between human life and the heat of the centre of the earth it was no wonder that we did not feel its effect, or that it had been preserved during the ages. The action of the intense heat on the water in the earth resulted in the formation of an immense quantity of inflammable gas, and the resultant power of it we had no idea of. This force found an outlet through volcanoes and an immense quantity of lava was blown out of the earth's crust. Following this the earth would collapse to fill the space left, and the result was a local earthquake.

But epoch-making earthquakes were not due to the filling up of a pocket left in this manner, but to the direct influence of the immense force of the water and heat. Thus, in 1883, a whole island of the coast of Japan was blown into the air and sea. The crops in Japanese fields, six hundred miles away, were ruined; ashes fell on steamers 1,600 miles away, and for months the atmosphere in that region was not cleared.

The earth's crust was contracting from month to month and year to year. The earth exudes heat—heat causes expansion—therefore the giving off or losing of heat caused contraction.

Fractures and [illegible]-lined features in the earth's crust that [illegible] been located. They followed the sea closely and, under force they augmented and widened. This was the cause of the most disastrous San Francisco earthquake, where the movement was a longitudinal one of 7 feet and the shock continued intermitently for seven minutes. The centres of continents were thus found to be remarkably free from the earthquake shocks.

Mr. Mowat dealt briefly with the benefit of earthquakes in preserving the continents above the level of the oceans, and Messrs. Keyes and Howey also spoke.

In reference to te earthquake that visited Peterborough last February Mr. T. A. S. Hay told of incidents that he had learned of. Most of the anecdotes concerning the local quake were new to those present and were heard with interest.

The meeting closed with the singing of "God Save the King."

TRADITIONS OF THE ENGLISH RACE ARE THE FINEST IN THE WORLD

Said the Right Rev. His Lordship the Bishop of Kingston, in an Inspiring Sermon at St. John's Church Last Evening—Time Honoured Service in Commemoration of St. George, End's Patron Saint—Several Local Bodies Were Represented.

THE MUSIC

Truly representative of the time-honoured style of English Church service was that held in St. John's Church last evening, in commemoration of St. George's Day, which Falls on Thursday next. There were present, members of the City Council and City officials, the Sons of England Society, and other bodies ,which helped to swell the congregation, which was somewhat disappointing. The Confession, Lord's Prayer, and Responses, were chanted to a setting by Tallis, and were exceptionally well rendered by the combined choirs of St. George's and St. John's churches.

The Priesthood.

His Lordship, the Right Rev. Bishop of Kingston, was conducted to his throne, by Canon Davidson, and among the officiating priests present, were the Rev. Allen, of Millbrook, Rev. F. J. Sawyers, of St. Luke's Church, and the Rev. W. Price, who acted as Precentor.

His Lordship is a man of possessing personality, an Englishman of the highest type, and boldest intellect, outspoken, with a delivery that demands the attention of his listeners, while the compelling force which he uses, his educative, and interesting expositions, cannot help but instill into the minds of all his unfailing earnestness.

English Traditions.

His sermon last night, embodied the traditions for which the English people were, and still are, famous.

He chose for his text, the second chapter, of the second epistle of St. Paul to the Thessalonians, and part of the 15th verse. "Therefore brethren, stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught."

"Paul know very well," said His Lordship, "that his converts, in the City of Thessalonica, to whom he had written, were not oversure of what encouragement they would get, for they had been converted to Christianity, and had become members of the new Kingdom of Christ, yet, there were always present before them, those temptations and inducements, to go back, from the high standard to which they had been called, and to return again to heathendom. It was one of the persistent interests of Paul's work, and a mark of higher calling to his converts.

Showed the Qualities.

But as it was they were going to have a hard fight, but he said, it is worth it, and to have this, they showed two great qualities, steadfastness, and the power to live up to noble traditions. "Therefore brethren stand fast, and hold the traditions which ye have been taught."

Atmosphere of the Cross.

Now, it is interesting to observe that he meant traditions that affirmed themselves to the obligations of the Christian life. What I mean is, that they understood, and connected them with the Gospel of Jesus Christ. They believed they should live up to the standard of the Gospel. The Christian traditions in the early days, was something to be reckoned with. The traditional atmosphere was the atmosphere of the cross, on which the Saviour died; died, not only for mankind, but also to show that even death itself, is preferable to dishonour. The tradition created by the conduct of the martyr Stephen, who would not deny his Lord but prefered a shameful death. He stood fast, and held the traditions he had been taught.

Painful Deaths.

And in those times, you say, weak maidens, and young children going to the most painful deaths, in the faith of Jesus Christ. They met death, face to face, sooner than be false to Christ It is then, the power of noble tradition, St. Paul's call to martyrs who had been his converts. But we know how it is the noble tradition, how excessively simple it is, and yet something worth preserving, and so the word describes Christianity in its perfection, together with the same feeling that can exercise the mind of any generation, and yet can be said to be the great lesson, and splendid message, in these words of St. Paul.

Strong in Tradition.

The power of noble tradition is splendid. There can be no stronger force, than these traditions, and the lives of many are influenced by its powers. We have come to a country, with its tremendous possibilities, to work. What can we do towards its formation. What can we do to help to find something, which will be a help to the greatest nation the world has ever seen. Well, we are strong in traditions, the nobleat traditions the world has ever seen, and known, are belonging to our race.

An Instance.

Take for instance, the terrible shipwreck, the shipwreck that occurred, not very long ago, the Titanic. All shipwrecks are very much alike in detail, but there is one thing, that if the captain was of British race, of English race, you may be sure, he will be the last man to leave thes hip, or else he will go down in it.

This is almost always the case. Do you suppose that these men are any braver than the ordinary men.

Courage.

We look to that courage as the British characteristic. But they have behind them, when the crisis comes, the tremendous driving power of those traditions, that the captain of a British vessel, is always last to leave the ship, or go down with it. That has been the tradition for many, many years. These men are no braver than you or me. It is the power of noble tradition, and we thank God it is so. We know we have our failings, but rather we can say we understand what responsibilities are in the contribution we can make to that young and new nationality, which we must hope to build up.

Loyalty and Steadfastness.

As we come into this country, which is yet in its first youth, we must have an influence on its future life. We cannot stand aside, we either have to help or hinder. We can give loyalty to noble traditions, and steadfastness is a peculiar characteristic of the English race. Some people call it stubbornness, but some of it should be brought into the life of this country. But is it all we bring with us from the Old Country. We bring the traditions that we are not ashamed to show, and that is, that we base our national life upon religion. We bring this as our contribution to our new country.

Not Hypocritical.

People have called us hypocrites

Bonar Law May Move A Censure Vote

Special Cable to The Examiner;

LONDON, Eng., April 21—The Ulster Council's charges are described by the Westminster Gazette as Tory obsession. Despite Asquith's telling replies last night Bonar Law is apparently determined to push the matter further and will, it is expected, move a vote of censure, in order to secure a full debate. He will find the Liberals eager to meet him. They say the whole Ulster massacre story is part of a scheme of the die-hards to prevent conciliation. It may for the moment, succeed in its purpose. Many moderate Unionists express their disapproval of the publication of exaggerated charges, which they admit can do no good, and may do much harm. If the censure debate comes the Liberals will carry the war into the enemy's camp, demanding the names and exposing the real plot which existed between Ulster politicians and various cavalry officers. Last night's Welsh disestablishment debate strikingly showed the indifference of Parliament to any issue except home rule. The attendance was small and the debate apathetic.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Annual Meeting of the George Street Methodist Epworth League

The Epworth League of George Street Methodist Church held it annual meeting and election of officers last evening, with the pastor, Rev. R G. Peever, in the chair, about 120 members and friends being present.

The first part of the programme was devoted to receiving annual reports from the six departments and closing up the year's business. Excellent reports were received, indicative of the most encouraging year's work, the year ending April 30th.

The Christian Endeavour and Lookout Department gave a commendable report in connection with the Christian Endeavour and Lookout work. Through its active efforts it has succeeded in just doubling the membership from 78 to 155. The Missionary Department have greatly encouraged the study of home and foreign missions by monthly programmes and mission study classes. Through this department the society will contribute $200 to the Forward Movement for Missions this year. A Visiting and Relief Committee has also done splendid service in visiting and sending flowers to the sick and aged of the congregation and giving practical relief to poor families.

The Literary and Social Department, carried on for the purpose of promoting literary work and social intercourse among the young people, have held some very interesting evenings, including debates and socials. The Christian Citizenship, which is a department entirely for men's work was severely handicapped through several changes in the vice-presidency but made a fair showing. The Junior Epworth League, which is in charge of the 5th Vice-President of the Senior League, reported having a membership of 45. This department meets on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, and is for children under fifteen years of age.

A Publicity Department was formed during the year as an experiment and it has been found very successful. It had charge of the publicity work of the society, reporting to the newspapers, and also published a society paper, which was read at each monthly meeting. This added a very interesting feature to the work of the society. Altogether, the Epworth League is to be congratulated on the flourishing condition in which it now is. A further innovation has been introduced for the coming year.

At the request of the President, who was re-elected, the associate presidents were appointed to assist him in the work of the society.

The following officers were elected for 1914-15:

President: C. S. Thompson, B.A.

Associate Presidents: Miss Pearl Hardill and Mr. Earl Logan.

First Vice-President (Christian Endeavour): Miss Lillian Fisher.

Second Vice-President (Missionary): Miss A. L. Beatty.

Third Vice-President (Literary and Social): Miss Roxie McKee.

Fourth Vice-President (Christian Citizenship): Mr. Horace Coon.

Fifth Vice-President (Junior Epworth League): Mrs. M. McCarroll.

Sixth Vice-President (Publicity Department): Miss J. Bedford.

Secretary: Mr. T. Shields.

Assistant Secretary: Mr. S. Ivey.

Corresponding Secretary: Mr. Morley Powell.

Treasurer: Mr. E. Oke.

MADOC WAS HIT HARD BY BANK BREAK

Its Thousand People Said to Have Had Nearly Half a Million on Deposit—Many of the Residents Have Been Cleaned to Their Last Dollar

SOME STORIES FROM LOSING DEPOSITORS

MADOC, Ont., April 20.—Yesterday the town of Madoc, snuggling amongst the hills of Hastings County, was a prosperous, bustling place of 1,000 inhabitants, full of the happiness of a growing town, but to-day the town is filled with grief. It still has its 1,000 people, but they are in a struggling state of despondency and hope; despondent because of the fact that in many cases the savings and all the results of years of toil and labour are locked up in the vaults of J. C. Dale and Company, private bankers, who closed their doors to the depositors three weeks ago, and whose affairs are in such a shape as to necessitate an investigation by chartered accountants.

Despite the fact that many reports are being circulated through the town that the loss will be in the neighbourhood of half a million dollars, a figure representing almost the total amount of the deposits, the silence of the investigators brings a flickering hope to the hearts of the depositors. As quickly as a report is circulated that the loss is serious it is immediately followed by one that the bank's creditors will be paid in full.

In groups of three and fours, in hushed but excited tones, this one subject is the sole topic of conversation in the streets, stores, and post-office, business men reported wealthy and those who have gone through many a financial panic, men who have lost most of their resources in the crash are eagerly telling how much John Jones or Dan Smith lost, and how they believe he will have to mortgage his home, but with one accord these men refuse to tell their own losses. Practically every citizen of the town is a depositor to a certain extent, and from the small boy who worked after school for a few dollars a week to the aged couple who have managed to accumulate enough to keep them from the poor-house during their old age all are brought to realize the misery of misfortune.

No Reproach for Banker.

Throughout it all there has been but few words of complaint, nor has there been a feeling of reproach against Mr. Dale, (as one citizen put it "He did his best and failed." A few were successful in withdrawing their savings before the crash came.

Probably one of the heaviest depositors of the bank is James Whittick, one of the wealthiest men in the town. He is one of the best-known business men of the district, and controls and owns a flour mill. He conducts a feed store a few doors from the closed bank. His deposit is said to be about $10,000, but when interviewed by the reporter he refused to deny or confirm the amount. He told his story in a cheerful way, as if the amount involved was of little consequence.

"I had done business with the bank for twenty years, practically ever since it opened its doors, and a squarer man never lived than Mr. Dale. His name was a synonym for honesty. The money I had on deposit was a trust account, but I kept my savings account there also, and had been adding to it from time to time.

An April Fool Joke.

"Only a few days before the bank closed I made a deposit of a considerable amount. On the morning of April 1 Mr. McBain, the cashier, came into my office and told me that the Bank had suspended payment. I did not take the man seriously, but told him it must be an April fool joke, and that the bank would open the following day. I never once dreamed that the pace had failed."

In the opinion of Mr. Whittick the affair was the worst thing that had ever happened to the Town of Madoc. "We cannot tell what the result will be until we see a statement of affairs. There are many stores that are hard hit, but there are farmers within a radius of twenty miles that have suffered, too.

Tragedy for Chinese Boy.

But different is the case of Mark Tong, the only Chinese boy of the town. A tragedy has come into his life. He lives with his uncle, who runs the laundry. His eyes almost filled with tears when he told the reporter he was 'broke.' Last fall he came to Madoc, and while attending school helped his uncle in the laundry after hours. For this he was given a pittance, how much Mark with boyish pride refused to tell, but regularly the little fellow would go to the bank and deposit his wages. As the account grew the boy grew with pride, and was looked upon with respect by his Canadian companions, "because he was a saver, and had money in the bank." On Monday preceding the close, the lad made his last deposit, and the amount to his credit loomed large—$23.

Had a Presentment.

"You know it is strange how you can often feel something is going to happen,' said a labourer. "You know,' he continued, "my wife told me not to put the last five dollars in the bank.'

"How much did you have in?' asked his companion.

"About $100, and it took me over a year to save it.'

"Well, why didn't you draw it out?'

"I don't know," replied the first speaker candidly. "We were going to buy a house the week after, too, but now I guess we will have to wait.'

Identified.

The Board Of Trade Calls Upon Citizens To Become Members

Can Peterborough accommodate fifty thousand (50,000) excursionists this summer? Mr. Business Man, you can give your answer by becoming a member of the Board of Trade, and thus help them in their scheme to advertise Peterborough as an excursion centre for the summer of 1914.

We have the parks, the waterways, the baseball team, the Lift Lock, and a score of other attractions. All we need is the advertising. The Board of Trade is now working on an extensive scheme to accomplish this. It is to your interest to back them up.

On or before May 1st, a Board of Trade representative will call on you for your subscription. If you are not going to be in, leave your two dollars ($2.00), addressed to the Board of Trade, and he will leave your membership card. Better still, take no chances on being overlooked, but mail it to-morrow to the Secretary or President—along with your ideas as to the most comprehensive way this scheme of advertising Peterborough can be carried out.

Dinner In Honour Of The Bishop

Given to Rt. Rev. Dr. Bidwell at the Savoy Last Evening

A dinner in honour of the first visit to Peterborough of the Right Reverend Dr. Bidwell, Lord Bishop of Kingston, was given last evening at 6 o'clock at the Savoy, at which a large number of leading church men and women were present. After dinner Mr. F. D. Kerr, who presided, in brief but pointed remarks, welcomed the Bishop of Kingston to Peterborough. He referred with pleasure to the fact that a fifth Anglican Church was being opened in the city, and that too, by the youngest and most struggling Anglican Church in Peterborough.

His Lordship Bishop Bidwell in replying, thanked those presenc for their kind welcome. He valued most highly the honour that had been done him. He had preached many St. George's Day sermons in various parts of the country, but this was the first time he had been honoured in this way. He had listened, he said, with not a little pleasure to the chairman's reference to the growth of the church in this community.

Rev. J. Price also spoke briefly.

Rev. Canon Allen, of Millbrook; Rev. Mr. Greaves, of Bobcaygeon, and Mayor Buller, were among the guests present.

TREE PLANTING

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I entirely agree with your remarks on my letter in yesterdays Examiner with regard to tree planting and that the same should be supervised by a competent intelligent body. A similar body should supervise the pruning of trees; for it makes no matter how shapely a tree may be, the pruning knife in the hands of a non-competent person frequently mars its beauty forever. One who undertakes such a task needs to be a person with a due sense of proportion and symmetry.

Yours, etc.,

A BIBLE THAT WAS PRINTED IN YEAR 1471

(Toronto Globe.)

The editorial which appeared in The Globe recently on the subject of old Bibles in Ontario has created a great deal of interest among the possessors of ancient volumes of Holy Writ. Many readers have written and several have called at The Globe office in the matter. One old Bible inspected was dated 1620, and belongs to Mr. G. R. Roberts of Toronto. It has been in the family for generations in Bedford, England, and has probably been used by John Bunayn, who was a member of the Baptist Church where Mr. Roberts' forefathers attended.

But the latest addition to this growing collection of old Bibles is one in the possession of Dr. J. D. Tyrrell of Toronto, who goes one better than any of those yet reported. Dr. Tyrrell's antique treasure was printed in 1477, being 103 years older than Mr. McClelland's Bible. The capitals in this volume are painted in by hand, many of them beautifully floriated, and it is a perfect, untrimmed copy in the original leather binding.

As books of that date had no title page, the following is a translation by Dr. Tyrrell of the colophon:

"In the year of our Lord's incarnation, 1477, and the third year of the Emperor, the great work of the Old and New Testament. . . printed to the praise and glory of the Holy and Indivisible Trinity, and of the Immaculate Virgin Mary, was happily completed in the Royal City of Nurinberg, by Antonius Coburger, dwelling in that city, by whose labour moreover it was most carefully made.

again and again, but it is no hypocrisy as long as we have responsibilities, as well as privileges. But it is well to remember that we are a religious nation, in the hands of God, to do his work. Some people come to this country, with the idea of improving their fortunes. But they must bear in mind that they owe something to the country to which they have just come, in which they must use the three great traditions of the British race. Firstly, freedom. Freedom, not the freedom of anarchy, or lawlessness, but the freedom of men who have learned the freedom of the worship of God.

Word Is His Bond.

It is said also for the tradition of honour, that, the Englishman's word in his mind, and that has been a world-wide reputation for all time. It a greater purity of the higher standard, that a man's word should be his bond.

Loyal to King and God.

Then the third idea, loyalty—and this is connected with religion, because, the nation that is loyal to God, will be loyal to its King. We are loyal to our King, as the representative of the whole empire. Let us try to see the responsibilities we have, and where they lie. It is said that we are too apt to compare things in the Old Land, with things in the new. It is just as well to remember that we owe something to this country. The very essential characteristic of the Englishman was his stability. You can always depend upon him, and there is your religion. Wherever our people have gone, in the history of the past, they have brought there the past, they have brought their religion with them.

Never Been Ashamed.

We have never been ashamed to believe that God is on our side, and while we are trying to do our duty as associates of the new country, no one will blame us if we cannot forget the dear old land from which we come. I do not think anyone would blame us for that. "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning." No, never can we forget the land of our birth! Remember that we came from the land of noble and glorious traditions, and that our thoughts sometimes go back to the beautiful country lanes, and there, in the village, the one spot that is known so well, can you picture, it, the village church, always the central spot in an English village.

The One Dear Spot.

No matter whether you went to church, or whether you did not, that place, was the one spot that was well known to you. I know how these things bear upon us, but trust in that which is spiritual. I know it is a help to many in the old land. There is the dear old church, standing as a memorial to God which we cannot forget.

"I Beseech You, Stand Fast."

I beseech you, by the Grace of God, to stand fast, and hold the traditions that you have been taught an Englishmen. Hold on to these, because they are the finest in the world, and I defy anyone to prove they are not. Take for instance, Nelson, and Henry Lawrence. The latter, when he was dying, requested that the only thing they put on his grave stone, as an epitaph, should be, "Here lies one) who tried to do his duty."

Will Play Our Part.

Remember that we belong to that race, and never let go these traditions and beliefs, and say that we will play our part in the making of the great Canadian nation, of which we are now a part.

May God's richest blessings be upon you and may you realize what your responsibilities are. May you stand fast, especially young men away from the home traditions, it is for them to stand fast, with the mothers, and fathers' influence so far away.

At the conclusion of His Lordship's address the offertory—in aid of the funds of St. George's Church and the new Brownton Anglican Mission, was taken up during the singing of a hymn, following English precedent. This was followed by the rendering of the anthem "Oh Death! Where is Thy Sting? Oh Grave where is thy Victory?" which was extremely well sung.

The whole worship of thanks and praise was brought to a fitting termination by the singing of the National Anthem "God Save the King," including the additional verse on behalf of this Dominion—as found in the hymn book in use in Anglican Churches in Canada.

The entire service reflected credit on all concerned, both as regards the clerical as well as the musical connections.

The manner in which the Evensong service was rendered last night is typical of that adopted in the large majority of parish churches in England, which have taken, as may be naturally supposed, their pattern from their cathederals.

RUBBER WAS WEAK TO-DAY RAILS ACTIVE

Although the uneasiness of the past few days was by no means removed to-day, the buyers gave numerous signs of activity. Most of the rails showed slight gains, including C. P. R., Missouri, Union Pacific, Reading, Erie, and even Southern Pacific. The principal weakness of the day's trading was found in rubber, which was affected by the Mexican situation. Mexican oil, on the other hand, closed with an advance on the opening of nearly two points, although it dropped back to 59 and a fraction several times. Steel was considerably stronger to-day. The buying for the day had a healthy tone, and gave the opinion that buyers like the market at the present levels, and also minimize the present unsettled situation.

MANY GIRLS ARE GUILTY OF SMOKING

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 21. — Before Broder's Anti-Cigarette Committee today, the probation officer of the Montreal Juvenile Court, Mrs. Henderson, declared many girls who came to the Juvenile Court smoked cigarettes. The majority of these came for immorality, and nearly all smoked.

Mrs. Henderson stated that she was appalled at the number of women in high social circles who smoked—in fact, very little girls.

"I came in contact with a club on the lake shore, in which ten girls, daughters of people in high social circles, with incomes sufficient to go away for summer, all of whom range in age from 11 to 14 years, were smokers of cigarettes," said Mrs. Henderson.

Mr. Kyte asked whether the mothers of the children who formed the club knew that their children were smoking. Mrs. Henderson thought not, though two of the mothers smoked themselves.

Many of the members of committee are in favour of legislation preventing the sale of cigarettes to or for women as well as minors. One witness said he had never heard of a working woman smoking cigarettes, only society women and prostitutes.

WHAT ACTION WILL BE TAKEN BY CANADA?

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 21.—W. F. Cockshutt, the member for Brantford, has given notice of the following motion that he will ask Government "in the event of war between the United States and Mexico, will the Government take any precautions to secure the safety of the lives and property of Canadians in Mexico, and if so, what action will be taken?"

A FINE BOOST FOR PETES NEW CATCHER

The London Advertiser says:

Curly Blount grabbed off a catcher that "Doc." would have lost no time in securing had he known that he was free. The player in question is Mugsy Miller, and Reisling says he will be one of the best backstops in the league this season. Miller is a former Central Leaguer and Reisling cannot understand how he came to be a free agent. Blount certainly landed a fine little backstop when he got Miller, in the opinion of Reisling.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Hamilton Herald: The Hamilton squad has had several fruitful workouts since Manager Yates entered on the scene, but it is safe to say that Saturday's practice was the best yet held. Besides the seven-inning battle between the Regulars and Yannigans, considerable time was spent in batting and fielding practice, and the large number of spectators was tickled with the showing made. It was the opinion of the dyed-in-the-wool fans that regardless of who are kept on the pay-roll, Manager Yates will have a pretty tidy outfit, and one that will take some beating in the chase for the Canadian League championship. Dutch Eunick, the shortfielder sent on by Manager Jack Dunn, of the Baltimore International League club, is making a big hit. He is a demon for handling all sorts of drives, and picks them out of the dirt with remarkable ease. His showing even on the uncertain grass at the cricket field has been brilliant. Ted Baldwin looks like the best man for the third base position that has been seen around these parts, and Broadbent runs him a close chase for the position. Both the outfield and infield shape up strong, and already the fans have begun to have visions of Hamilton being up near the top, and battling it out all the way.

KEEN FIGHT FOR POSITIONS IS A FEATURE OF PETES TRAINING CAMP

Battle All Along the Line For Positions on the Team and Manager Blount Will Have His Hands Full in Making Selections---Nine Innings Practice Game Played Yesterday Afternoon--Buckley the First Recruit to Draw Blue Envelope.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 21.—If practice counts for anything the Peterborough Canadian League Club should be well up in the race this season. Manager Curly Blount is driving his squad through the spring training at a clip that is causing the veterans to look back at some other training camps as a cinch compared to operations here this year, while the recruits who are usually inclined to work the hardest the first few days are having plenty of opportunities to display their energy. Blount's methods combined with the keen competition all along the line for places on the team, are imparting a zeal and ginger to the practice that is refreshing—to the onlookers if not to the players themselves.

The weather to-day was cold and unsettled, but Blount did not let up any on this account, and the usual two workouts were put in. There are over twenty regulars in the squad, while ten local semi-pros. have been trying for places on their own account, giving the Petes a daily register of over thirty players. The morning was spent in batting and fielding practice.

A NINE INNINGS GAME.

In the afternoon Blount selected two teams and chased the gang through an exciting nine-innings game in which the Blountmen got plenty of batting, fielding and base-running practice. The teams were as follows:

Schattler p, Cresswell p, Terrill p, Kelly c, O'Hearn 1b, G. Miller ab, Schrage ss, Fox 3b, McClure lf, Blount cf, Chapdelaine rf.

Smith p, Ryberg c, Flanagan 1b, King 2b, Price ss, Byrne 3b, New, Dawson, Gaffney, outfield.

Schattler, Cresswell and Terrill worked three innings each, and showed good form. Smith, who pitched against them, is a Youngstown boy, who is promising, but who has little chance to make the team.

A FIGHT FOR EVERY PLACE.

The game showed that Manager Blount is going to have a nice little job on his hands in selecting his team. Outside of the pitching department there is the keenest kind of a scrap for positions, and by what the men have shown so far, it will not be an easy task to make selections. Behind the bat the Petes look particularly strong Miller, the veteran backstop, is sure of a berth. His long experience and his knowledge of the game should make him a power of strength, not only to the club in general, but to the younger pitchers. In addition Miller is a sturdy batter, and he has been hitting them a mile in practice. For the second string position there are four other candidates, and only one of these, it is expected will be carried, so that the competition is red hot. Kelly, Ryberg, Chapdelaine and McClure will fight it out for the position, and on the workouts so far it will be some fight.

A BATTLE IN THE INFIELD.

There is the same keen rivalry for the infield positions. Flanagan and O'Hearn, the two first-base candidates, are running an even up race. Both are big and have the style, and both should develop into star first-sackers. Just now it would be hard to say which will get the position. For the three other places in the inner defence there are six candidates, in addition to several local boys. Charlie King, an infielder, who played with the Canton Inter-State League team last season, looked good to-day, and on his record, can hardly be kept off the team. There there are Joe Byrne, third-baseman for the Petes for the past two seasons, Frank Fox, who has played outfield and infield positions in the Canuck League, Frank Schrage, who was with Peterborough a few days last season, Eddie Price from the Wisconsin League, and Geo. Miller, the latter a most promising youngster. It is going to give Blount something to think about when he comes to make the final choice. At least four of the six have played third-base, while nearly all of them have had experience in other infield positions. All are showing something in practice. The rest have something on Miller in experience, but the Massillon youngster is very fast and will give them all a battle.

In the outfield there will be similar competition, especially when Willie Swartz arrives. Blount, of course, will be a fixture in centre-field, but there will be a fight for the other two positions. Curly seems to have picked up two promising youngsters in Gaffney and Dawson, both of whom have plenty of speed and handle themselves nicely. New, also, looks good, and it begins to look as if Swartz will have to show more than last season to hold his position.

THE FIRST BLUE ENVELOPE.

Manager Blount started the cutting down process to-day and the first to draw a blue envelope was Buckelew, a young infielder from Sharon, Pa. The youngster lacked experience, and there was no chance for him in the face of such keen competition. The ten local boys, who are trying out with the team are doing so at their own expense. None of them will make the team. The official squad will probably be further cut to-day.

The raw weather is having its effect on several of the players. Belting, Terrell, Schrage and several others are complaining of sore arms, but they will probably round to in a day or two.

Up to to-night there were no signs of Sterling and Swartz. They are being looked for on every train, and Manager Blount is very anxious to get them into camp. Pitcher Tracey did not take part in to-day's game, but tossed the ball around at both practices.

Only Five Of The Leaflets Have Reported

TORONTO April 21—But five players of the Canadian League squad reported to "Knotty" Loe yesterday, and as a consequence no work was indulged in. However, a number are expected to arrive early this morning, and work will commence at the Island Stadium at 10 p.m. An afternoon practice will also be held at 2 o'clock. Following are those who reported yesterday: Pitcher W. Hubbard of Baltimore, Md., Infielder G. Weidman of Rochester, N.Y., Infielder George Ort of New York City, Outfielder John Kellun of Pawtucket, R.I., and Outfielder R. Barrett of East Weymouth.

OPENING OF INTERNATIONAL

Toronto Team Plays at Providence To day

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, April 21.—The season of the International Baseball League, which was opened to-day with games in four cities, is expected to develop some interesting doings before the umpires call their last "out" on the wind-up day at the end of September. In two cities of the circuit, Buffalo and Baltimore, the League is to have the opposition of the Federals. These are two of the strongest cities of the organization and the results of the invasion of the Federals will be watched with close interest.

The International starts the season with very few changes since last year. The managerial roster remains unchanged, with the exception that Larry Schafly has relinquished the helm at Jersey City to become pilot for the Buffalo Club in the Federal League. Rudy Hulswitt has succeeded Schafly at at Jersey City.

In the inaugural festivities to-day the Toronto team plays at Providence, Baltimore entertains the Buffalo team, Montreal lines up at Jersey City and Rochester meets the Newark champions at Newark. The League schedule provides for a season of 154 games, with September 27 as the closing date.

Fred Clarke expresses a hope that he may win one more National League pennant and perhaps a world's championship before he retires as leader of the Pirates.

M. RYBERG
Recruit Catcher, who is showing good form at Youngstown.

BASEBALL

Manager Rickey of the Browns says hme is going to stick to the bench this season and allow his players to do the coaching during the game.

All concerned in the Killifer case seem as well pleased with the decision as if they had won out. You can't beat a baseball magnate.

Manager Clark Griffith has placed a combination death, injury and sick policy upon each of the Washington regulars. Some insurance that.

President Lannin says he will cut out the barnstorming next spring and keep the Red Sox in the South until a day or two before the opening of the regular season. This is McGraw's idea of real training and it seems to have worked well in the case of the Giants.

After Walter Johnson had trimmed the Boston Braves in the first game of the pre-season series, the Braves yelled that the umpire had defeated them. Maybe that's one of them there alibis, but with the Senators' star going like a windmill the Braves appear to have been stricken with the hitch and the stitch.

Ottawas Have Begun Their Training

CHATHAM, April 20—The Ottawa baseball team opened its spring practice this morning. About twelve of the squad, in addition to Manager Shaughnessy, were on the diamond. Only light work was attempted. The weather conditions were far from ideal, as rain fell part of the morning and the thermometer was low. Other members of the team are due to-morrow. Those here now are: Rogers, pitcher; Dolan, left fielder; Smejkal, second baseman; Powers, catcher; Kubat, pitcher; Freid, shortstop; Kehl, pitcher; Spicer, shortstop; Peterson, pitcher; Jones, pitcher.

The first six were with the club last year while Kubat is the only one who was with the team during the training camp in Chatham in 1913. Manager Shaughnessy has lost many of his winning aggregation of last year, either through draft or sale, but he is confident that he will be able to build up an organization which will give a good account of itself if not win the pennant.

UPROAR IN BRITISH HOUSE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., April 21. — There was uproar in the House of Commons this afternoon, with accompanying angry shouts and cheers, when Leader Bonar Law submitted his promised resolution calling for a judicial inquiry into the Ulster military movements of the Government.

Premier Asquith peremptorily refused the inquiry, saying that the charges had been proved false; but he challenged Bonar Law to make any accusations he dared to make in the House, and the fullest opportunity would be given for discussion.

There was further violent argument, ending with a statement by Law that he would consider what steps to take next.

Stock Markets

A. E. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

"The stock market had another sharp break, but the big interests have commenced buying stocks today, but I do not know whether these purchases were for support or keeps, I do not look for much lower prices for the present, although we will no doubt get a few sinking spells this week which should be utilized to cover shorts and take the long side as even if to-day's buying was only for the purpose of supporting the market it will cause a rally of at least five points. Prices hardened a little during the second hour but the activity was not great and action of stocks was not such as to arouse enthusiasm. Rock Island 4's were stronger selling up to 85 in anticipation of a favourable report on condition of property and better news of a satisfactory reorganization of the Holding Co. It is rumoured that U. S. Marines landed at Vera Cruz and the port is taken. New Haven advanced three points last week while the market broke ten. If you are long of this stock stay long, it will go higher. Erie, which we advised to buy at 28 and every half down, sold at 28 1-2 and may be bought at the present level for a few points' profit. You might buy A.C.P. at 72, Utah at 54, Central Leather at 33 3-4, S. R. at 24, and C. P. R. at 190.

First Battle In War Between The United States And Mexico

Four Americans Are Killed and Twenty-four Wounded in the Capture of Vera Cruz.

WAR WILL FOLLOW

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 22.—Four United States marines killed and twenty wounded.

These are the known casualties which accompanied the landing of United States forces from the fleet of Rear Admiral Frank F. Fletcher at Vera Cruz, Mexico, and the seizure of the customs house there last evening.

The casualties may be greater. Admiral Fletcher in his report of the landing stated that desultory firing from house tops and streets by Mexican federal soldiers was in progress.

Admiral Fletcher added that the guns of the naval transport Prairie were shelling the Mexicans out of their positions. It is presumed here that the Mexicans are retreating up the line of the railroad which runs to Mexico City.

Admiral Fletcher will not attempt to pursue the Mexicans. He will establish his base at Vera Cruz and hold it. The foregoing is the initial step and first cost in the act of reprisal against Gen. Victoriano Huerta, dictator of Mexico, for his indignities to the United States.

What the next step will be whether one of war or just a mere seizure of the customs house and the holding of the same, only events can determine.

In the light of the attack from the Mexicans forces the next step may be actual war, at least with one Mexican faction.

The news that Admiral Fletcher had landed a force of marines at Vera Cruz and seized the customs house there was received by Secretary of the Navy Daniels at six o'clock. The despatch stated:

"Tuesday, in face of an approaching norther, landed marines and sailors from the Utah, Florida and Prairie and seized customs house. Mexican forces did not oppose landing, but opened fire with rifle and artillery after our seizure of custom house. Prairie shelling Mexicans out of their positions. Desultory firing from housetops and streets. Held custom house and section of city in vicinity of wharves and consulate. Casualties four dead and twenty wounded."

When this statement had been issued Secretaries Daniels and Garrison left the White House.

"I hope it is all over," said Mr. Garrison. "I think they fired to save

Rear Admiral Badger.—In command of the Atlantic Fleet of the United States navy, consisting of sixteen dreadnoughts and smaller vessels, which has been ordered to proceed to Tampico. He has command of 20,000 marines.

their faces in retreat. I do not expect any more."

Startling was the news contained in the despatch even to those officials who were familiar with the administration's plans and were prepared to receive such tidings, and despite the continued circulation of reports throughout the military departments of the Government after two o'clock yesterday afternoon that something big had happened in Mexican waters.

Immediately the Congressmen took the news to the capitol, after which there were hurried conferences. With this information went the report that President Wilson did not care what Congress did with the resolution which was introduced in the House Monday, which he desired should be adopted that night, and which was still being held up in the Senate by Republican senators. Consideration seemed to strike these members responsible for the delay in the passage of the resolution in the Senate. It dawned upon them that they had not taken the President's counsellors at their word when they said that a big shipment of arms and ammunition was on its way to Huerta on the Hamburg-American steamer Bavaria, and that the seizure of the customs house at Vera Cruz before last night was absolutely necessary to prevent that shipment of arms and ammunition from being delivered.

President Wilson, they admitted, did know this, as well as the fact that the arms, while going to Huerta, from a German port and from a German firm, were American made.

WHITE LIKE NERO.

He Is Always Fiddling and Borrowing Says Mr. Sinclair.

OTTAWA, April 22.—The budget debate was resumed yesterday by Mr. Sinclair (Lib., Guysboro, N.S.), and was participated in by Messrs. Steele, Marcil, Morphy and Lanctot.

Mr. Sinclair declared that the policy of the Government seemed to be to spend money as fast as it was possible to borrow it. In this connection, he likened Hon. Mr. White to Nero—always fiddling and borrowing more money.

The present Government, maintained Mr. Sinclair, had accomplished practically nothing that made for the prosperity of the country, while, on the other hand, they had accomplished much that was detrimental to Canada. They had debauched the civil service and degraded the great undertaking, the National Transcontinental.

Dr. Steele (Con., N. Perth) declared that instead of discussing the advantages which might accrue from free wheat, the west would accomplish much more good for herself by encouraging the milling industry. If we had free wheat it would mean the death of that great industry.

Another feature of the west's problem which Parliament would do well to turn its attention to was the high freight rates charged on the Atlantic.

In conclusion, Dr. Steele urged the establishment of a Government-owned and operated line of steamers to carry agricultural produce from Canada to Britain at fair rates.

MOYES MUST TESTIFY.

Railway Board Orders His Appearance on May 1st.

TORONTO, April 22. — J. W. Moyes, the man four western Ontario municipalities have waited long months to question regarding the Ontario West Shore Railway, will appear before the Ontario Railway Board on May 1. This assurance was given yesterday by T. Herbert Lennox, his solicitor, who said Moyes was almost recovered from his very tedious sickness. And the additional information by Chairman McIntyre was that in case he did not appear, and the board was not thoroughly satisfied that sickness was the sole cause of his absence, a subpoena would be issued, and if not effective Moyes would be committed.

P. A. McCalmmon, solicitor for Kincardine, went to the extent of asking that Moyes be ordered either to appear at once or produce the unguaranteed bonds.

The Ontario and West Shore bill passed the committee stage in the Legislature yesterday with some important amendments. It now provides that whatever control J. W. Moyes had in the road be taken away from him and transferred to a board of trustees, who shall complete it.

INDIANS MAY RISE.

Mexican Officials Also Fear Revolt of Reds in Capital.

LONDON, April 22.—Luigi Barzini, in a despatch from Mexico City to The Daily Telegraph, says that the conviction of authoritative Americans living in Mexico is that the moment for intervention by the United States seems to have been well chosen, when one thinks of the terrible struggle which Mexico is carrying on against the revolution, a struggle which engages all the Government forces for the maintenance of order. But if the obedience of the troops should be disorganized by the new struggle against the Americans, in the opinion of many observers, a period of terrible Indian anarchy is possible. The federal army of Morelos is now clamoring at the very gates of the capital and the Indians of Sierra de Puebla are being held back with difficulty. The mob in the capital itself might rise in revolt, disregarding military organization. All the houses are being armed. The foreign legations have rifles, ammunition and food, and the foreign colonies are making arrangements for eventual defence.

BONAR LAW WILL SEE.

Demands Enquiry Into Ulster Episode But Decides to Wait.

LONDON, April 22. — A stormy scene was created in the House of Commons yesterday, when Mr. Bonar Law, the leader of the Opposition, demanded a judicial enquiry into the naval and military movements recently contemplated by the Government in Ulster. The Unionists charged that these movements constituted a plot to provoke a rising in Ulster.

Premier Asquith refused a judicial enquiry, as he said the charges had been proved false, but challenged Mr. Law to make any accusations he wished to make in the House itself, when he would be given the fullest opportunity for discussion.

Amid the cheers and angry shouts of their supporters, the two leaders took their places alternately at the table, challenging each other.

Uproar followed Mr. Law's declaration that the statements by Premier Asquith and his colleagues had been proved untrue.

The scene ended when, amid Ministerial cries of "Take your day for discussion," Mr. Law said that after he had seen what the promised white paper contained, he would consider what steps it was worth while to take.

A. M. CROCKETT DEAD.

Famous Scottish Novelist Passes Away, Aged 64 Years.

LONDON, April 22. — Samuel Rutherford Crockett, the novelist, died Monday. He was born in 1860.

Mr. Crockett entered the Free Church of Scotland as a minister in 1886, but retired in 1895 to devote his time to literature. He was a voluminous writer, "The Stickit Minister" (1893) being among the best known of his works. His first work was a small volume of poems issued in 1886. His popular novels included "The Raiders," "Men of the Moss Hags," "The Grey Man," and "Joan of the Sword Hand" and many more.

The death occurred yesterday of Sir Edwin Durning-Lawrence, aged 77, who attained celebrity by his two works, "Bacon is Shakespeare" and "The Shakespeare Myth."

Gen. Sir Henry Brackenbury died at Nice Monday, aged 77. He saw active service in many parts of the world.

MAAS IN RETREAT

Mexican General Put Up a Stubborn Resistance

FIRED FROM HOUSETOPS

VERA CRUZ, April 22. — Vera Cruz last night was in the hands of forces from the United States warships, but the occupation of the port was not accomplished without loss of American lives.

Four Americans, bluejackets, and marines, were killed by the fire of the Mexicans, and twenty-one fell wounded. The Mexican loss is not known, but it is believed to have been heavy.

The waterfront, the Customs House, and all important posts, including those under the terminal works, from which extend the railways to the capital, have been occupied. All the territory around the American Consulate is strongly patrolled and detachments hold other [illegible] city.

The Mexican commander, Gen. Gustave Maas, offered a stubborn resistance to the American advance, and for many hours there was fighting in the streets. Toward nightfall it was reported that the main body of the Federal garrison was in retreat to the westward.

Rear-Admiral Fletcher, in command of the United States warships, prefaced his occupation of the port by a demand, through the American Consul, W. W. Canada, for its surrender. Gen. Maas promptly declined to accede to this demand, and shortly afterward ten wholeboats were sent off from the side of the transport Prairie, loaded with marines. These boats effected a landing in the neighborhood of the Customs House before noon, and a few minutes later Captain William R. Rush of the battleship Florida, who was in command of the operations, brought his flag in.

The coming of the American forces was not heralded by any great excitement, but small crowds gathered to watch the landing. Soon the bluejackets and marines marched through the streets leading from the waterfront and along the railroad yards. Others proceeded to the American Consulate, while still others were deployed along the approaches to Central Plaza, in which Gen. Maas had concentrated his men.

These manoeuvres were effected without opposition, but suddenly Gen. Maas challenged the advance with the first shots—a volley fired from a point three blocks from the marines and two blocks south of the main plaza. The marines replied immediately, but the action ceased in a moment. There was a lull for ten minutes and then another brief exchange from the west end of Montezuma street, where a Federal outpost was stationed.

At 12.30 the firing became general, and at one o'clock the guns of the Prairie went into action.

After Gen. Maas had been driven from his position in Central Plaza, the Americans found themselves the object of fusillades from the tops of houses, where small groups of soldiers and citizens had taken up positions. It was learned only last night that the greater part of those engaged in this resistance were civilians, who refused to accept the American occupation passively. They obtained guns and stationed themselves at points of vantage and did much to prolong the action.

Towards the middle of the afternoon a large body of Mexicans evacuated their position and are now encamped in the sand hills back in the interior, where it is reported from Mexican sources they are expecting to be joined by reinforcements sent down from the capital.

Two Hundred Mexicans Killed.

GALVESTON, Texas, April 22.—More than 200 Mexicans were killed at Vera Cruz yesterday in the fighting that followed the landing of U. S. sailors and marines, according to information received at the cable office here.

Vessel Arrives Too Late.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Official advices reached the Navy Department at midnight that a German vessel carrying ammunition to rebels, docking on arrival that the Vera Cruz customs house was in possession of Americans, anchored outside the harbor. The vessel, Secretary Daniels says, carries 15,000,000 rounds of shells, mostly for rapid fire guns, and 300 field guns.

Fifteen Cavalrymen Held.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., April 22.—A special to the Douglas, Ariz., International from Tombstone, Ariz., says news reached there yesterday that 15 members of troop B, tenth cavalry, were being held [illegible] troops at a point just below the border between Naco and Hereford, Ariz.

The troops, who were on border patrol, ventured across the line on Monday night without being aware of the fact. It is reported they were surrounded and taken prisoners by a large rebel detachment.

Troop A, tenth, left Fort Huachuca yesterday to investigate.

Queer Thing Happened at a Dynamiting.

LONDON, April 22. — Bernard Shaw, speaking at a demonstration held for the purpose of advocating Socialist unity, referred to the presence of Keir Hardie, Mr. Hyndman and himself on the same platform.

The three of them, he said, had met on the same platform in the reign of Queen Victoria, who was a Whig; they had met in the reign of King Edward, who was a Liberal, and they had met to-night in the reign of King George, who apparently was a Syndicalist. That showed they were moving.

May Cancel Franchises.

TORONTO, April 22.—Municipalities in Ontario which are suffering from dangerous gas pyudents, will have their interests protected by the Legislature. The municipal committee yesterday passed a bill that will allow any corporation with the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to cancel a company franchise and not pay any damages therefor. The complaints from Brantford and other places against the large amounts of sulphuretted hydrogen in gas supplied by a very independent company was responsible for the action.

OLD MASONIC TEMPLE BURNS.

London, Ont., Structure Totally Destroyed—Loss Is $200,000.

LONDON, Ont., April 22. — Fire discovered about two minutes to three yesterday morning totally destroyed the Dominion Savings Association Building, formerly the Masonic Temple, at King and Richmond streets. Luke Tucker, the caretaker, and Mrs. Augusta Rumsen, his housekeeper, escaped by the fire escape from the third floor, when aroused by the smoke.

The loss on the building will total around $200,000, and according to T. H. Purdom, K.C., president of the company, is covered by insurance. The loss to the tenants will not run over $100,000.

The building contained the head offices of the Northern Life Insurance Co., the quarters of the Western Fair News Association, the Knights of the Maccabees and the Woodmen of the World, all of which lost valuable papers. The News Association had 10,000 maps and 2,000 letters in connection with this year's exhibition ready for mailing.

BURNING AND ITCHING ECZEMA

On Hands and Arms. Broke Out in Fine Rash. Had to Give Up Work. Could Not Rest. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Lombardy, Ont. — "I had been suffering for two years with eczema on my hands and arms. At first my hand broke out in a fine rash with a burning and itching that was hard to bear. The itching and burning were so bad I had to scratch till my hands and arms bled and were so sore I could not stand to put them in water. I also had to dress my arms. When it spread all over my arms. I could not rest at night as the [illegible] would irritate the eruption every time I moved my arms or moved my hands.

"I tried two treatments giving each a fair trial but they failed to cure me. Then I saw this advertisement in the paper about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample and I began to use them with very little faith, but to my surprise I found relief from the very first. I washed my hands in warm water with Cuticura Soap and dried them with a soft cloth, then I put the Cuticura Ointment on and bandaged them with soft cloth. I used two boxes of the Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap and Pills and they cured me." (Signed) Mrs. Edgar B. McCall, May 17, 1912.

A single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card: Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

Cannot Get Servants.

Many complaints as to the extraordinary scarcity of domestic servants in New Zealand are to be found in the evidence taken before the Royal Dominions Commission in that Dominion which has just been published as a bluebook. In one case 37s. 6d. (nearly $7) a week and "all found" was offered, and the only reply proceeded from a girl who wanted "to come as a lady help and to have her meals with the family." With the young women of New Zealand domestic service was stated not to be popular. The suggestion was put forward that educated English women might emigrate, as there are many who would be willing to "take ladies to do their whole housework if they could get three or four of them," one reason being that women in New Zealand are lonely and want companions. Attempts to import domestic servants have not been an entire success. It appears that the servants became "uppish" on the voyage, and demanded exorbitant wages on landing.

A Metaphor With a History.

To "know a hawk from a hernshaw" is a metaphor with a curious history. It is a comparison drawn from falconry. "Hernshaw" is a corruption of "heronshaw," or young heron, a bird which was a common prey of the falcons. To know a hawk from a hernshaw is therefore to be able to distinguish the falcon from its prey. A further colloquial corruption crept into the phrase, "to know a hawk from a handsaw," a form used by Hamlet in one place. Possibly the distinction between a hawk and a hernshaw was found not to be strong enough for the purposes of the proverb.—Manchester Guardian.

Wouldn't Do It Again.

A strange wager was won not long ago by a Hull, England, business man, living at Hornsea. He was having an overcoat fitted in a tailoring establishment when the proprietor offered him the coat complete if he would wear it to Hornsea with only one sleeve and liberally lined with chalk and stitches. To the tailor's surprise the offer was accepted. The wearer was the object of much attention traveling home. He won the wager, but said afterwards that he would not repeat the proceeding for 40 coats.

Backache Banished.

Thousands of men and women are suffering from weak, lame and aching backs, and many of them unable to do any work for the pain.

The stitches, twitches and twinges are bad enough and give enough misery, but, back of the backache, and the cause of it all are the disordered kidneys crying out in warning through the back.

Backache is kidney ache, and there's serious trouble ahead for you if you neglect it.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure every form of backache by curing the sick kidneys that cause it.

Mrs. Jack Mason, Springhill, N.B., writes:—"I have been suffering from backache for a very long time. I tried everything and did everything, but still I would suffer. One day I was looking over your Almanac, and saw your advertisement for Doan's Kidney Pills, so I got 5 boxes, and I am glad to say that they brought me back to life again, and from now on I will never be without them."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

Are You Suffering From Auto-Intoxication?

The dictionary says that Auto-Intoxication is "poisoning, or the state of being poisoned, from toxic substances produced within the body." This is a condition from the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver, or pores of the body failing to expel the poisons. More than 50% of adults are suffering from this trouble. This is probably why you are suffering from nervousness, headaches, loss of appetite, lack of ambition, and many other symptoms produced by Auto-Intoxication. Your whole system needs stirring up.

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

will remedy the trouble. It first aids the system to expel accumulated poisons. It acts as a tonic and finally enables the body to eliminate its own poisons without any outside aid. Obey Nature's warnings. Your dealer in medicines will supply you, or you may send 50c for a sample package of tablets by mail. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

WAGES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Labor Conditions Complicated By Presence of the Native.

South Africa, once again the storm centre of the labor world, is perpetually faced with the problem of keeping its 170,000 colored workers in order. The white miners naturally dislike the native labourers, because their presence tends to keep down the rate of wages.

For some time it has been an understood thing between masters and men in the Transvaal that natives should not compete with whites in occupations that demand skilled labor. No black was therefore allowed to become an engineer, carpenter, stonemason, or bricklayer. Gradually the door is being opened, and the Transvaal whites feel that they will shortly be forced to work on the same footing as the native, just as fellow-whites in the Cape Provinces already do.

At present in the Transvaal a white miner receives about $5 per day of eight hours, whilst the native gets less than $1 per week, and is made to work more hours. No colored man is allowed to hold a blasting certificate, although many of them could do the work as efficiently as their white masters.

It is generally thought that black workers can be obtained easily, but this is not correct. The native "boy's" distinction for hard work is hereditary and impregnable. He would much rather leave all labor to his women-folk.

If only he will work hard he can retire after a few years with enough money to become a power in his own district, but he usually succumbs to the temptation of too much liquor. It is a punishable offence to supply natives with strong drink, owing to the atrocious crimes they commit whilst under its influence, yet unscrupulous traders take the risk and sell at high rates a dreadful concoction of whisky and sulphate of copper that immediately inflames the brain of anybody who drinks it. One drop spilt on wood leaves an indelible stain, so you can imagine its effect on the human stomach!

People engaging in this illicit traffic are fined as much as $375 when caught, while some have received two years' imprisonment and no option.

The native agitator is a growing force in South Africa. Often he is a man educated at Oxford or Cambridge, and holding a degree. Having been received in Britain on equal terms, he returns to his own country to find the color bar raised against him. Too cultured to consort with his own race, yet looked down upon by the white people, he is an outcast with no political rights, and so he commences agitating.

The idea of equality between white and black rouses the indignation of every South African, whether British or Dutch, to boiling point. Two years ago, a Mr. Wolmarans, member of the South African Parliament, was prosecuted for throwing an educated native out of a railway carriage, but, nevertheless his action had the support of the entire Boer population.

A Wily Leopard.

No form of food except perhaps the dog—is so acceptable to the leopard in the jungle of Ceylon as the large gray Wanderoo monkey, and the artistic methods of capture employed by them necessitate no tree climbing.

Whenever monkeys catch a sight of a leopard slinking under the trees they become greatly excited and all clatter together. As soon as the leopard hears this he lies down under a bush and begins to click his teeth together.

This noise seems to make the monkeys beside themselves with terror and excitement; they huddle together in the treetop above the leopard's head, jumping up and down on the branches, shrieking and chattering. Below, the leopard waits motionless, clicking its teeth, until suddenly one of the monkeys misses its footing and comes to the ground with a thud—and then the leopard is on it in a bound.

In Buckinghamshire an ointment made from mistletoe berries is still believed in as a cure for rheumatism and epilepsy.

Among the offenses for which capital punishment can be ordered in English law today are high treason and arson in a royal dockyard or arsenal.

The average wages of kitchen maids in England is $68.50 a year, while those of governesses is $97.50. Next in order are nurses at $101.75, parlor maids at $117.75, ladies' maids at $135 and cooks at $157.50.

There are several bands of the Persian fat tailed sheep in the national forests of southern Utah.

According to a French physician, a short period of rest suffices to prepare a person for new exertion after heavy but not protracted work, while longer rest is necessary after continuous work of lighter nature.

Recent Inventions.

Steam pressure cooking in the household has been made possible by the invention of a kettle with an airtight lid for family use.

A sharpening machine which gives tools a rotary motion against a stone and is said to produce the best results has been invented.

For quickly raising to the surface of the water a disabled submarine an Englishman has invented a buoy to be released from the boat, carrying up hose through which air can be pumped to fill and lift the craft.

The Royal Box.

Lidj Jeassu, new emperor of Abyssinia, is seventeen years old.

The king and queen of Greece and the emperor and empress of Japan are planning a visit to Paris the present year.

Prince Henry of Prussia, brother of the kaiser, has, it is said, invented and patented an electrical device for cleaning the windows of motorcars in rainy or frosty weather. The device is set in operation by the pressing of a button.

English Freemasons.

Originally the English Freemasons were really connected with building and bound themselves together to promote the interests of their craft, after much the same manner as the modern trade unions. Their interference with the wages of laborers, indeed, caused such an outcry in the fifteenth century that in 1423 an act of Parliament was passed prohibiting "the Chapiters and congregations of Masons in tyled lodges" under the penalty of being "judged for felons and punished by imprisonment and fine and ransom at the King's will." We are not sure that that statute has been revoked.—London Graphic.

Poor In Dublin.

Frightful conditions among the poor were revealed by the Dublin strike. It is said that there are over 12,000 one room tenements which house from three to twelve people each.

Insurance In India.

The Postoffice Department of India maintains a life insurance branch, which has over 92,000 active policies, with an aggregate insurance of $10,000,000.

Melancholy.

Melancholy may be defined as a state of mind in which a man is so out of touch with his environment that life has lost its sweetness.—Sir William Osler.

How many people live on the reputation of the reputation they might have made!—Holmes.

MANIAS OF BURGLARS.

Housebreakers Who Take Only One Type of Article.

The tendency nowadays in all trades and industries is toward specialization, and London criminals have followed the example of honest men.

There is a burglar—still at large, by the way—who takes nothing but old silver. He has ransacked over thirty houses in the aristocratic section of London.

One of the houses was that of the Spanish ambassador. Here piles of silver were found collected on a table, yet the only thing that was missing was a silver vase of great age, and worth many times its weight as precious metal. The man must have a very considerable knowledge of old silver and its marks.

Recently a man was sentenced for stealing bicycles. So many were found on his premises that a large furniture van was required to bring them to the court. This thief seems to have been a very clever mechanic, for handle-bars, name-plates and pedals were altered all around, making identification a very difficult matter. So far as known, he stole nothing but bicycles.

India rubber mats were the special prey of a man who was sentenced to 6 year's imprisonment at the London Guildhall. Twice before the man had been convicted of a similar offence, yet the moment he was out of prison he went back to the same form of crime. Some of the mats weighed half a hundred and were worth $25 apiece.

Cemetery thieves form a class apart. Their prey is the artificial wreaths placed by sorrowing relatives on the graves of their loved ones. From Woodgrange Park Cemetery 60 were taken in one night, and 1,200 in a little over a year. The City of London Cemetery lost a similar number within seven months.

Some of these wreaths, including their cases, cost as much as $25 each. The question is how the thieves dispose of their plunder.

Every second hand book shop knows the book thief. The man who steals books rarely interferes with any other form of property. Only a year ago one of these gentry was sentenced at Peterborough to three years' penal servitude for stealing old books to the value of $500, the property of the dean and chapter of Peterborough Cathedral.

At Kew and other botanical gardens watch is always kept for the plant thief. One caught at Kew in May, 1913, had two small tins of water fastened under his waistcoat for the purpose of keeping his stolen cuttings alive.

Misery In Dublin.

The report on the recent inquiry into the housing conditions of Dublin is sensational in character. Unprintable details are given of horrible and degraded conditions of life in many of the tenements, and they are supplemented by pictures of some of the wretched homes of the poor in Dublin.

Serious charges are made against members of the corporation who are owners of slum property, and also against Sir Charles Cameron, chief medical officer of health for the city.

It is stated that 14,000 new dwellings are required at a cost of $17,500,000. Of 25,822 families living in tenements, 26,108 live in one room. Among 12,000 families, the average number of occupants per room is six.

The filth met with is indescribable, and the conditions disclosed are manifestly responsible for much immorality. Children scarcely realize the meaning of the word home, and acquire a precocious knowledge of evil from early childhood.

Artistic Temperament Cured.

It will be news to many of her myriads of admirers to hear that that noble artist Titiens "used to suffer from a bad temper, and in these outbursts she felt a strong desire to smash anything that came handy." How Titiens was ultimately cured of the habit Mr. Gans relates in his reminiscences: "She was sitting at supper after a concert in a provincial town when the manager made some remark which annoyed her. As usual, she took the first thing that came to hand, a soda water bottle, and flung it at him. The manager was sitting at the table with his back to the window. The bottle missed him, smashed through the window and nearly killed a casual passerby. This, said Titiens, gave her such a shock that she was completely cured of her failing."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Birds.

The first "birds" were not much like those of the present time. The pterodactyl, supposed to be the pioneer of bird life, was a great feather winged monster, with great spears on the tingers of the wings and a mouth full of sharklike teeth. The pterodactyl did not sing, and could we have seen him we would not have felt like singing ourselves. Time birds, and especially the warblers, are very late in geologic time. There was no bird melody in the carboniferous jungles. The singers, in all probability, did not greatly antedate the human race.—New York American.

Where Sentiment Stops.

Mary Johnson in her book "Hagar" has Mrs. Green, one of the characters, reply to the heroine's wish that she could make money by saying: "It ain't so easy for women to make money. There's more ways they can't than they can. It's what they call 'sentiment' fights them. Sentiment don't mind their being industrious, but it draws the line at their getting money for it."

A White Hope.

"I have a mind to give you a good whipping!" exclaimed the impatient father.

"Well," replied the athletic youth, "maybe you can, but if you succeed it will be some item for the sport page."—Washington Star.

Not Whisky.

Ma—You've been drinking! I smell it in your breath. Pa—Not a drop. I've been eating frogs' legs. What you smell is the hop.—Harvard Lampoon.

New Start at 119.

A venerable native of the Orange Free State whose age is said to be 119 years, has acquired some property over the Transvaal Border, and left Harrismith recently by train accompanied by his wife, aged 98, and a son who is approaching 80, to start a new home. The old lady had to be carried to the train, but the old man walked fairly firmly.

SAYS LONDON IS MOST HONEST PLACE IN WORLD

If You Don't Believe It Read What "A South African Visitor" Thinks, Then Compare Your Experiences, if You Have Ever Been There.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, April 18.

"A SOUTH AFRICAN VISITOR" who has been just eight months here has written an article in the Mail in which he expresses surprise at the honesty of Londoners. Americans and Canadians who have at some time or other paid a visit to the English metropolis may wish to compare their experiences with those of the South African visitor, who says:—"The uncompromising commercial honesty of London is the most astonishing thing I know. It is more astonishing even than the British Museum; more beautiful and admirable than London's parks, horses and female beauty. Meek and strong and gentle and intelligent are the horses; wonderful are the huge parks, wedged in among the men, beautiful are the women. But London's honesty is greater than all of these.

"I wonder if the people here ever realise how honest they really are? Probably it is to them the most natural thing in the world to see that the other man gets first what he pays for and then the full amount of his change. But strangers like myself appreciate the honesty with which we find ourselves surrounded and after a while [illegible] that what at first seems brutishness or even taciturnity is only part of the general scheme of uncompromising honesty. The Londoner will not stoop to flatter his man in order later on to rob him. Indeed, he is often as abrupt that polished people like the French think him rude and his methods those of the take-it-or-leave-it order.

"But at the back of it all is the sturdy pride and honesty of the London tradesman, who, being so far [illegible] may be mistaken for the diplomacy of the diplomats. In all I have lived here eight months, which is perhaps a short time. But there are only two ways to write of towns or industry—either born in it and steeped in its life and traditions and gone now to it. The man who spends ten years in a large place like London only succeeds in losing the freshness of his impressions without gaining any more the gust and insight of the native.

Unusually Honest.

"Eight months is long enough to find out that London is honest, if it is too short to know a tenth of the British Museum. London is amazingly, uncannily honest. It is not by the thieves and tricksters of a country that we can judge it, but by the good level of everyday people. In eight months of busy life here I have had the strange experience of "Never once being robbed.

"[illegible] being overcharged.

"Never once being given short change.

"Never once being supplied with an article inferior to what I expected.

"Honesty I have found among such strange bedfellows as the mail order business, auction rooms, second hand shops and gas companies. I have not yet used a lawyer, but am fully prepared to find the first one I meet an honest man. It may be that the bedfellows to honesty which I have named above are a tradition in London. I speak as a colonist to whom they are a tradition of another kind.

"A fellow South African the other day had an experience for which, he says, a long business life abroad affords no parallel. He paid some time back to a London trader an account without deducting or asking for a discount. Later on he closed his transactions with the house. To his utter astonishment he was a month later refunded the forgotten discount.

"I know a second hand dealer in —— street. The first time I made his acquaintance he advised me not to buy a couple of articles which I had selected from his window at the prices he had marked them. I was amazed. Surely the man was mad. He pointed out certain little defects which had escaped my notice and said the things were not really cheap at the price. I went away and told people of the mad second hand dealer of —— street, but somehow or other they thought him quite a normal and sane character, and the story fell flat.

"Commercially speaking the policemen of London seem to be made of bronzite. All the courtesy and assistance they may give one must remain untipped, for London seems to be blessed with a race of unpurchasable policemen! What an excellent thing it would be if, in one of those frequent social upheavals we are having the policeman were to change places with the waiting and vice versa.

"Before my first visit to London I had heard much about its thieves and swindlers. Pickpockets were supposed to lurk everywhere diving their hands into unprotected coat openings for money and watches. Dickens, I fancy, did much to frighten us with his gallery of queer characters. But it is easy for a stranger to pretend himself in a country of superthieves, providing that the people he meets every day in his ordinary life and business are honest. If it is in places like Madeira, Las Palmas and Teneriffe, that commerce becomes emasculated. There all citizens seem handed in a great Society for the Retention of Visitors' Wealth. If you engage in a dispute with one man about the price of something, another will saunter up quite indecently, yet with a wonderful inner knowledge of the facts, and volunteer the information that the man you are arguing with is a very good fellow and quite cheap. When you need a boat to take you to your ship, and it is then you think you must have that boat, every beachcomber will combine to make you pay through the nose.

"In London—and, for that matter, all over Britain—trade's needs seldom influence the temperament of any cabby or motor car owner. Personally I have been in such a position that [illegible] could have been executed by one other man, and nothing more than a fair price has been asked. It is frankly astonishing to run up against the "thank-my-stars" trader and find him refusing to charge a penny over if you "buy the whole shop." But there is the other side to it all, and that side is marked Honesty in big letters. Trading with Orientals and even some of the lower Latins develops in both buyer and seller suspicion, beating down, cringing and bullying. And coming to London is a commercial tonic which braces one up and gradually eliminates all the little trading meannesses which have developed among people less honest than the English.

"Even the poor barrow pushers of Fleet street rarely do anything sharper than placing a cryptic ½ in the girth of a huge 1d., leading one to think the price is fifty per cent less than it seems from a distance. But that is really more advertisement than actual trading, and when the barrow man sells his stuff he is honest enough. On the whole I think that for a great city London must be the most honest place in the world.

London Trying Street Carpets

Mixture of Asphalt Over Macadam Is Proving Valuable Where Traffic Is Heavy.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, April 18.

THE latest idea for roads is a carpet, and an experiment in West Cromwell Road is officially reported to be successful.

The new "carpeting system," as it is called, is designed for macadam roads, which are covered with a carpet, or layer of asphalt mixture, that not only sustains heavy traffic but affords good hold for horses and automobiles. The only essential required for the new system is that the macadam must be in good condition. The method is much cheaper than tar macadam, and that is a valuable consideration. It is purposed to do some "carpeting" in streets where there is plenty of heavy traffic.

Another County Council experiment is the Kingston electric lamps. The charges for light will grow more moderate through the considerable competition between the gas and electricity rivals. The gas people have been able to hold their own against electric light by inventing incandescent mantles of a new kind. Then the electric people hit upon the metal filament lamp, which gave the same volume of light at half cost. Now they are again going to double the illuminating power of electricity by a new method of surrounding the drawn wire filament with nitrogen. By this method it is claimed that fully double the illumination can be obtained as compared with the ordinary filament lamp for the same consumption.

"Two experimental lamps, each of 1,000 candle power, are to be placed in Kensington High street, and if they answer to expectations the whole of the other lamps in the borough will be scrapped and replaced by the new lamps. Special lanterns, however, have to be designed for the new lighting, on account of the great heat that is generated by the lamps.

A BABY POET.

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, April 18.

"HE has learned neither to read nor to write, and he just exclaims, 'Mother, I want to say beautiful words to you,' and then with eyes looking into the far away he will dictate wonderful prose poems." So speaks an article in the Poetry Review, the journal of the Poetry Society, of Logan Wilshire, a remarkable seven-year-old boy poet, who for the last two years, has revelled in beautiful creations of his imagination.

One of his prose-poems is the following:—

A Dream.

The God of Dreams came to me last night and I had a dream of the world when the world was a child. And in this child world there were two Gods; the God of Nature and the God Genius.

The God of Nature provided all the materials, and the God Genius took them and made them into wonderful things.

Nature gave Genius a pair of leaves and Genius made them into wings—wings for the birds, wings for the butterflies, wings for all the things that fly. Such a beautiful dream! Such a wonderful world—the world when it was a child.

In "The Crystal" he says:—

The Crystal lay between heaven and earth, and the rainbow filled it with light. Then the sun and the moon and the stars and the universe one by one made it gifts of their substances.

So the Crystal had the glow of the ruby and the glitter of the diamond, and all colors and powers, and with wings of gold it roamed through the sky.

So the Crystal went down to earth and lived with mortals, and by taking a peep now and then the mortals got so they could look at the Crystal and see the glory, and that was how the world was made good.

In his lighter moments he imagines Persons as "very solemn because he had no ladies to rescue" and also as sitting "on his rock smoking his pipe and talking to a gentleman who was a knight."

Pets and People.

Washington Star:—"What kind of a dog is that?"

"I dunno," replied the man with baggy trousers. "I'm not very well acquainted with him yet. When I come home at night my wife has to introduce me to him and tell him I'm not a burglar."

PORTRAIT OF GERMAN CROWN PRINCE ATTRACTS MUCH ATTENTION IN BERLIN

NEW PAINTING OF THE GERMAN CROWN PRINCE

Painted by Mr. Arthur Schlubeck, the Work Is Considered Very Excellent.

(Special Dispatch.)

BERLIN, April 18.

THE German Crown Prince has been painted many times and by many masters, but no one has achieved more striking portraits of Germany's future ruler than Mr. Arthur Schlubeck, a Berlin painter, who stands in the forefront of the modern conservative wing in Germany.

Two of the Schlubeck portraits of the Crown Prince were hung on the line at the last salon, one in the uniform of the Garde du Corps. [illegible] the uniform of the famous "Death's Head Brigade" of the Royal Hussars, at Homburg at Hannig, from which the Crown Prince took a somewhat melodramatic farewell when remanded to the General Staff offices a few months ago.

His pronounced Hohenzollern features, suggestive in line if not in strength of his greatest ancestor, Frederick the Great, offer an interesting task to the portraitist. Here the painter has to do with an impetuous temperament, and any portrait of the Crown Prince which did not bear with it an impression of restless energy, a keen interest in men and things and a dash of that devil-may-care buoyancy which has led him into many conflicts of opinion with his father would but poorly express the essential characteristics of the moulder of Germany's future destiny.

The caller at the Schlubeck studio will also be attracted by an unusual Rembrandtesque portrait of Dr. Karl Muck, painted before he was coaxed away from his Berlin post by the lure of the American musical world.

This is primarily a study in light effects, and the idea came to the painter as he had frequent opportunity of observing Dr. Muck standing at the conductor's desk in the [illegible] pit. The [illegible] face [illegible] features [illegible] into relief by the yellow lights flaring out of the surrounding shadows. The pose is characteristic and the distinguished musician was the unconscious sitter for a portrait of great strength and originality.

So many officers of high rank have commissioned Mr. Schlubeck to perpetuate them upon canvas that he has become generally known as the "military painter."

To a man who believes that the face—the personality—is the chief essential in a portrait, and that the accessories of clothing should be treated as a more or less negligible quantity, it is not easy to solve successfully the problem of painting not a uniformed general but a general in uniform.

This question of clothing recalls the famous retort of Lenbach to an American woman of fashion who complained that the master had neglected to do justice to her expensive accoutrement.

"The photographer lives next door!" was Lenbach's gruff answer. "You should have gone [illegible] if you wished a picture [illegible] your gown!"

Mr. Schlubeck's military collection [illegible] no more finely characteristic head than that of the doughty German General Friedrich von Bissing, to whom it is told that [illegible] he dared to keep a chair waiting at which the Kaiser was expecting the guests. The latter was fuming with impatience and ready to greet the tardy officer with a severe reprimand when Von Bissing coolly slipped into his seat, offering as the only explanation:—"I was detained by military duties, Your Majesty."

Mr. Schlubeck thinks that Egypt offers a solution for an interesting light problem on which he has been at work for some time, and has again pitched his tent on the edge of the desert to study the golden glow. In his later portraits he has applied this new principle of replacing the conventional background by one of a peculiar, luminous quality, and this he has used with striking effect in a double portrait of the two beautiful daughters of Mr. Harry B. Hirsh, of Philadelphia.

COUNTESS EVOLVES A NEW WOMAN

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, April 18.

HAS the new century evolved a new woman? Is the typical woman of 1914 a daring, self-confident and inquiring creature, whose lack of reticence and scorn of yesterday's conventions would in her grandmother have been shocking beyond words, though it need not unduly distress us of to-day?

These questions a famous woman sculptor, Countess Feodora Gleichen, answers more or less "in the affirmative" (as Cabinet Ministers say) in a new work which she calls "1914."

"1914" is to be seen by the public in a month or two at one of the big summer exhibitions. A visitor to the Countess' studio in St. James' Palace made a preliminary bow to this representation of contemporary womanhood. It is a nude, a slim plaster figure, with the right hand posed confidently on the hip and the left carrying a trifling bag.

Countess Gleichen finds the girl of 1914 self-possessed in garb of a scantiness that would have been incredible to the Victorians. Her symbolical statue is undraped because it was not desired to create a mere record of a fashion. But on a pedestal near by the model is seen in the same attitude, but clad in a fashionable dinner gown—a gown that conceals the outlines of her form no more than that of a Tanagra woman or of a "merveilleuse" of the Directoire.

The countess in her statue has wished to glorify the modern ideal of feminine slenderness. "Scraggy" her plump and voluptuously robed grandmother would certainly have called her fifty years ago. But 1914 is an age of activities that do not permit of comfortable embonpoint. In the straight, deflecting look of "1914" and in the utmost impertinent confidence of the pose of the right arm Countess Gleichen has sought to indicate what she finds the characteristic attitude of the 1914 woman's mind—a certain insouciance, an insatiable curiosity, a rather frivolous sort of intellectual activity, fearlessness, and not altogether a work of prudery or of coquettishness.

DOG'S DISGUISE AS A WREATH

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, April 18.

A NEW and thrilling sport has sprung rapidly into popularity among women who travel. It is the result of the conflict between the passion for tiny dogs and the regulations of the Board of Agriculture imposing six months' quarantine on every dog brought into the British Isles.

At first women sadly left their pets at home when they went to Switzerland or the Riviera, but no woman with any claim to courage now flinches from the ordeal of smuggling her dog home again.

A pretty little spaniel lately made the journey disguised as a funeral wreath. His silk cushion was placed at the bottom of a tin case, the top of which was arched over with white flowers and maidenhair fern. The box was carried by a [illegible] maid dressed in black. A favorite [illegible] place for a small dog in a "vanity bag." Customs officers are notoriously too gallant to open these.

A small brow [illegible] named Sandy passed the ordeal in safety the other day in a ventilated satchel slung from its mistress' waist inside her long fur coat. Sandy had been taken out several times in the satchel in Paris to accustom him to the hiding place, but when the boat came alongside at Dover he became rebellious.

"He's wriggling," gasped his young mistress to her fiancé. An instant later Sandy gave a yap which would have drawn the attention of a ship's officer standing near had not the fiancé with great presence of mind sneezed loudly at the same moment.

On the way from the gangway to the customs officer Sandy made a vigorous attempt to free himself.

"He's half out," whispered his owner. "He'll be on the ground in a moment."

Again the ready witted fiancé saved the situation. Boldly he passed an arm round his companion.

"This lady's ill," he said in anxious tone to the customs officer standing before them. "Where is the waiting room?"

It was not until the train pulled out of Dover Harbor station that the half suffocated Sandy was allowed to struggle out into the daylight with a frantic volley of delighted barks.

CHAIN OF SOLAR OBSERVATORIES

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, April 18.

TO Miss Mary Proctor, daughter of the eminent astronomer the late Mr. Richard A. Proctor, is due the fact that there will soon be forged the last link in a chain of solar observatories round the world by means of which it will be possible to keep the sun under continuous observation during the twenty-four hours.

The missing link had to be either in Australia or New Zealand, to fill the gap of nearly 180 degrees between the solar observatory at Kodaikanal, in India, and that at Mount Wilson, Cal. The other two observatories for studying the sun are the Yerkes Observatory, at Williams Bay, Wis., and our own establishment at Cambridge. The new observatory will be in New Zealand, from which country Miss Proctor has just reached London after three years' absence, elated at the success of a lecture tour round the world on behalf of the project.

"I was in Australia giving a course of astronomical lectures in places of the late Sir Robert Ball, who was in bad health, when I saw that a meeting of scientists in London had declared that a solar physics observatory in Australasia was essential," said Miss Proctor. "I went over to New Zealand to see whether the people there were interested in the idea. Mr. Adams, the Government Astronomer, at once took up the matter and arranged for me to give a course of lectures throughout the country. In the meantime I visited the Kodaikanal Observatory.

"I had not been back in New Zealand more than two weeks when Mr. Thomas Cashmere, of Nelson, who is eighty years old, came to me and, saying he had heard my father lectures in Nelson thirty years before, offered to defray the entire cost of building, equipping and endowing the observatory. Originally I told him it would be a long [illegible], but later I learned it would require [illegible], and gave him a chance of withdrawing his offer. He could not be released, however, as I promised the larger amount."

At 94 Mr. James Sant Is Still Painting Portraits

Sending Pictures to This Year's Royal Academy Exhibition, Which Promises To Be Essentially One of Portraiture, Although There Are Several Good Landscapes.

MODEL OF STATUE FOR CAPITOL IN WASHINGTON

(Special Dispatch.)

LONDON, April 18.

THE period of rush and anxiety with artists who want to exhibit at this year's Royal Academy is over—for a bit. Apart from the R. A.'s and the A. R. A.'s, who are allowed to send their works along to Burlington House later than ordinary artists, would-be exhibitors have all sent in their paintings and water colors. Which of them will and which will not be "hung" still rests in the laps of the gods—the Hanging Committee—but from what one can gather it appears as if this would be essentially a portrait year.

Most interesting of all the English portrait painters of the day is Mr. James Sant, R. A., from the fact that at the age of ninety-four he is resigning his membership, though still painting, and an exhibitor this year. Asked why he was quitting the membership of the Royal Academy, he said with a charming smile, "I want to make room for a younger man." Mr. Sant is the "grand old man" of portraiture, and has exhibited at the Academy since 1840. He is still to be found at his easel, and though nearing the century of years is as vigorous as ever. Every day, from ten to one, and again from three to half-past four, he paints. All the year round he is at work on both landscape and portraits. There are no fewer than a thousand of Mr. Sant's paintings at Lancaster Gate, and altogether his output runs into many thousands.

In 1871 Mr. Sant was appointed principal painter in ordinary to Queen Victoria, for whom he painted many members of the royal family; and both Queen Victoria and King Edward called at his house.

"Fortunately I am blessed with a very strong constitution," said Mr. Sant to his caller, "which at ninety-four enables me to pursue my work. My eyesight still remains good, but I have entirely lost the hearing of one ear. This year I am sending to the Academy a study of a lady on which I have been at work for a long time, and I hope to continue exhibiting at the Academy. My hobby is to go out and sketch. Golfing has no attractions."

Mr. F. Derwent Wood, A. R. A., is sending to the Academy a sketch model of the statue of the great Earl of Chatham, which Lady Paget, wife of the Commander-in-Chief in Ireland, and other American women resident in England are presenting to the Capitol at Washington in connection with the centenary of peace. Mr. Wood was born at Keswick. His father was American and his mother English, so it was deemed fitting that he should be asked to undertake the commission.

Mr. Frank Dicksee's contribution also consists entirely of portraits. He is sending five, perhaps the finest of which has a pathetic history. The subject is a pretty girl of nineteen or twenty, in a muslin frock and straw hat, standing in a sunny garden. The figure is full of life and youth, with a gay smile on the lips and a happy light in the eyes. But the portrait is a posthumous one. The girl died some time before the picture was painted, and Mr. Dicksee never saw her. The work was commissioned by her father and mother, who, deeply grieved at her death, wished to have some memorial of her in her happiest moments. With this idea in view, Mr. Dicksee has painted the smiling girl in her gay summer frock with a blazing background of summer flowers, particularly of pink and crimson roses climbing over a rustic trellis. [illegible] picture and verbal [illegible] the artist has produced what [illegible] to a lifelike portrait.

Besides the "City[illegible]" already referred to in these cables, [illegible] John Collier is sending portraits of Lord Morley and the Duke of Bedford.

Mr. George Clausen has ready five pictures, varied in subject. The most important is a large landscape with figures. Two men are hoeing in a flat Essex field, against a background of cloudy blue sky. The picture is saturated with sunshine and color, and is undoubtedly one of the finest which has come from Mr. Clausen's brush. The other works are a spring landscape, with budding elms; "Primavera," a nude study of a girl plaiting her hair, an interior at twilight, and a portrait.

Mr. J. W. Waterhouse, R. A., is sending three portraits and a subject picture, "The Annunciation." Mr. M. W. Strang, A. R. A., has chosen for exhibition "The Card Players," a modern subject picture, and a series of etchings from the Bible.

Mr. A. S. Cope, R. A., has finished an important series of portraits—the King in undress naval uniform, the Duke of Connaught as Master of Trinity House, Lord Haldane, Lord Rame Gordon-Lennox, Lord Rothermere, of Harmsted, and Sir Clement Royds. Among the portraits sent by Mr. W. Llewellyn, A. R. A., will be those of Lord Cheylesmore and Sir William Vincent. Mr. Oswald Birley's Academy portraits will include one of Lord Reading of Earley in the robes of Lord Chief Justice. Mr. Frank O. Salisbury's portraits include Sir William Richmond and the aged Sir Walter Gilbey, while he is engaged on one of Lord Barnard.

Mr. G. P. Jacomb-Hood, M. V. O., will contribute to the Academy a picture of the investiture of the Maharajah of Bhagnir with the Star of India at the Delhi Durbar in 1912. This he has done for the Queen, and in order to do it he had to make another trip to India a few months ago.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE MAN FROM PUFF'S

It was a beautiful afternoon in spring. Mr. Spragg had come home a couple of hours earlier than usual, and he was sitting on the piazza of his country house, enjoying the air and a cigar.

His eye fell on a decrepit and apparently defunct shrub on the edge of the lawn—a shrub which was different from its fellows in that it showed no buds.

"That shrub," said Mr. Spragg, contemplatively, "ought to be replaced. Why haven't you done it before, Sarah?"

"Don't you remember, dear," she replied, "that I spoke to you about that shrub a week ago?"

"How much would it cost," he spoke at last, "to replace that shrub?"

"Not over a dollar."

"I saw an advertisement in a magazine the other day," he said, "of a man who had young trees to sell. It seems to me that it was near here—yes, I am sure it was."

"You mean Puff's place, replied Mrs Spragg.

He stirred himself and strolled inside the house. In a few moments he had Puff on the telephone.

"What will you charge me to get out a little Canadian spruce tree on my lawn and guarantee it?"

The man at Puff's was no fossil. The whole thing wouldn't cost more than a dollar.

"Are you telephoning from your house?" he added.

"Yes."

"Very well. I'll have it done at once. We have some elegant specimens just in."

"All right," said Spragg. "You can have the order, if it won't cost any more than a dollar."

"Well," he exclaimed to his wife, with a satisfied sigh, "that's off my mind."

Suddenly both he and Mrs. Spragg looked up. A smart little motor-car, spick and span and glistening in the afternoon sun, had stopped in front. A nice, pleasant-looking man sprang out with a business-like air and advanced up the walk

"Mr. Spragg?"

"Yes."

"I'm from Puff's."

"Sit down, please. You needn't have taken the trouble to come out here in such a hurry."

"No trouble at all, sir. It's a pleasure, I assure you. You have really the best location in town."

"Think so?" said Spragg.

"Oh, by all means," said the man from Puff's. "You know, Mr. Spriggins down the street."

"Very well."

"I was speaking to him the other day about your place. Of course he hated to admit it, but—"

Spragg laughed.

"He wanted this place, but I got in ahead of him."

"Yes, yes," he said. "He practically admitted that you got in ahead of him. He has the next best place in town; but of course that isn't the best place. Now, let's see, you want—"

"I want," answered Spragg, pointing to the spot, "a young Canadian spruce planted where that dead shrub is. It will look well there, won't it?"

The man from Puff's smiled sagely. "Of course, Mr. Spragg," he said, "you will appreciate the fact that we are landscape gardeners, and consider ourselves experts in our line. Now, if you want my opinion, you shouldn't have a tree in that spot. You shouldn't have anything there. It will take away from the lines of the house

"I would take away that shrub and turf it out. I'll send a man over to morrow and have it done."

"How much will that cost?"

"Why, nothing. Wouldn't think of charging for a little item like that. We are doing some work on Spriggin's place, and I'll have the men attend to it."

"That isn't my way of doing things. You send me a bill. What are you doing for Spriggins?"

At this point the man from Puff's realized that his moment had come. He turned to Spragg.

"Do you want to double the value of your place?"

"Of course I do."

"Then let me tell you something. You are making the mistake of your life. You have the finest place miles around; but it's all wrong—all wrong. Now, let me fix you up. You let me do what I'm doing at Spriggin's place—only, of course, you have twice the place he has. I can get twice the results."

He took from his pocket a blue print of the Spriggins' place, dotted in white with clumps of shrubs and trees.

"There you are," exclaimed he. "That's what I'm doing for Spriggins. He's given carte blanche."

Spragg turned to him.

"How much will it cost to fix up this place?" he asked.

"Very little," he said. "Very little indeed, considering how it would add to the value of your place. I'll do it for $500."

Spragg gasped.

"Five hundred dollars!"

"Yes. Spriggin's order—here it is—calls for about $450, but then his place doesn't compare with yours. That includes, of course, our guarantee for a year."

Spragg shook his head.

"Much obliged for your trouble," he said, "but I guess not."

The man turned from Spragg and got up.

"Don't mention it," he replied. "If you change your mind, let me know. Well, I must be off." He looked at his watch. "I have an engagement with Spriggins in ten minutes."

Spragg got up with him and walked to the end of the piazza—away from Mrs. Spragg.

"That seems a lot of money to me," he said, "to put on a place."

The man from Puff's turned on him instantly.

"Mr. Spragg," he said, "let me ask you a question. You are a man of business — I know your reputation. Here you have a place worth twenty, thirty, forty thousand dollars — you can't tell how much it is worth until the right man comes along. Now, you know that appearance is nine-tenths of the whole game. Is it business or not, to let us put $500 into this place and add all the way from $2,000 to $10,000 to its value? Have it right, Mr. Spragg."

Mr. Spragg swung around.

"Very well, young man," he said. "You go ahead, send me your layout and fix the place to suit yourself. I'll give you the order—and see that you do it well."

"Thank you, sir. Our reputation is at stake. Good day."

"Good day."

"Why, in these days," Spragg half soliloquized, "a man can't even afford to take an afternoon off from his business. Now, who would have thought that a confounded, measly shriveled up, dead-to-the-world, back number remnant of a shrub would ever have cost me $500?"

BAD BLOOD IS THE DIRECT CAUSE OF Pimples.

Pimples break out on the face and body, and it is impossible to get rid of them, unless you cleanse the blood of all of its impurities.

Burdock Blood Bitters is without a doubt, the very best medicine for this purpose.

This old, and reliable medicine has been in use for nearly forty years, and has a reputation unequalled by any other preparation for removing all the impurities from the blood and banishing the pimples.

Mr. Edward Paquette, Navan Centre, Ont., writes:—"One month ago my face was covered with pimples and a rash. I had tried a number of these so called blood purifiers with no avail. Seeing an almanac of yours in which you strongly recommend Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to try a bottle, and after I had taken it I could see a decided change, and after using three bottles more all the pimples had completely disappeared."

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy I ever used that did me any good, and I am grateful to "Fruit-a-tives" for making me as well as I am today, and everyone agrees that I look in fine health.

Radway's Ready Relief

J. L. Haddock of McGee, Mo., writes: "I had muscular rheumatism six weeks. Had three doctors, but did not get much relief. A friend insisted on me trying R. R. R. and sent me two bottles. In twenty minutes after the first application I could turn in bed with ease. Have used two bottles and am well."

Rheumatism

Apply the Relief externally to the part or parts affected, as briskly as circumstances will permit. Benefit will also be derived from Radway's Pills, their alterative action being clearly called to this disease. Where the joints are swelled, stiff or contracted, the Relief, with proper oil, is an admirable liniment.

WOLSEY'S CELLAR.

Relic of Old Whitehall Will Be Preserved Intact.

Little survives of Whitehall save the name, the one splendid fragment of the New Palace which Inigo Jones planned for King Charles I., but the course of English history determined should never be built. It served for a short while as the banqueting hall, and later as the place wherein the King himself spent his last moments before he stepped out of its window upon the scaffold.

To-day it has become the United Service Institution, and it constitutes all of Whitehall Palace that is known to the public. Underground, however, there is still found a relic of the older palace erected by Wolsey—a vault that is said by tradition to have been the great cardinal's wine cellar. As already stated, great changes are pending in Whitehall gardens, where additional Government offices are to be built.

This last relic of Wolsey's days of power at York Place is to be preserved unharmed when the new buildings rise above it.

For years past the vault has served the purposes of a refreshment-room for the clerks engaged in the public offices. It is a somewhat low chamber, of no architectural pretensions; its value historically is that it was Wolsey's building. The fact was made plain when, at the instance of the Office of Works, a part of the wall was laid bare some time ago.

The original brick was then disclosed, and when the stucco facing had been cleared away the arms of the cardinal carved in stone were brought to light. It has become the accepted tradition that Wolsey built Whitehall, and that is probably true, for a builder on such a magnificent scale as his works still to be seen at Hampton Court and at Oxford display, is likely to spare little that he found on the site. But York Place was standing there centuries before his time. It was not even his property. Seventeen archbishops of York has possessed the place before Wolsey, and till the day of the seizure by the crown it belonged to the Northern see.

The vault, as shown in Fisher's plan of the Old Palace, prepared in the reign of Charles II., was situated immediately behind the great hall. Near by were the kitchen, the buttery, pantry, and other offices requisite for the preparation of the great feasts at which the all-powerful Minister entertain his royal master, among others. That the vault still preserved was actually the wine cellar is, by reason of its situation, extremely probable. The means by which King Henry VIII. secured York Palace for himself were characteristic.

It belonged by right, as already stated, to the See of York. It was at this time, says the historian Strype, distinguished "by a sumptuous magnificence that most probably has never been equalled in the house of any other English subject, or surpassed in the palaces of many of its kings. Its buildings and gardens covered three acres, and from the stairs upon the river Wolsey entered his barge, and was rowed to Esher after his disgrace. Henry paid absolutely nothing for this most valuable property, either to Wolsey, the builder, or to the See of York, the dispossessed owner. Yet in the Act of Parliament legalizing the unholy business, it is set out that the state of utter ruin and decay into which the Ancient Palace of Westminster has fallen had "induced the King to purchase" York Palace. The name was changed at once to Whitehall.

Clear Seeing Masonet.

Critics have not yet assigned the late M. Massenet his permanent niche in the temple of fame, but most of them agree that he was a charming, although not a great composer. He had one quality of character, however, which is not the invariable accompaniment of genius, musical and other—he could appreciate genius in others. An anecdote taken from the Paris Figaro attests it:

A critic was indulging in extravagant praise of Massenet to his face and wound up his flattery:

"Wagner! What was he? His talent is most absurdly exaggerated. I have to pick and choose among a lot of rubbish in Wagner."

"Is that so?" commented Massenet suavely. "I should be quite happy with what you leave."

Really Cold Weather.

An enlightening glimpse of what life in the Antarctic is like was afforded by Surgeon Murray Levick, a member of Captain Scott's expedition, in the course of an address at the hall of the Royal Society of Medicine in London.

He told how his party lived for seven months in an igloo, a hut built out of a hard snow drift, with walls of ice. They lived in a still atmosphere underground, where there was not sufficient oxygen to support the combustion of a lamp, or even a match. This was caused by a blizzard and snow drift, which had clogged the entrance to the igloo, and proved that far less oxygen was required to support life in a cold atmosphere than in great heat.

In winter the air in South Polar regions was fairly still. At other times the seas were terrific, and great boulders were rolled up on the beach. Ice formed on the sea with great rapidity, and when the temperature was fairly low a couple of days was sufficient to form ice eighteen inches thick. A bottle of champagne which was broken from and crystals of coloring matter were formed which resisted solution.

Dunderberg.

The word means "thunder mountain" and is the name of a mountain on the Hudson river at the entrance to the Highlands, opposite to Anthony's Nose. According to a legend, the mountain was in the keeping of a "little bellows bottomed Dutch goblin in trunk hose and a sugar loaf hat." He had charge of the thunderstorms in the vicinity, and in consequence the skippers for a long time lowered their peaks while passing Dunderberg. Washington Irving says: "It was observed that all such as paid this tribute of respect were suffered to pass unmolested."

Countess' Dancing Class.

The Countess of Aberdeen has taken in hand the task of teaching poor Dublin children how to dance and play. Every day at Dublin Castle, in a building used as a riding-school, scores of little ones from schools in the congested districts are drawn at the Castle. Here teachers instruct them in folk dances, Swedish drill, and a number of exercises. Personal interest is taken in the work of instruction by the Lord Lieutenant and Lady Aberdeen.

Rheumatism

SCIATICA AND LUMBAGO, QUICKLY CURED BY "KEPHALDOL."

A druggist in Toronto said that he was asking an Old Country customer of his about KEPHALDOL TABLETS. This customer told him, "I suffered from severe Rheumatism and Sciatica for twenty years, hardly ever being free from these troubles. I read about KEPHALDOL in the Glasgow papers and sent home for some. Three hours after taking two tablets, the pain was almost gone, and after taking six or seven, I hadn't a bit of pain."

This druggist went in to see his doctor about his wife and asked him if he had ever heard of KEPHALDOL. The docter said, "Yes, I understand KEPHALDOL is a reliable sedative and anodyne, relieving pain without affecting the heart or vital organs. Since KEPHALDOL has been introduced into Canada, I have prescribed it in cases of severe Headaches and Neuralgia, and just recently succeeded in helping a most severe case of La Grippe with it."

Since then, this druggist has ordered KEPHALDOL and recommended it to those of his customers who wanted something to relieve pain. If you are unable to get KEPHALDOL Tablets at your druggist's, send 50c. to Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

ESTIMATES TABLED

Main Expenditures for 1914-15 Show Slight Increase.

LUMP VOTE IS OPPOSED

TORONTO, April 22.—Main estimates for 1914-15, which were tabled in the Legislature yesterday, call for an expenditure of $9,810,749. Compared with the main estimates for 1913-14 there is no great change, the principal amounts being on account of capital expenditures. The main estimates passed a year ago amounted to $9,634,887. Altogether the Legislature will be called upon to vote this session in respect of the requirements of the province for the two fiscal years $27,248,488.

The vote for civil government, which consists of salaries and contingencies, is $829,984, compared with $863,185 last year. For legislation the amount is $707,190, a decrease of $27,000. In the Attorney-General's Department the vote for the administration of justice is $786,265, as compared with $862,710 in 1913-14.

For education the vote is $2,236,052, as against $2,240,825 a year ago. Public institutions maintenance gets a sum of $1,560,947, a decrease of $13,000. In this connection there is a vote of $12,000 for the maintenance of the Reception Hospital for Insane at Toronto. There is a vote of $6,000 in the further supplementary estimates for the current year, which will carry this work on for the current six months. For agriculture $756,786; 1913-14, $766,654.

In the grant for colonization and immigration, which is $132,800, as against $126,201 a year ago, the vote of $16,000 for bonuses to concerns bringing out domestic servants is reduced to $5,000, while the vote for assisting settlers in New Ontario is increased by $10,000, the amount now being $35,000.

For the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, in respect of general services, there is a vote of $200,000.

The labor interests of the province won a point yesterday when the local committee of the Legislature threw out the Dargavel bill, which would make one-half the indebtedness of a laboring man subject to garnishee. The present law fixes the limit of $25, which is to be exempt from any such proceeding, but the new measure would work out very seriously against the man of low wages who has serious outstanding bills against him.

The ticket scalpers' bill of George Goederham, which prevents the sale of tickets except by authorized agents, in which case the commission must not exceed 25 cents apiece, was also adopted by the committee.

The Opposition took a last stand against the further expenditure of $125,000 for Government House, but on the declaration of Hon. Dr. Reaume that the result would be a credit to the province from every standpoint, the motion of criticism was lost. C. M. Bowman said that it was a wanton expenditure of public money and poked scorn at the elaborate fittings. He was followed by Messrs. Magean, McDonald, Monro and Proudfoot, each of whom repudiated such an amount of money being used.

Two Government bills, brought in by Hon. Messrs. Hanna and Pyne respectively, provide for further amendments to the Municipal Act and for permissive legislation allowing city school boards to establish special classes for defective children who cannot now secure a proper education along with normal scholars.

Expansion of the Hydro-Electric power scheme to large dimensions was indicated by Hon. Adam Beck in the Legislature in giving details of the various expenditures for which a vote of $5,000,000 in the further supplementary estimates was required. The commission would no longer be a middleman but would enter upon the development of power on a large scale.

There was no criticism from the Opposition on the merits of the various works to be carried out, but Mr. Hugh Munro (Glengarry) took the ground that the whole amount required should not be voted in a lump sum, but that the resolution should contain the actual estimates that Mr. Beck and Col Hendrie had given to the House in order that the members should know how much was intended to be devoted to each particular piece of work.

Why Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

Scientific Reports, April:—Acid in the stomach is dangerous and frequently fatal, because acid from its corrosive nature has a natural tendency to destroy the mucous lining of the stomach itself. No one intentionally swallows hydrochloric acid, but it is often present in large quantities as the result of food fermentation in the stomach resulting from the chemical action, which so frequently follows the eating of the daintiest and most tasty foods or the indulgence in all form of alcohol stimulants, including beer, wine, liqueurs, etc. This fermentation causes pain, uneasiness and discomfort because of the acid which burns like a red-hot iron, and the formation of gas which distends the stomach, causing shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart. The trouble being entirely due to the unnatural condition of stomach contents, and not in any way to the fault of the stomach itself, physicians have adopted with marvellous success the plan of neutralizing the acid and stopping the fermentation by means of one teaspoonful of simple bisurated magnesia taken in a little water immediately after eating or whenever discomfort is felt. The immediate relief following the use of bisurated magnesia is nothing proof of the contention of medical men that failure to digest food properly is more invariably due to the acid condition of the contents, and in no way the fault of the stomach or vital organs.

How American Women May Keep Faces Young

The American smart "woman gets early, far earlier than the English woman," says Christian Miller, F.C.S., the famous English health expert. She adds that our climate "so outrageous that you over-dress yourselves and grow old before you know it. Then comes coldbleaching all color the skin. The skin that looks moist turns grown pale and withered looking and soon forms wrinkles.

"The American complexion" is best treated by applying pure, unrefined wax which causes the dead, flabby cuticle to flake off in minute particles, a little each day, until the fresh, young skin beneath is wholly in evidence. Every particle flaked off goes; then comes the pure, unrefined wax on at night, like cold cream, washing it off next morning.

For wrinkles, disguise the cause of powdered mercolized wax in a half pint witch hazel; bathe the face in this. Immediately every wrinkle disappears, even deep, drawn or lined. Both ingredients are famous for obtaining facial rejuvenation.

Toronto's Long Promised Edifice Will Cost Over $12,000,000.

MONTREAL, April 22.—The Grand Trunk and C. P. R. have now decided on the plans for the Toronto Union Station, which, it is estimated, will cost between $12,000,000 and $13,000,000.

They will be submitted to the Dominion Railway Board about May 15, and when accepted the work will proceed at once.

Information to this effect has been given out by the Grand Trunk Railway officials, who point out that the cost of the viaduct, which is a part of the big terminal scheme for Toronto, is not included in the figure quoted.

The viaduct, which will cost $3,000,000, will be a matter for later consideration.

Railway officials who have seen the plans for the station say, when finished, the depot will be the finest of its kind in the Dominion.

Who Owned the Cart?

An old law in Carmarthen county, in Wales, required that every conveyance passing over the turnpike toll roads should be plainly marked with the name of the owner so that the perpetrator of any lawlessness could be easily detected.

One young farmer known as Stammering Jim was summoned before a magistrate, who demanded why his name did not appear on his two-wheeled cart.

"W-w-whose n-n-name am I to put on?" stammered the defendant.

"Your own, of course," said the magistrate.

"B-b-but it isn't my cart, your worship," says Jim.

"Who is the owner, then?" demanded the squire.

"T-t-that's the t-t-trouble sir," said Jim. Melba's Pullman Porter Critic.

One American experience recurs to me at the moment. I had been appearing in "Faust," at Washington, and, getting into the train after the performance rather tired, was not unnaturally annoyed at finding my stateroom unprepared. I called the colored attendant, who kept me waiting a long time before he condescended to appear.

"Why is my berth not ready?" I began.

He looked me up and down indifferently.

"I saw you play Margaret (Marguerite) this mornin'," he said defiantly, 'an' I thought you weren't a bit o' good. You'll hev to wait. But Plancon (Plancon) was fine," he added as an afterthought.

Two years afterward I received a letter from this same sharp critic. "I heerd you last night as Manon Lescaut," it ran, "and it was real fine. You beat the band. I take it all back."—Mme. Melba in Strand Magazine.

England's Great Little River.

One could hardly fancy an England without the Thames. It is the source, the inspiration, the participant, in so much that distinguishes England's sylvan beauty. In the centuries that have lived upon its banks it has been a potent factor in the civilization of this island kingdom. It cuts in twain and lays the hurliest city in all the world, a dark maze of human structure impenetrably profound. It rides a vast commerce from London to the sea, and along its jutting wharves nights are often made darker with its tragedies. Years agone kings and princes and the fairest women in the land rode upon its tide in functions of state or in the idle pose of pleasure. Those were the days of the garlanded barge or the hooded galley foist, which, gliding stealthily beneath the Tower portcullis, lost another noble to the world of politics and intrigue.—From "In Thameland."

FRENCH IN THE BUSH.

Norman Duncan Tells of a "Swagsman" in Australia.

In his account of his journey through the Australian dry-lands, Norman Duncan, the Canadian author, tells a remarkable tale told him by a "swagman" whom he met in the bush.

"On our way back to the trail we encountered a hairy, dusty, ragged fellow, pedalling a bicycle through the scrub, a swag on his back. He was all in a lather with the labor of his haste. Whether he was miner, prospector, cattle-man or landowner (tramp), there was no telling. At any rate, he was riding for liquor, as he was quite frank to say, and fast going mad for it. It was a case of the dry horrors' with him (said he), and he was vastly disgruntled with our news that the tavern was closed up. Forking up, however, in our company, he seemed in no bad way, after all, and presently told us, as we went along, that some days before, traveling the edge of the 'nigger country' to the north, he had fallen in with a roving band of gins (black women) with whom he had enjoyed an entertainment which still kept him laughing. What these savage women were about, wandering the country without men, far from their tribe, he could not discover; but as they were daubed with clay he concluded they were mourning some death. What amused him was this: that as he rode near he was, to his dumbfounded amazement, addressed in lackadaisical English, by one of the young women (he vowed) who was not only the dirtiest, but quite the ugliest and most primitively unconcerned of all the chocolate 'mob.'

"'Really,' she drawled, 'don't you find the weather rawther oppressive?'

"At this the swagman blasphemed his surprise.

"'If you were to address me in French,' said the young woman, with sweeping dignity, 'I should have no difficulty in comprehending you.'

"It turned out that this aboriginal maiden had, according to her story, been reared from childhood by a lady of Adelaide; that she had reverted to the bush and was then with her tribe. Whether for good and all she did not know; she might return to the lady some day—to play the piano. And she tittered like a schoolgirl (said the swagman); she chaffed and giggled and chattered in the most flirtatious manner of the settlements, not in the least perturbed, moreover, being new in the bush, by the shocking fact that she was in the garb of the bush."

To Reclaim Soudan.

Work has been commenced on another great scheme to reclaim by irrigation vast tracts of desert in the Soudan. It is believed it can be made to add enormously to the cotton output of the British Empire. The tract which is to be watered is known as the Gizra territory. It lies between the Blue and White Niles, below Khartoum, and consists of 1,500,000 acres. The force and flow of the two rivers is sufficient to water the entire district when properly harnessed. The proposal is to build two dams south of Khartoum, one over each of the rivers. Thus the tract between the streams will be irrigated, while at the same time the force of the water flowing into Egypt will be controlled. At present the Blue Nile comes down in a raging flow, and the White Nile, flowing in steadier fashion, combines with it to make a huge overflow. The building of the two dams will enable the flow to be properly regulated and will practically mean the final harnessing of the Nile.

Tombstone in a Cage.

Very unusual is the story connected with an iron cage erected over the grave of an East Indian officer who was a keen big game hunter. He had the cage made so that by undoing the screws at the end it could easily be taken to pieces, and he utilized it for two purposes. On his tiger shooting expeditions he had it covered with green boughs, which it effectively concealed him from his quarry, while at night it covered him while he slept. The bars, however, were not sufficiently close to make him quite secure, and one night he was so badly mauled by a tiger that he died of blood-poisoning. — London Grand Magazine.

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 22, 1914

THE AMERICAN FORCES LAND AT TAMPICO AND SEIZE THE DOCKS

Marines Takes Possession of 15 Million Rounds of Ammunition and 250 Field Guns Assigned to General Huerta.

VERA CRUZ OCCUPIED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LAND AT TAMPICO.

TAMPICO, MEXICO, APRIL 22. — (FLASH) — UNITED STATES MARINES HAVE BEEN LANDED FROM THE WARSHIPS IN THE HARBOUR AND ARE TAKING POSSESSION OF THE CUSTOMS HOUSE AND DOCKS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 22. — The new resolution supporting President Wilson in his Mexican course was passed by both houses of Congress at ten-thirty to-day. President Wilson is now entitled to any means he thinks fit to deal with the situation. Despatches arriving from Vera Cruz to the Navy Department this morning indicate that the Mexicans opened fire on the United States position to-day at daybreak. Reinforcements of sailors and marines were landed from Admiral Badger's fleet. Firing is general and the artillery has been brought into action.

3,000 TROOPS AT VERA CRUZ.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 22. — In a report received by President Wilson from the Consul at Vera Cruz to-day at noon, it was stated that more than half of teh town was in possession of United States troops and the Mexicans were retreating towards the open country. No more casualties on the United States side are reported. Rear Admiral Fletcher has issued a proclamation requesting civilians to go about their occupations assuring them of full protection of the United States. A passing train filled with English-speaking refugees from the interior arrived safely this morning. There are now three thousand United States blue jackets and marines in Vera Cruz, and more are arriving from warships in the harbour every hour.

WILSON CRITICIZED.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 22.— The substitute Mexican resolution as sent down by the Senate did not get through the House of Representatives without severe criticism by those opposed to the President. Republican Leader Mann said that President Wilson had already assumed responsibility of commencing war which could bring no honour or glory to the country or flag. However, the majority of the House was clearly in favour of the resolution, and it was signed by speaker Clark at noon.

CANADIAN WOUNDED.

TORONTO, April 22.—The official list of casualties at the fighting at Vera Cruz yesterday includes the name of one Canadian among the wounded, Private John McMillan, of the Second Regiment Marines, enlisted March 21, 1913, at Chicago. Next of kin, his mother Frances, who lives at Mayfield, Manitoba.

SEIZE AMMUNITION.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, April 22.— The German steamer Ypiranga, docked to-day and the United States marines immediately took possession of fifteen million rounds of ammunition and 250 field guns, consigned to General Huerta.

50 MILLIONS APPROPRIATED.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 22.— In a special message to Congress this afternoon Wilson asked for an appropriation of half a million dollars to bring the United States subjects out of Mexico.

VERA CRUZ OCCUPIED.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, April 22.— (1:30 p.m.)—This town is now entirely in the hands of United States forces. The Mexicans are retreating to the interior.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 22. — hosts, and will personally appeal to to-day regarding United Statesers and Britishers in Mexico City. One story which seems incredulous is that Charge d'Affaires Nelson O'Shaughnessy and his family have been assassinated. Government officials say that they have nothing to report in regard to the situation in Mexico City.

The revengeful nature of the Mexicans is common knowledge. The affair at Vera Cruz might be taken by them as an excuse for a general annihilation of hated "Yankees" and in "Yankees" they include everybody who speaks the English language. President Wilson still clings to the hope that a general war can, and will be prevented, but few of his advisers have any such hope. They think Huerta will declare war in a few hours, and will personally appeal to the powers for help as Spain did in 1898.

SENATE ACTS.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 22. — American blood flowing in battle spurred the Congress to action today. At 3:30 this morning, amid great enthusiasm, the Senate by a vote of 72 to 13, passed a resolution "justifying" the President's course in Mexico. At ten o'clock a substitute resolution was presented to the House. It will likely be passed in a few hours.

LAST ROYAL VISIT WAS BACK IN 1860

The last visit of Royalty to Peterborough was in 1860, when the late King Edward VII. was welcomed by the citizens when he was yet the Prince of Wales. That was 54 years ago, and Peterborough was only a small town. However, it is said that the reception extended to the young Prince was quite a splendid one. The coming visit of the brother of the late King Edward and son of Victoria the Good will undoubtedly be a memorable one.

ACTRESS HAD CLOTHES BURNED IN BED ROOM

Visiting Member of Red Widow Company Will Have Occasion to Remember Her Stay Here

FURNITURE DESTROYED

One of the actresses who visited Peterborough with the Red Widow Company yesterday will likely remember her short stay in the City for some time. The reason is that yesterday evening, in a fire that started in her room at the Grand Hotel, she lost all her clothing and personal effects that she usually carries with her from place to place, except the suit that she was wearing. The fire was the result of her carelessness in the use of the electric iron, and should be a lesson to local people as well to be very careful in using those useful appliances.

During the evening the actress had occasion to use the electric iron, and when she was finished with it she laid laid it down on the bed without disconnecting it from the lamp or turning off the power. The result was that about 7.30 o'clock smoke was seen to be pouring from her room, and it was found that the iron had ignited the bed clothes. Immediate efforts were made to stop the flames, and the brigade was sent for. They succeeded in confining the blaze to the one room, but the bed, the young lady's trunk, and all her clothes (excepting those she was wearing) were totally destroyed by the flames. The damage to the building will be about fifty dollars.

ANOTHER FIRE

Previously in the afternoon a grass fire at the residence of Mrs. Edgecombe Pearce, 588 Rubidge street, caused considerable excitement. The fire caught the fence and burned about twenty-five feet of it.

EAST CITY MAN GRANTED LICENSE

License Commissioners Decide to Allow Request of Mr. C. Lipsett If Petition Is Properly Signed

LICENSES WERE RENEWED

The Board of License Commissioners met last night and granted renewals to all the local hotel and shopkeepers who held licenses during the past year. There were present Messrs Jas. Kendry, Dr. Morrison and R. Sheehy.

An application for a license, accompanied by a largely signed petition, was presented from Mr. A. Lipsett, proprietor of the Maple Leaf Hotel in East City. It will be remembered that several years ago the City Council passed a by-law providing that there should be only thirteen hotel licenses in this city. At the time there were nineteen, and the License Commissioners reduced the number to 12 by cutting off seven of the licenses, including that of Mr. Lipsett. A few months ago the Oriental Hotel declined to have its license renewed and shortly afterward a petition was circulated to have the license given to Mr. Arthur Lipsett. This was granted at last night's meeting of the commissioners, provided that the petition was properly signed. The petition must bear the signatures of a certain percentage of the ratepayers in the polling subdivision in which the Maple Leaf Hotel is situated, and the one presented last night is now in the hands of the City Clerk, who will determine whether or not the petition is properly signed.

The hotels and proprietors granted renewals are:

Curt W. Smuck—Grand Hotel.
C. G. Graham—White House.
R. P. Gollop—Snowden House.
Frank Montgomery — Montgomery House.
Dennis Corkery — King George Hotel.
Sam Long—American House.
Fred Blastorah—Palace Hotel.
At T. Johnston—Windsor Hotel.
R. J. Munro—Munro House.
P. Hogan—Albion Hotel (East City.
Geo. Lipsett—Maple Leaf Hotel (East City).

Shop Licenses.

P. J. Kenny.
Alex. Elliott & Co.
J. C. Sullivan (East City).

The National Hotel license for which Geo. Graham has applied, is still in abeyance. It has been granted as far as the Commissioners are concerned, but, although the money has been forwarded to the authorities, the license has not yet been fully allowed and until word is received from them it will be impossible to know whether Mr. Graham will get the license or not.

The by-law now in force now provides that there shall be only thirteen hotel licenses in the city. At present (including the National Hotel there are only twelve licensed hotels, so that the Commissioners can, if they see fit, allow another license.

A PLACE TO PLAY

"Plenty of room for shops and stores,
(Mammon always have the best.)
Plenty of room for the running sores
That rot in the city's breast!
Plenty of room for the lures that lead
The hearts of our youth astray,
But never a cent on a playground spent,
No! never a place to play!

Plenty of room for schools and halls,
Plenty of room for art;
Plenty of room for teas and balls,
Platform, stage and mart.
Proud is the city—she finds a place
For many a fad to-day,
But she's more than blind if she fails to find
A place for the boys to play!

Give them a chance for innocent sport,
Give them a chance for fun—
Better a playground plot than a court
And a jail when the harm is done!
Give them a chance—if you stint them now
To-morrow you'll have to pay
A larger bill for darker ill,
So give them a place to play!"

CHILDREN HAD NARROW ESCAPE

Played With Matches in Absence of Mother and Set House on Fire

DAMAGE WILL BE $300

Yesterday afternoon the children of Mrs. H. C. Wilson, 103 Rubidge street, had a very narrow escape from being burned to death in the absence of their parents. As it was they escaped without any injury, and the damage done, which will amount to two or three hundred dollars, was to property alone.

It seems that yesterday afternoon Mrs. Wilson had occasion to leave her home, and while she was away her children invited a few of the neighboring youngsters in to play with them. In one of the bedrooms they commenced to play with matches and before long had set the bedclothes and curtains on fire. The children fled with terror from the flames and a fire alarm was rung in. The brigade responded to find the room a mass of flames. They managed to extinguish the flames after half an hour's strenuous work. The house was a frame one and the flames got into the floors and beams, making it a very difficult matter to reach them. Five chemical tanks were used up in putting out the flames.

ENCOURAGE HOME MERCHANTS BY BUYING IN PETERBOROUGH

Duty is a power that rises with us in the morning and goes to rest with us at night. It is co-extensive with the action of our intelligence. It is the shadow which cleaves to us, go where we will.

Let us do our duty in our shop or kitchen, in the market, the street, the office, the farm, the school, the home, just as faithfully as if we stood in the front ranks of some great battle and knew that victory for mankind depended upon our bravery, strength and skill. When we do that, the humblest of us will be serving in that great army which achieves the welfare of the world.

It should be the slogan of every consumer to never send away for goods that he can just as well buy at home. Every time you send a dollar to a mail-order house that dollar, as far as you and your community are concerned, is practically out of circulation. Your home merchant is the one who helps to keep up your schools, your churches and your town. He is the one who deserves your trade, and not some catalogue house in Toronto or elsewhere.

MERELY INSTITUTIONS OF ACCOMMODATIONS.

It seems unbelievable, but it is nevertheless a fact, and shows the entire lack of any sense of justice, but many people regard their local stores as merely institutions of accommodation. When these people have cash to spend it goes to the far-away mail-order houses, but when times are dull, when they are sick or out of work, or during the season when farmers are not turning their produce into cash, what do they do? Do they write to the catalogue house and ask for credit?

If they did, do you think they would get it? No. Those concerns must have cash, must have it in advance, must have it before you can even see the goods you buy. The consumer sends his money and then sits down and waits until the mail-order house gets good and ready to fill his order. But when people want credit or favours of any kind, they hustle off to their home merchant, very obligingly order what they want, and tell him to charge it, expecting him to wait at least from one to six months for his pay.

In buying from your home merchants you deal with neighbours. Buy with goods before you. Pay when you get the goods. Have goods delivered free. Return goods if not satisfactory. Build up your home store. Help build up your home town. And make of yourself a man worthy of your day and time.

PRINCESS PATRICIA TO VISIT PETERBORO' WITH GOV. GENERAL

HUNTER ST. BRIDGE UNDERMINED BY ACTION OF WATER

Western Foundation Wall Seriously Undermined and Board of Works Has an Extra Problem on Its Hands—Ralph Building Wall Cracked

PERMANENT REPAIRS

The western wall of the Hunter Street Bridge over the creek has been seriously undermined by the action of the water during the tide of spring and Alderman Duncan is confronted with the unpleasant probability of expending on repairs $800 or more of the limited means which have been placed at the disposal of the Board of Works.

Both ends of the stone wall have been loosened, but it is at the north end that the most damage has been done. The foundation under the west wall shows several gaps of a couple of inches, and the undermovement has resulted in a break in the wall of the Halpin building just above it. These are results noticed particularly yesterday, and Engineer Parsons states that the foundation of the building at the corner will have to be built up and a portion of the wall will have to be reconstructed.

THE PROBABLE CAUSE.

The bridge cuts across Hunter Street at a rather sharp angle, and this section of the creek forms another angle with the line of the stream above Hunter Street.

The water struck the north end of the west wall and spent its force on that particular section before it was turned through the course under the bridge. In some manner the sand and earth under this portion of the stone wall was gradually washed out for a distance of at least 12 or 15 feet and the wall began to crumble.

TEMPORARY BEAMS.

Under the central part of the bridge the wall is intact and at the north end a number of stout beams have been placed under the iron girders until the repairs have been made.

WILL MAKE A GOOD JOB.

In discussing the situation this morning Alderman Duncan and Engineer Parsons intimated that any repairs that will be made must be permanent. It is proposed to build a cement abutment with deep foundation at the upper end of the west wall to prevent a repetition of the present trouble. Mr. Parsons also suggested flooring the creek under the bridge with cement. The sandy condition of the bottom may create trouble at some future time, and to avoid difficulties a permanent work is considered best.

UNFORESEEN EXPENSE.

In any case the expense incurred was unforeseen when the estimates were listed, and it means that the already well pruned appropriation for the Board of Works will be reduced to such an extent that a cut or two will have to be made in the amounts for other work.

THIS MAN HAS ONE WIFE TOO MANY

A bigamist from Eldon appeared this morning before County Magistrate F. D. Moore, K.C., to answer to the crime of taking to himself an other woman while the first still lived.

The prisoner who was charged with taking the second awful chance in the bonds of matrimony, was a very unkempt looking mortal and just the style of a man who could be easily led, but it is difficult to see how he could be loved. He wore a big knit cap, had several weeks' growth of sun-burned whiskers on his face and he had a shuffling gait, and turned his toes in when he walked. He is a man of about 43 years of age and was accompanied by his father, a venerable and respectable looking old man.

Magistrate Moore, after informing the prisoner that he was charged with being a bigamist, read the bond which was framed to bind father and son in two sureties of $800 each to appear in Lindsay before the County Magistrate on the 24th day of April next at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, when the case will be fully ventilated.

Mr. F. Holmes Hopkins, Acting Crown Attorney, appeared for the prosecution. Mr. Wm. Thornbury County Constable, having procured evidence.—Lindsay Warder.

Council, Military and Board of Trade Will Send Programme of Entertainment to the Secretary to the Duke of Connaught for Royal Approval.

WILL BE BIG EVENT

Colonel Clegg, of the 57th Regiment; Col. (Dr.) T. W. H. Young, of the 10th Brigade, C.F.A.; Major Walker, and Mr. Basil Hall, president of the Board of Trade, joined with the City Council, all the members of which were present, last night in the preparations for a grand public reception to the Governor-General, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, who will visit Peterborough on June 1st, accompanied by H.R.H. the Princess Patricia.

Mayor Buller stated that a reply had been received from the secretary to the Governer-General stating that the exact hour of the arrival of the royal party in Peterborough, and the duration of their visit was not definitely known yet, but that it would probably be in the morning. The Council was requested to submit an outline of the programme for the reception and entertainment of the distinguished visitors, in order that when the details of the trip were arranged no disappointment would be caused the people of this city.

Colonel Clegg suggested that the city clerk enquire as to whether a guard of honour or an escort, or both, would be desired by His Royal Highness. The former is provided by the infantry, and the escort by the cavalry. Colonel Young also added the question of a royal [illegible] of twenty-one guns.

It was decided to suggest to the ducal party the following tentative programme: A civic address, public reception, automobile visit to Peterborough's principal points of interest, a trip over the Lift Lock, luncheon and royal salute. The secretary will also be asked if a guard of honour will be expected.

It is probable that this comprehensive list will be reduced as it is believed that the time limit of the stay in Peterborough will not be extensive.

Colonel Young stated that he understood the party would arrive here in the morning, would reach Port Hope shortly after the noon hour and would visit Cobourg in the evening where a splendid ball is being arranged.

Nothing Definite Yet.

If the weather is favourable the presentation of the civic address will probably take place in one of the parks, or the indoor parade ground at the Armouries may be utilized. In the event of a reception invitations would have to be sent out. City Clerk Armstrong remarked that this had proved the only satisfactory method of arranging a reception.

Mayor Buller said he believed the Bessie Butler could be secured for the Lift Lock visit through Mr. Burnham, and to save time the trip over could be made in automobiles.

Decorate the City.

It would, of course, be expected that the city should be appropriately decorated for the occasion. Colonel Young suggested that the school children might be prepared to give a demonstration of a fitting character and sing the national songs.

Major Walker remarked that the preparations for this feature might take up much of the children's time when their examinations were close at hand.

Alderman Green — His Highness will not want to leave Peterborough once he has seen it.

Mayor Buller—He might like to spend a couple of days' fishing at Stony Lake.

Alderman Stratton moved, seconded by Alderman Johnston that the above proposed programme features be submitted to the Duke's secretary, and in the meantime the Council's reception committee in conjunction with the military officials and other citizens could proceed with the arrangements.

It was also decided to submit to the secretary the civic address which will be handsomely prepared.

A.P. DOBBIN WELCOMED BY MAYOR BULLER AND GOES TO COMMITTEE

Ald. F. H. Dobbin took his position at the Council Board last night as easily as if he had been spending every night in the deliberations of the City Fathers.

Mayor Buller congratulated and welcomed him on behalf of the Council.

Alderman Dobbin acknowledged the Mayor's remarks and stated that in working for the city's interests it would not be on a narrow policy of economy, but upon broad conservation.

Mayor Buller—That means the same thing although it may be a new way of talking economy.

On motion of Alderman Duffus, seconded by Alderman Green, Alderman Dobbin was assigned to the reception committee.

WHAT ULSTER IS USED FOR.

There's a new Ulster tempest in a tea-pot. It is now asserted that the movement of troops in Ireland was part of a plot to goad Ulster into resort to arms. There is no difficulty in accepting the assurances of the Government that there is nothing in this charge. The great ado made by Ulster is more political than patriotic in its origin and continuance. For months Sir Edward Carson, as agent of the Unionists, has been inviting somebody to tread on the tail of his ulster and precipitate a "ruction." Political protagonists of the Unionist party have been using, if they did not create, the Ulster situation, to promote their party aims. Anythig to defeat the Asquith Government, including civil war, is considered justifiable in the party interests; and the length to which this motto is exploited is shown in the origination of the improbable story that the Government is guilty of a plot to force Ulster into hostilities. The attitude of Ulster, under the inspiration of the Unionist party managers, has been intensely provocative and that it has not already excited local reprisal is due to the restraint of the Nationalist leaders and their followers in Ipaland. It is difficult to foresee what new expedient to create dissension and defeat the will of Parliament will follow the failure of the plot story. There is no doubt discontent in Ulster over the home rule proposal, but this discontent by no means includes all the people of Ulster, and it is much more than probable that if political schemers and party mischief-makers had not created discontent and given it direction and intensity there would not have been the situation that exists to-day. The voice may be the voice of Ulster, but the hand is the hand of the political Esau. There is no doubt that Home Rule, in relation to Ulster, is only the excuse exploited by the Tory party to defeat the Asquith Government and bring about the repeal of the Parliament Act so as to make the House of Lords—largely hereditary and anachronistic—again an obstructive force in defeating the will of the people, as expressed through their representatives. The virtual destruction of representative institutions is the aim, the idea behind the opposition to Home Rule. Ulster and its alleged grievances are chiefly pawns in the game. Great Britain has made too many sacrifices, too much blood has been spilt in the fight for popular government to permit retrograde elements and forces to prevail and destroy its essence for the sake of the triumph of a party historically and traditionally hostile to human progress and the enfranchisement of the people. The issue is infinitely bigger than home rule. It is the classes against the masses; the privileged classes against the people, who constitute the real nation.

THE PUBLIC INTEREST.

The spring has brought a welcome revival of activity in building, one of the processes in making a greater Peterborough. It has brought into active play many other activities designed to make the city beautiful. There is universal cleaning and tidying; trees are being planted to add to the beauty of our streets and the comfort of those who use our streets. The city is promoting extensive pavement operations, with the object, or at least the result, of bringing Peterborough in line with modern progress and modern conditions.

All this involves more or less individual initiative and action; and involves the principle of individual interests and conveniences being held subordinate to the general good. Wherever individual convenience and even, rights, conflict with the general interest of the people, they must take second place. The public must be the first consideration.

Acting upon this principle the City Council passes ordinances by-laws requiring individuals to take out permits to do certain things that have practical relation to the public interest and convenience. It is required that before a street can be opened to put in mains, or sewer, or water, or gas services, a permit must be obtained, with the stipulation that the street must be restored to its original condition. Whether this permission is got or all cases is not known, but it is known that in nearly all cases the spirit of the permit, if given, is broken. The trenches, as a rule, are improperly filled, the street is destroyed at the point involved, and the money spent by the city in putting the street in good condition is wasted; and not only that, but the city has to spend money in restoring the street to a safe condition. Hence, in part, a twenty-six mill rate.

That is not, however, the worst in regard to dealing with our streets and street trees. We have reason to be proud of them and when they become well grown their value is not computable in money, because virtually they cannot be replaced. On Stewart street, between Hunter and Simcoe, an old wooden building had to be removed to permit of the erection of a fine new residence. Instead of taking down the old building it was decided to remove the building as it stood. In order to do this it was necessary to remove—lay low, cut down—a street tree which was dusty with the growth of, perhaps, forty years. The City Engineer gave what he should not have done, permission to cut down this lordly tree, to suit private convenience—at the public expense, at the expense of the beauty of our streets. It is doubtful if the City Engineer has the power to give such permission without conferring with the City Council. If he has this power he should not have it. This is not a matter of engineering; it is a matter of taste and sentiment in which a stranger to the city cannot enter. The street trees of the city are living monuments to citizens of taste and public spirit who planted them and most of whom have passed beyond.

It is a question whether or not a building that cannot be removed bodily without doing violence to public and private property should be removed any other way than piecemeal; and many will feel that no growing tree should be sacrificed for such a purpose. The City Engineer gave permission for the perpetration of an outrage, but refused permission to [illegible] the building down Stewart street because it would be necessary to lop off some limbs of trees to permit the building to pass. This would not destroy the trees outright. Their symmetry might be impaired, but they would continue growing. Permission was given to do a vandal thing, but refused in a case where the damage would be only temporary or, perhaps, none at all, if the pruning were intelligently done.

It is desirable that the city fathers should take steps to prevent similar outrages and compel some deference to the interests of the public. The city authorities must, themselves, set the example by refraining from the destruction of great street trees without consulting the laws of taste and culture, and without consulting owners of trees, by virtue of the law which vests ownership of street trees jointly in the individual, in front of whose property they grow, and the public, the city.

As a matter of fact the individual should have full ownership of street trees; for all our street trees have been planted by individuals; the city has never been guilty of planting a single street tree. It seems to be the height of impudence and outrage for the city to destroy or permit the destruction of street trees planted and cared for by individuals, or make so-called street improvements, without regard to the improvement of the street made by private citizens. More than ever is impressed the necessity of placing our street trees and our parks under some intelligent body, like, in their sphere, the Town Trust Commissioners or Water Commissioners; some body that would know and care; take an intelligent interest in the work.

We take pride in Peterborough. We want to see it have good streets, lined, as most of them are, with beautiful trees that give the city a claim in this regard that no city in Ontario can equal. We want these trees cared for and preserved; and we have miles of new streets that should be planted with trees—suitable trees planted in a systematic and proper way. Fine public buildings, palatial shops, handsome churches and school buildings are not all that are required to make a city a desirable place to live in—to attract new-comers. We must have the city made beautiful, and with the comfort that comes from lines of shade-casting street trees, well cared for and protected from the axe of the vandal.

About the smallest cooking outfit yet designed consists of a six inch electric stove, chafing dish, tea samovar, coffee percolator and nursery equipment, all heated from a single unit.

Constant Headaches From Exhausted Nerves

Appetite Poor—Digestion Bad—Daily Grew Weaker—Lost Faith in Medicine

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. True, relief may be obtained by the use of powerful opiates but the shock to the nerves is tremendous and the result a further weakening of the system.

To really cure headache it is absolutely necessary that the exhausted nerves be restored and revitalized. This can best be accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The benefits are both certain and lasting, for by building up the system the cause of trouble is removed.

This has been proven in many thousands of cases and we cannot do better than quote here the letter from Mr. Donneral, who suffered almost constantly from headaches for two years. Doctors did their best to cure him but in vain. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food made a perfect cure because it removed the cause.

Mr. Charles Donneral, Kleinburg, Ont., writes:—"I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I have received from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was a sufferer from headaches for over two years. I took medicines from physicians and yet the headaches persisted and I was rarely free from them. About a year ago, I saw one of Dr. Chase's Medicine Books, and I thought I would try his Nerve Food. I did so, and I must confess with very little faith, but after I had taken a box, my headaches were easier, and after I had taken two boxes they left me. My appetite was always poor and my stomach was bad, and now my appetite is splendid and my digestion is excellent. I had become thin and weak from the constant headaches, but now not only have I been cured of all them, but my strength is growing once more, and I feel like a new man. I am exceedingly grateful to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for curing me. I give this testimonial with great pleasure as I hope thereby some other sufferer from headaches will be induced to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and will be cured."

BRONCHITIS SUFFERER

Takes Druggists 'Advice With Splendid Result.

If any one should know the worth of a medicine, it is the retail druggist who sells it every day in the week and is in a position to know what remedy gives the best satisfaction.

Mrs. Frank H. Uline of West Sand Lake, N.Y., says: "For years I was a great sufferer from bronchitis. Last July I had a severe attack and my friends thought I could not recover from it. Then I was advised by my druggist to try Vinol, which I did with wonderful results. My cough has left me; I have gained in weight and appetite and I am as strong as ever I was. I advise all who have bronchitis, chronic coughs, or who are run-down to try Vinol."

It is the combined action of the medicinal curative elements of the cod's liver, without oil, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron that makes Vinol so efficient in such cases.

Remember, we guarantee Vinol to do just what we say—we pay back your money if it does not.

Music & Drama

THE RED WIDOW.

"The Red Widow," at the Grand Opera House, last night, proved a bright and pleasing entertainment that was heartily enjoyed by the small audience present. The slight plot afforded some very funny situations, while the lines were decidedly amusing. Carl Sherlock as Cicero Hannibal Butts, the part originally created by Raymond Hitchcock, provided some very funny comedy, and he was assisted by a capable company. The music was generally tuneful—the waltz song "I Love You" and the lively "We Will Go, Go, All Aglow to Gogo" being the best, while Mr. Sherlock made a hit in his song "I'm a Wonderful Man in Yonkers" and "I shall Never Look at a Pretty Girl Again." The costumes were very lavish and the scenic accessories quite up to the mark. A feature was the dancing of Lilian Ludlow and Wm. Pruette, Jr.

TWENTY YEARS AGO on the First of March next, a well-known resident of this city took out at age 28 a 10 pay 20 year endowment policy for $1000, No. 43960, in the Sun Life of Canada.

The yearly premium he paid on the participating plan for 10 years only was.....$40.30

The yearly premium he would have to pay on the non-participating plan for the ten years is.....$402.25

Extra paid for profits for ten years.....$7.65

He received in cash at the end of 20 years, $1,279.25, that is, the $750.50 extra that he paid for profits yielded him $279.25, almost 400 per cent.

Or, he could draw out $736.45 in cash, which is $48.45 more than all he paid in, and receive a fully paid-up participating policy for life.

You can never obtain such results as these on the non-participating plan unless you die and die early, so that the price will not become too high.

Drill Night At The Armouries

A large concourse of citizens last night at the Armouries, and on the main streets, saw one of the largest parades of the 57th Regiment this season. The men turned out 271 strong, and made a splendid showing, before the people who lined the edges of the main floor.

The first order was, as usual, a march out down town, accompanied by both brass and bugle bands, which rendered numerous selections, much to the delight of the general public.

On the return the companies were handed over to the various company commanders, and most of them were taken out on to the parade ground, where company drill was the order for the remainder of the evening. One company was taken to the miniature shooting gallery, where a practical lesson in musketry was given by Sergeant-Instructor Dunkerley.

Much improvement can be noticed in the way in which the men carry on the respective drills. It is hoped that this efficiency will continue, and will be in accordance with the wish of the officers.

The following were the attendance in the various companies at last night's parade: 1 Lieutenant-Colonel 1 Staff Major and 8 N.C.O.'s on the staff. A Company 18, B Company 19, C Company 31, D Company 11, E Company 17, F Company 25, G Company 17, and H Company 36. Band 34, Bugle Band 21, Signallers 0, and Stretcher Bearers 4, and 11 officers making a total of 271 of all ranks.

The following were the orders issued:

Orders by Officer Commanding 57th Regiment Peterborough Rangers

1. The following extracts from divisional orders are promulgated for the information of the regiment.

CERTIFICATES OF QUALIFICATION

Order 105, 1914.

The following certificates have been granted on the conclusion of the musketry course at Peterborough on March 2nd, 1914:

Quartermaster-Sergeant I. W. Edward, Col.-Sergt. D. C. Sucee, Col. Sergt. H. Dodds, Sergt. G. Grange, Sergt. P. Foster, Sergt. L. C. Dawes, Sergt. B. Targett, Sergt. J. Elliott and Corporal H. Edwards, all of the 57th Regiment, have been awarded certificates in musketry instruction.

2. The Commanding Officer has been pleased to make the following promotions: D Company—To be Col.-Sergt., Sergt. Dawes, vice Col.-Sergt. Waterman, resigned; to be Sergt., Corpl. Targett; to be Corporals provisionally, Ptes. J. Harrell, J. Robertson, W. Thompson and M. Tobin.

D. Walker, Major, Adjutant.

The result of 21 years' service with the 57th Regiment was seen at the Armouries last evening, when Sergt. A. J. Warne was presented with a long service medal. He joined the regiment in 1893, and has since then been a member. Sergt. Warne is proud of his medal, and well might he be. It is undoubtedly the first King George medal that has been presented in Peterborough.

Arrangements are well under way for the trip which has been talked of, and it is now practically certain that the regiment will go to Berlin, that being the place chosen by the majority of the officers at a meeting held some time last week.

It is a probability that the three regiments that are represented in Peterborough, namely, the Cavalry, 3rd Dragoons, Artillery, 10th C.F.A. and Infantry, the 57th Regiment, will all be in camp at Petawawa together. The date has not been definitely fixed, but it is known that somewhere [illegible] the time chosen. It is well for the men to know that should such be the case, a good time is in store for them, for some of the more energetic N.C.O.'s are already contemplating canteen concerts, etc., for the benefit of the men. This will help to pass away the leisure hours, for a certain amount of time will be thrown on the men's hands, as the morning parade is the only one that is now expected of any regiment.

Would it not be a good plan to make use of the ranges which are at the disposal of our military men? This large if not too convenient tract of land is a most suitable place for shooting practice, and would make the men efficient in their shooting, before they went to camp, as it is there they have to qualify for their efficiency pay. There are, it is to be hoped, enough men of the local regiment interested enough in musketry to help any movement that there may be made in this direction. Some day Peterborough may boast a Bisley champion. Toronto has done it, why not Peterborough? It will be remembered that a number of men of the local regiment went to Ottawa to compete in the examinations, and it would be to the credit of the City to see this number increased.

Captain McPherson boasted of the largest turnout last night, and, according to the register, and testimony of brother officers, he has enlisted a great many recruits either.

The idea has been grasped by a number of the men of the regiment that only two companies would be allowed to go to camp. This is entirely wrong. All who can go are urged to go, as it is the hope of Colonel Clegg to present Colonel Sam Hughes with one of the strongest of city regiments. The men can co-operate in this respect.

Sergt.-Instructor Webb, of the Staff Signalling Corps, is here in order to impart instruction in the art of signalling to the members of the 57th, 3rd Dragoons, Artillery and the Cadet Corps of the Collegiate. Sergt. Webb is a man well qualified for his work, and during the five weeks he will be here his aid in matters with which he is more than familiar will be held three nights weekly, and two nights will be set aside as voluntary nights. Signalling is an interesting subject, and will doubtlessly be taken up in the right strain by a large number of men.

The Cadet Corps start their annual work to-day, and activities in that line will be pronounced. The lads take an interest in the training they receive, which will perhaps stand them in good stead in years to come. All encouragement is given them to associate with the corps. The new Ross rifles will be used this year.

In presenting the above names N.C.O.'s with the certificates they had gained, Colonel Clegg remarked how pleased he was with the manner in which they had taken up the work with the measure of success which now showed itself.

Major Horton, who was conducting a staff course at the local Armouries last winter, which was attended by the commanding officers of all units, was at the Armouries last evening.

Before the men go to camp this year, they will be issued with the new service Khaki uniforms and helmets which will be used when the regiment is in training.

According to regulations recently issued, only those non-commissioned officers who have passed the necessary examinations and obtained certificates [illegible] the rank they hold. As a result, the N.C.O.'s are being urged to qualify. While this is of great advantage to the men, it is also a great help to the regiment. This has been tried out in Toronto and found to be working exceedingly well, and as an immediate result, there are 13 of the Bodyguards passed, 5 of the 2nd Dragoons, 12 of the 9th Mississauga Horse, and 9 of the Corps of Guides.

This in itself should be an encouragement to the men of the local regiments. The 3rd Dragoons were quick to make a move, and as a result, there are now a number of the men in Toronto qualifying for the positions.

The regular recruits' parade will be held on Thursday evening next at 8 o'clock, and the recruits are urged to attend this class.

The policemen's baseball team will have another work out in the Armouries on Friday afternoon. Chief Thompson will act as umpire.

SPRING FISHING

Algonquin Park Furnishes a Great Variety

According to advertisements all fishing resorts are alike, they are the best ever, but if fishing is better anywhere than it is in Algonquin Park we do not know where it is. There is a great variety of fish in these waters and they are always hungry. The one place where you can afford to fish is where the fish are numerous, big and delicious in flavour, and that point is Algonquin Provincial (Ontario) Park, so the fishermen say. Speckled trout may be caught after May 1st, and the open season for salmon trout is from December 1st to October 31st, the following year. Drop a line to Manager, Highland Inn, Algonquin Park Station, Ont., for booklet, and all particulars, or get in touch with Grand Trunk Agents. As this territory is a popular one for Spring fishing, write early to secure accommodation.

Local Man Has Historical Document Signed By King George III. In 1814

A very interesting historical document of local interest is in the possession of Mr. James Stewart, of this City. It is the original parchment, signed by King George III., one hundred years ago to-day, commissioning Mr. Charles Stewart, father of Mr. James Stewart, as Lieutenant in the British Army.

The late Mr. Stewart left the army in 1833 on half pay and settled in Melrose, Scotland, until 1847, when he disposed of his property and removed to Edinburgh, Scotland, with his wife and family, four sons and two daughters. He died in 1856 at a good old age. His widow died in 1877. Two of his sons died when young, but the remainder of the family are alive and well. The only one who came to Canada was James, now residing at 240 McDonnel Street, City. His father's regimental coat imported, also his commission, can be seen in the window of A. M. Laidlaw, Fashion Craft, Hunter Street.

THE COMMISSION

is signed "George R.F.D." It reads—"In the name and behalf of His Majesty George the third, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, etc., to our trusty and well beloved Charles Stewart, gentleman, greeting. We do by these presents constitute and appoint you to be Lieutenant in that company, whereof—Esq. is captain in our Nineteenth or First Yorkshire North Riding Regiment of Foot commanded by our Trusty and well beloved Lieutenant General Sir Thompkins Kilgrove Turner, Knight.

You are therefore carefully and diligently to discharge the duty of Lieutenant—by exercising and well disciplining both the inferior officers and soldiers of that company, and we do hereby command them to obey you as their Lieutenant and you are to observe and follow such orders and directions from time to time as you shall receive from your Colonel—or any other your Superior officer, according to the rules and discipline of war in pursuance of the trust hereby reposed in you.

Given at our Court at Carlton House, the twenty-second day of April, 1814, in the fifty-fourth year of our reign.

Ford Day Saturday

First Annual Demonstration of Ford Automobile Owners in Peterboro'

Mr. Joseph J. Duffus, the energetic local representative of the Ford Motor Company, in view of the unprecedented recognition that has been given the Ford cars in Peterborough and district, is issuing personal circulars to all Ford car owners to take part in a general demonstration to be held on Saturday next, April 25th, in this City.

The demand for the Ford car has forced production up and the selling price down—a rather peculiar phenomenon in business. The record of the Canadian Ford Factory, from which the entire British Colonial market is supplied with Ford motors, should make it incumbent upon all interested to join in this unique event on Saturday.

Mr. Duffus states in his circular letter of invitation as follows:

"The programme will consist of the delivery of five or six carloads of Ford automobiles, and general coming together of the Ford owners in my territory.

"At 1.15 p.m., at the Oriental Hotel, we will all have luncheon, which will be in the form of an informal banquet. I realize that Saturday is a busy day, and, as a large number of business and professional men, owners of Ford cars, will be present, it will therefore last but very little longer than the ordinary hour for luncheon. I intend to have just a word or two from the manager of the Ford Motor Company, who will be present, and one or two others who will be asked to speak for about a minute. After luncheon we will have a short parade of as many as can conveniently join, and, if possible, will have a picture taken."

Mr. Duffus has been working his staff in the Duffus Garage at "high gear" all spring, and you touch a "live wire" just time whenever you come in contact with this energetic Ford salesman. Not only does he take pride in his car, but also in the efficiency of the local service which he gives to Ford owners. The turnout on Saturday will be a compliment to Mr. Duffus as well as to "The Universal Car."

Uruguay has enacted a law whereby the police are given extensive power for the treatment, inspection, quarantine, and destruction of live stock, which forms the basis for the country's chief industry.

THE BUILDING BY-LAW

After years of talk and promises of action the council proposes to deal with the building by-law without gloves and within two weeks. The regulation requiring a fourteen-inch wall for building within the fire limits has been the subject of numerous discussions. Ald. Johnston has on several occasions urged that the limits be extended or that the by-law be amended to bring it up to the present demands of the City.

Ald. Langford precipitated something like a decision last night when he stated that Mr. Taylor, who has commenced the excavation for a house on Murray Street, west of the Baptist Church, had asked permission to use a nine-inch wall. Another house is expected to be built alongside this one.

Ald. Duncan stated that City Engineer Parsons, who was recently appointed Building Inspector, was preparing an amendment to the by-law, which would be submitted to the council in the near future. It was suggested that some of the local contractors be called into consultation for their opinions regarding the thickness of walls and other building questions.

Ald. Green—The Engineer will hardly recommend nine-inch walls in the heart of the City.

Ald. Duncan—Mr. J. J. Turner built a house on Water Street, only a block away from the Taylor lot, and asked for permission to build a nine-inch wall, but his request was refused.

Ald. Johnston pointed out that a house was being erected on Hunter Street, just west of Aylmer, and its walls were only nine-inch. The building is outside the fire limits, but it is really in the very centre of the City. The limits should be extended so that the by-law would have some sense to it. It is too bad that people wanting to build a home have to come here for special privileges. A good nine-inch wall is sufficient for most residences within the limits.

Ald. Duncan—They are going to add to the C.P.R. freight sheds, and it is high time we extended the limits.

Ald. Green—Let us ask the City Engineer to give the matter his best thought and present the matter to the council within two weeks.

THREE DRUNKS AND AN ASSAULT CASE

Were the Cases Dealt With by Magistrate Dumble at Police Court This Morning

A local man was charged with being drunk in a public place last evening, before Magistrate Dumble, at the Police Court this morning. He pleaded guilty, but as this was his first offence, he was allowed to go.

A Lakefield man was also being charged with being found drunk.

"Found drunk?" queried the prisoner.

"Yes," said the court; "drunk and found."

He was fined $2.

David Wheeler, who caimed he hailed from Pontypool, also faced a drunken charge, and pleaded guilty. He also was allowed to go as this was his first appearance.

He charged another man with assaulting him and occasioning him actual bodily harm.

Wheeler was placed in the box, and stated that he received two kicks in the ribs. He could not tell whether he made any provocation or not.

"Too drunk to know," said the Court. The defendant was discharged.

LETTER OF APPRECIATION

The Rev. W. Price, Rector of St. George's Church, received the following letter to-day from the Sons of England Society:

Dear Mr. Price,—On behalf of the members of the Lansdowne Lodge, Sons of England, I wish to thank you for your invitation to join in the St. George's Day service, which was held last night. We all appreciated the service and we would ask you to convey to Dr. Bidwell, Lord Bishop of Kingston, our appreciation of his excellent address.

Also to the combined choirs of St. John's and St. George's, we wish you to convey our thanks for their beautiful music. We can assure you that the Sons of England wish you and your Church every success.

W. G. Shiner,
Assistant Secretary.

C. P. R. BEAR RAID DROVE THE PRICE BELOW 194 TO-DAY

A C.P.R. bear raid on the New York market to-day with the evident intention of taking advantage of the first activities in the newest phase of Mexico's troubles, gave the Canadian stock a low of 194 7-8 during the day. The decline caught many traders who bought at recent levels expecting that the worst had passed. To-day's selling came in bunches, but after the turn from the low C.P.R. regained much of the ground, and closed fairly strong. It appeared the weakness was merely temporary.

Mexican Petroleum in spite of the war news, went up to 64, but fell off a trifle at the close. This stock has been holding up fairly well, although on the whole board it might have been the first selected for a reverse. Steel held its ground to-day, and in fact with the exception of C.P.R., there was a feature of firmness in the day's proceedings.

MR. EDWARD WEBB IN NICHOLLS' HOSPITAL

Mr. Edward Webb, one of the City's oldest residents, was removed to the Nicholls Hospital yesterday, and is reported to have suffered a stroke, which may prove fatal. His son, Edward, of Orillia, was called to Peterborough to-day. Mr. Webb was found prostrate on the floor of his residence, Albert Street, by a neighbour.

CITY ENGINEER STOPS REMOVAL OF A HOUSE

Would Have Necessitated the Injuring of Trees on Stewart Street —Long Trip Proposed From Hunter Street to a Lot on Romaine Street.

COUNCIL ENDORSES ACTION

In opposing the removal of a house from above Simcoe street on Stewart to a lot on Romaine street, Engineer Parsons has the strongest support of the Council. Alderman Duncan reported the particulars of the case last night and it was an indignant group of aldermen who listened to what they termed a high-handed action.

The house on the west side of Stewart street is the second south of Hunter street, and is said to be one of the oldest dwellings in the city. The lot was purchased by Dr. Amys, who is preparing to erect a house, and the old building was sold to a Mr. Gibb, of Toronto, who has been represented by Mr. Andrew Brown. The preparations for the moving of the house were in charge of Mr. Huffman, who is engaged in that business.

Cut Down a Tree.

The first act was to cut down a tree in order to clear a passage to enable the house to be drawn from the lot to the street. Alderman Duncan stated that at 5 o'clock on Tuesday no permit had been taken out for the work and the City Engineer had not even been informed that it was about to be undertaken.

Would Damage Trees.

"The Engineer and I," said Alderman Duncan, "went out there and found that the house would fill the street from curb to curb. If it were moved along the road it would damage many trees, wires would have to be raised, and on account of the beauty of the trees on this street Engineer Parsons forbade the removal of the house. I hope this Council will back him up, and I make this explanation in order that if the case is mentioned to you the circumstances will be familiar to you. They wanted to move that house all the way to Romaine street, and the only fee would be a charge of $1.00 a day.

Mayor Stands Firm.

Mayor Buller stated that Mr. Brown had seen him in regard to the matter, but His Worship refused to interfere with Mr. Parsons.

"I told him there must be a good reason or Mr. Parsons would not have held up the work. I refuse to step and take any responsibility when we are paying a man to look after this work. He has been using good judgment, and his word goes for me. What is the opinion of the Council?"

Alderman Johnston—It is up to the Engineer as far as I am concerned.

The other Aldermen took the same attitude.

To Build the House.

Alderman Duncan said he thought it would be cheaper for the city to buy the old house and tear it down rather than permit its removal. Not that he sanctioned buying it, but just to give an idea of its condition.

Mr. Huffman is not keen on moving the house, it is understood, having stated that the injury to the trees would be held against him when he applied for permission to move other houses.

Move It to Sidewalk.

The Council decided to permit the moving of the house to the sidewalk line in order that Dr. Amys may proceed with the erection of his new house. The old dwelling will be allowed out for a limited time.

SELF-DENIAL WEEK OBSERVED BY MEMBERS OF SALVTATION ARMY

Self-Denial Week is being observed by the Salvation Army in Canada this week, and it has just been concluded in Britain. This week, which is an effort to secure funds for the carrying of the Gospel to the uttermost ends of the earth, is observed by branches of the Army all over the world.

The last issue of the "War Cry" contains some interesting incidents which prove the value of the Self-Denial effort not only to the Salvation Army and its members, but to others who come within the sweet influence of the workers.

In one case two women cadets were collecting for the Self-Denial Fund, they came across a man and his wife fighting. With characteristic courage and tact they succeeded in stopping the quarrel and establishing amicable relations between husband and wife once more.

On another day, when calling at a large house they found that the mistress was a slave to intoxicants, and were instrumental in having her determine to give up the habit.

It is interesting to note, too, that Mrs. Grant Brown is abandoning a leading position in the society of that city to enter upon a crusade under the auspices of the Salvation Army for the rescue of fallen and unfortunate women. Mrs. Richard Aldrich, the owner of a large mansion in New York, is handing it over to the Salvation Army for use during her absence, as a holiday home for slum mothers and children.

The local branch of the Army under Adjutant McElhiney is forging ahead and indications are that this will be a successful Self-Denial week in Peterborough.

What Has Become of Hell?

An Article Which the Examiner Has Been Requested to Publish—It Deals With the Much Talked of Belief That After Death There is a Second Chance For the Sons of Men. Readers Concerned in the Question Will Find Points of Interest in the Following:

The Examiner has been requested to print the following article from the "Gospel Trumpet," which appears in its columns of April 2nd. The Gospel Trumpet is non-denominational.

It is said of Henry Ward Beecher, the most eminent pulpit orator of his day, that he "thumped the bottom out of hell," but the Word says it is a "bottomless pit."

At the present time Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle, has tried very hard to master himself fameless by "putting out hell fire; annihilating the devil, and doing away with the future punishment which Jesus said would come upon those who disobey God. This modern preacher says, "the whole hell is the tomb" and further that there will be no hell fire for any hell that will continue life in the future world, and that there is no such thing as eternal punishment. But Jesus said in referring to the state of the wicked (Luke 16: 19-26), that there was a wicked man who died "and in hell he lift up his eyes." He was in torment, he cried for mercy, for water to cool his tongue. He said, "I am tormented in this flame." He was told that there was an impassable gulf between him and the glory world. He begged that his brethren who were yet living might be warned "lest they also come into this place of torment."

But Jesus, in referring to hell and the future punishment of the wicked, said, "Then shall he say unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels (Matt. 25: 41).

"Fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell" (Matt. 10: 28).

"To be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched," (Mark 9: 43).

"To be cast into hell fire; where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched" (Mark 9: 47, 48).

"And these shall go away into everlasting punishment" (Matt. 25: 46).

"And shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth" (Matt. 24: 51).

"And shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth" (Matt. 13: 42).

"How can ye escape the damnation of hell?" (Matt. 23: 33).

"Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation" (John 5: 28, 29).

"And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire" (Rev. 20: 15).

"And he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone" (Rev. 14: 10).

"Into a lake of burning fire with brimstone" (Rev. 19: 20).

"And the devil, that deceived them, was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone" (Rev. 20: 10).

Many other quotations could be given from the New Testament concerning the punishment of the wicked after death.

On July 9th, 1912, the International Bible Students, Association, consisting of about 4,000 delegates, an association for propagating Russell's teachings, convened for the purpose of doing away with hell and its torment. Among the resolutions set forth and acted upon were the following:

"We now unreservedly repudiate as thoroughly unscriptural the teaching of a place, state or condition of a literal lake of fire and brimstone for the torment of the wicked; and, further, we believe from many personal testimonials that the vast majority of all Protestant denominations have privately repudiated the hell-fire theory, but have for supposedly good reasons hesitated fully to inform their congregations; and, further we believe on this account thousands, and, perhaps, tens of thousands, are being driven into scepticism or infidelity."

It is reported by Russell's following that this declaration of that association unanimously sanctioned the resolution and took it for granted that such an action settled the matter, henceforth and forever. But with very laudable and plain resolutions concerning the plain teachings of the Word of God, and the solid truths of the Word stand unshaken.

Pastor Russell may be able to quiet the fears of sinful men, by false doctrines, and by so doing he has been enabled to have the support and draw thousands and even millions of dollars from the fibres of wealth of those whose consciences have been eased, and thereby he has been enabled to send forth thousands of tons of his soul-destroying literature by way of books, tracts, and papers, and to pay the daily newspapers and periodicals throughout the land to publish his sermons and teachings. Because of his frequent reference to what the Greek or Hebrew says in regard to certain passages of Scripture, many people are led to believe that he is well educated in these languages, and many take it for granted that his explanations are so because of his Greek and Hebrew quotations, considering that a man so well versed in these languages ought to know what he is talking about. There is a pamphlet entitled, "More About Russell," which contains a copy of the court records where Russell was brought to trial in Canada. In the records quoted by this booklet, it is shown that Russell was asked upon oath if he were a Greek or Hebrew scholar, and he replied in the affirmative. He was handed a Greek Testament and asked to read it, but had to admit before the Court that he could not read the Greek New Testament.

There is also another pamphlet published entitled, "All About Russell." These two pamphlets bring out many things concerning his life and teachings that we can not publish here. His works on "Millennial Dawn," "Divine Plan of Ages," and many other books and tracts are sold under the name of "Bible and Tract Society," "International Bible Students' Association," and several other names, in order to teach the people who would not purchase such literature if they knew it were issued from the pen of Pastor Russell.

Almost invariably people who accept the teaching of Pastor Russell or deny the existence of hell and hell fire, also oppose and reject holiness and the doctrine of living free from sin in this life. In like manner most of these disbelieve in divine healing and the miraculous manifestations of the power of God as mentioned in both the New and Old Testaments. In fact, few, if any of them, know anything about what it is to by experience to have a change of heart, or in other words, to be born again, as Jesus instructed Nicodemus. Such people are to be pitied, as the time is coming when they will have to suffer the consequences of following the advice and teachings of false teachers.

May God help people to become awakened before too late, and also to take warning and flee the wrath to come.

RUSSELL'S NO-HELL DOCTRINE.

Some time ago a correspondent of the Salem Weekly News published the following statement concerning the action of the International Association of Bible Students:

"Certainly the world does move, not only along inventive, commercial and industrial, but in political, social and religious world as well. The exchange of views in woman's clubs, civic and other organizations contribute to the awakening and advancement along these lines. To my mind, we have no greater evidence of intellectual advancement in the religious world of recent years, than the resolution passed at the convention of the International Association of Bible Students, many of them ministers, held at Washington, D.C., where four thousand delegates voted no hell, no eternal punishment, thus liberating God from such gross injustice as has been charged to Him. The convention asked all ministers of the United States and Canada to put themselves on record as to their belief in future punishment. Of the many who have reported, so far as I have seen, but one had the courage to say he still believed in hell for the punishment of the disobedient. People are gradually dropping their superstition."

This was answered by Geo. J. McClellan, of Iowa:

THE REPLY.

One would think from a casual reading of the statements above that the old orthodox views and the plain statements of God's unchangeable Word, had been consigned to the scrap-heap of oblivion, and that the whole wide world had taken a stand aside towards that "no hell and punishment" theory," and that only one lone, insignificant, minister had the littleness of mind to stand up and say that he "still believed in hell for the punishment of the disobedient." Right here we want to place ourselves on record, we step over by the side of that one lone preacher and by the grace of God say to him. "Brother, here's another preacher just like you. I want to stand by your side, and if all the balance of the ministers of Jesus Christ be backsliddden and gone over to Russellism and Millennial Dawnism, then by God's help you and I will stand together against the verdict of the "four thousand Bible students" (?) who met in Washington, D.C.

To begin with, one is led to believe that the "four thousand" ministers and students were representatives from about all the Christian denominations in the world, inasmuch as the name "International Association of Bible Students" is used, when in fact they were, if we mistake not, all followers of Pastor Russell, the head of Millennial Dawnism, and possibly some Universalists, and the questions raised are a part of their tenets, and is promulgated by Russell and his cult, so of course it is nothing remarkable, neither is it a sign of intellectual advancement in the religious world, neither does it prove that the Christian denominations all over the world have taken a sudden landslide towards no-hellism, and it does not prove that that portion of God's Word which speaks in no uncertain sound in regard to the positive fact of Satan, of hell, and of future punishment has been proved to be only figurative, hence not to be feared.

We assume that these "four thousand Bible students were "Millennial Dawnists" or "Russellites," because they were to meet in Washington, D. C., and under the name, "Bible Students," they were flooding the whole land with their misleading and damnable literature and publications, at very low prices, and these publications are sold to innocent and uninformed Christian people under the name of real helpful Christian literature; they are misleading, from the fact they do not come out into the open as other denominations do with their denominational name attached to their publications, in order that the reader may know what to expect, but using the general term Christian literature for Bible students,' palm off their false and misleading literature upon an unsuspecting public, thereby undermining the faith in Christian lives.

If these "four thousand students" did decide that there was "no hell, no eternal punishment," does that alter the facts in the case, or change the truth? No, not in the least. Truth can not be changed by man's opinion. God's eternal Word is true and remains unchanged in spite of the efforts of modern critics to destroy its plain statements, to change its meaning in order that they may have an easy way, that they may not be able to live a life after the ways of the world, in the lusts of the flesh, in fact, go on in the ways of sin and then at the end expect this great Saviour of ours to save in a glorious heaven, our miserable, sin-laden, unrepentant souls. No, resolutions do not change truth. Here is a positive statement (Psa. 9: 17), "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." If the Bible means anything at all, it means every word it says. If every word of this Book is not true, there is not one word of it true, and the same God and the same Bible that tells us of heaven, that beautiful place, where people go who obey God, also tells us of an awful hell where people who do not obey Him, will be damned forever.

The same word that is used to describe the perpetuity of heaven is used to describe the longevity of hell. Hell will last as long as God lasts, and will be real just as long as God is real. Here are the words of Jesus Christ (Matt. 25: 46), "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment; but the righteous into life eternal." Do the words of Jesus Christ settle the question as to everlasting punishment? But some say that everlasting does not mean as long as eternity. Here are seven verses having this word, and whatever its length may be in one case, such is it in all. Gen. 21: 33, God is everlasting. Isa. 9: 6, The Father is everlasting. Jer. 31: 3, Love is everlasting. John. 3: 16, Life is everlasting. Matt. 25: 46, Punishment is everlasting. Matt. 18: 8, Fire is everlasting. Isa. 33: 14, Burnings are everlasting. The word "everlasting" occurs seventy-one times in the New Testament, and means, "without end, perpetual, eternal, endless, never ceasing."

If there is no hell and no future punishment as some people would have us believe, then why did Jesus come and suffer and die for us? What was His mission? Did He not come to redeem us?

I am not championing the many irrational utterances of many teachers in the different orthodox organizations, and their construction and interpretation upon hell and future punishment, but I do stand for the plain statements of God's Word upon the subject.

It is true that in our civic and social life with their many helpful organizations, we are making advancement, but so far as the divine and eternal plan is concerned, Man's puny, finite mind can never better the unchangeable plan that a divine, all-wise and infinite Mind has thought out and planned for us, neither can all of his theories explain away any portion of the Word merely to suit man's thought, his conveniences and desires.

Who wants to do away with hell and future punishment anyway, and for what purpose? Not the true children of God, for they are not afraid of hell nor future punishment, for the acceptance of Jesus Christ has blotted out the record of sin against them and they are saved through the merits of Christ's atonement. It is only those who will not pay the price, only those who desire to keep on in sin, those who desire to fulfill to the full the lusts and passions of the flesh, it is only those who desire to live a devil's life of sin here and then expect God at the last hour to save their miserable, sinful souls, who want to do away with hell and punishment.

If these "four thousand students and ministers," if all Millennial Dawnists or Russellites and their twin brothers, the Universalists, and all of the balance of like belief do not believe in hell and future punishment, then I want to ask in all candour and challenge as answer, What are they out teaching and preaching for? Why those many ministers, schools, colleges, their subscription secretaries, etc.? Why publish the Word at all? If there is no Hell, no hell, no future punishment, and if all will be saved, why put forth all this great and mighty effort?

It reminds us of the Universalist preacher who was preaching in a certain neighborhood; he was a man of fine ability, a good speaker, and many people came to hear him. At the close of his meetings, he said, "Now if you desire, I would like to come each Sabbath evening and preach for you, and I would like a response from the audience." But no one responded and finally he said, "Now if any one has any objection to my coming I ask them to speak." After a while an aged Quaker arose and said, "Friend, I have been listening to thee, and I thought I would say nothing, but thee has insisted on good one speaking. We don't want thee, because if thy theory is correct we have no need of preaching, for every one will be saved, so let us go on in sin, no matter how deep. And if thy theory is not correct we don't want thee, because it would be a lie and we don't want thee to preach lies to us."

Listen at the prophetic words of General Booth, of the Salvation Army, and I pray God to ring them into every ear: "I am of the opinion that the chief danger which confronts the coming century will be religion without the Holy Ghost, Christianity without Christ, forgiveness without repentance, salvation without regeneration, politics without God, and heaven without hell."

Shame upon that minister who would dare to stand behind the sacred desk and endeavour to speak as the oracle of God, and in the face of the plain statements of God's Word which positively declares that there is a hell to shun, and a heaven to gain, and then teach there is no hell and no future punishment!

In closing, permit me to declare that hell was not made for man, but for the "devil and his angels," and that God does not send man to hell, but if man goes to hell, he will be there because he chooses hell, for God has done, God is doing, and God will yet do all things possible to keep man out of hell. But there is one thing God will not do, and that is to save man against his sovereign will. Neither will God permit an unrepentant sinner to go to heaven, for Jesus said, "I tell you, nay; but except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish."

A Mad Rooster

A Lady Attacked on Stewart Street by the Infuriated Bird

Yesterday afternoon, while a lady was walking quietly along the west side of Stewart Street, near the corner of Simcoe, she was suddenly attacked by a ferocious rooster. The mad brute took a flying leap at her head and jumped high enough to strike her a blow on the shoulder, which she says, staggered her, as the bird was a heavy, powerful animal. After she got clear of the brute the maddened beast, with its feathers bristling with anger, made a second [illegible] at her and fell heavily at her feet. She is certain that if it had [illegible] child that was attacked the brute must have knocked it down and pecked its eyes out. The lady does not know who the owner is, but was told as she proceeded along the street that it must belong to a brood of fowl that has caused great annoyance to owners of lawns and others along this block and that they ought not to be allowed to run at large.

A DIRECT AND MOST EFFECTIVE TREATMENT
For Cold in the Head and Catarrh

Some internal remedies, such as Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, undoubtedly help a great deal in checking a cold in the head. But you get the quickest action from Fossal Balm.

This is applied directly and conveniently through the new nozzle-shaped end of the collapsible tube in which it is put up. This little nozzle reaches well up into the nostril, and a gentle squeeze on the tube discharges enough of the Fossal Balm to spread over the membrane lining the nostril passages, kill the germs of the cold or catarrh, soothe the smarting inflammation, make breathing through the nostrils free and easy, and check the cold or relieve the catarrh at once.

The fact that this new means of applying the Fossal Balm is so handy, and puts it right up where it is needed, adds much to the value of this splendid remedy.

"BREECHES" BIBLE IS REPORTED

Much has been seen in these columns of late regarding old and rare Bibles. The oldest which has yet been reported to the 'Examiner is that owned by Dr. W. E. Ball of Ottawa, father-in-law of Mr. H. E. Parsons, City Engineer. This is, perhaps the oldest and most rare specimen that will be unearthed in this district. It is known as the "Breeches" Bible. How that name was given is shown as follows: In Genesis, 3rd chapter and the 7th verse, is quoted "And the eyes of them both were opened and they knew that they were naked, and they sewed fig leaves together and made themselves aprons." Before the revised version was completed, the latter part of that verse ran "And made themselves breeches," and it is from that peculiar phrase the name of that issue derived their name. They are a very rare specimens and are highly prized by [illegible] old Bibles. This particular Bible was printed by Robert Barker, printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty, and dated 1608.

It has been in the possession of the Ball family for over three hundred years and is highly treasured.

It may be incidentally mentioned that the revised version was not completed until 1611.

Another curiosity owned by Dr. Ball is a Church of England prayer-book, published during the reign of King Edward VI., and, therefore, the book must have been published between the years of 1547 and 1553. The capital letters and decorations on its pages are all illuminated by hand, which must have meant a great deal of work. This volume is also highly prized by the owners.

BIG AGRICULTURAL LAND OPENING

TWELVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY TRACTS of five and ten acres each to be granted to prospective settlers in throwing open, Twenty Thousand Acres of Rich, Southern Georgia Land, which is admirably adapted to the growing of celery, sweet and Irish potatoes, canteloupes, water melons, corn, oats, cotton, hay—in fact, all staple crops grown in this fertile section, as well as a large variety of semi-tropical fruits, and the famous immensely profitable pecan-shell pecans.

Providing you are eligible under the classifications prescribed by us, you are now offered an excellent opportunity to break away from the drudgery and toil of a small wage, or working for the benefit of landlords, and go back to a land of plenty, to which, if granted, you will hold a warranty deed and abstract.

The best country on earth is the earth itself, and land is the basis of all wealth. Owners of productive lands are benefiting by the increasing high cost of living, while others are suffering from it.

An Opportunity to Secure Rich Productive Land Without Capital

You will not be required to leave your present surroundings now. All we ask of those to whom we grant tracts is that they plant, or arrange to have planted, 6 acres of one of the above-mentioned products within three years, after which we will have it operated (harvested and replanted) for grantees, in consideration of 40 per cent. of the net profits derived from the sale of the crops, thereby allowing such time as they determine just what the yield of their acres amounts to. Consider what this may mean as a source of income, when statistics show that the yield of acres of celery amounted to $1,362.45, and that one acre of well-cared-for paper shell pecans, in full bearing, should not its owner as high as $600.00 per year. We are of the opinion that after it is proven by actual results obtained in operating the land that they will need no further urging, and waste no time in locating in this land of plenty. We also reserve grantees to occupy the land within ten years, or sell it to some one who will occupy it; otherwise it reverts back to the grantor.

The land included in this opening is located [illegible] and adjoining the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, about twenty-five miles west of Brunswick, a thriving city of fifteen thousand, having direct steamship service to New York and Boston, and excellent railroad transportation facilities to all points. The average temperature for six months of the year, from April to October, is 77 degrees; the climate is most healthful, delightful, and invigorating, and there is an ample rainfall of 51 inches per year.

OUR AIM IS FOR MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL RESULTS

As we are extremely desirous of having settlers locate on this property, and assist in its development, and thereby greatly increase the value of surrounding and intervening property, which we will hold, and to increase the traffic along the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, and thus facilitate the service, we feel warranted in granting these tracts to those who register with us. We also have in mind business and residence plots which we will offer for sale after the opening, but which will not be included in it. We have "money-making afterward" considerations in this liberal-minded opening, similar to those of the Northern Pacific and other railroads when they granted their lands, and we expect to benefit thereby, as well as the ones who will receive the tracts.

We have also planned to develop what is designed to be the best equipped, most up-to-date, scientific, commercial farm and orchard in existence. It will consist of six thousand acres, and will be included in this opening. All who register and receive tracts will get the benefit of the experiments and scientific methods in vogue thereon. While we are arranging to prevent over-registration, we will accept many disappointments, such as occurred in other land openings conducted by the United States Government and railroads, by granting those who register in excess of the number of tracts to be granted, an interest in the commercial farm, and orchard enterprise, in the hope that they may later locate in one of our town sites.

Examination of the land will shortly be permitted, and the opening will be held at Brownsboro, Wayne County, Georgia, one of the stations of the A. B. & A. Railroad, which is located on this property, and will occur as soon after the closing of registrations as arrangements can be made.

The presence of those registered will not be necessary at Brownsboro on the opening day, unless they wish to attend, for there will be no favouritism shown anyone. It will be conducted by a committee selected for the purpose, and those registered will be notified of what they have been granted, as soon as possible.

With the ever-increasing population of this country there is no corresponding increase in the area of land, and naturally as the population increases and ousts the land in pursuit of health, happiness and independence, it will continue to be hardly to secure.

The prosperous and contented class in Europe to-day are the descendants of those who secured land there when it was plentiful, while the descendants of those who obtained city land are now the peasants and slaves. You class renters that this may be your lucky chance to secure land in this country without a large outlay of capital, so it should not be necessary to urge you to act at once by forwarding us the application for registration attached to this announcement.

Former Washington Player Out Petes Had A Marathon Game

Conway, a Hard-hitting Outfielder, May Be Persuaded to Sign a Peterboro' Contract--Eleven Innings Game Yesterday Resulted in a 9-9 Tie and Fielders Had Their Work Cut Out--Byrne and Price Continue to Star.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio., April 21.—With the weather bright but cold, the Petes put in a very profitable afternoon at Wright Park to-day, and the Canadian Leaguers are beginning to round into shape. They have been hard at it every day since the opening, and although the weather conditions have not been of the best, the Blountmen have not lost any time. What is needed now is a spell of hot weather to loosen up the stiffened muscles in the crowd, and take the kinks out of the sore arms. A rise in the temperature would be appreciated by manager and players alike.

A MARATHON GAME.

To-day Manager Blount sent his crew over a Marathon game of eleven innings, the workout battle giving twenty-four players, including ten battery candidates to get into action. The only non-combatants among the regulars to-day were Infielder Schrage who has a sore arm, and Outfielder Swartz, who arrived at noon and was not called on for strenuous efforts to-day.

Two picked teams played each other to a stand still, the score at the end of eleven innings being nine all. The teams lined up as follows:

Schaefer p, Belting p, Martin p, M. Miller c, Ryberg c, O'Hearn 1b, G. Miller 2b, Rockford ss, Fox 3b, McClure, Blount, Conway, outfield.

Tirrell p, Tracey p, Cresswell p, Chapdelaine c, Kelly c, Flanagan 1b, King 2b, Price ss, Byrne 3b, sw, Dawson, Gaffney, outfield.

It was one lively hitting session. None of the pitchers attempted to curve a ball, and the batters showed an inclination to hammer the hide off the ball, relishing the straight ones the box artists shot across. The result was the fielders chased grounders and flies until their tongues hung out. It was practice of the most valuable kind, however, giving the batters a chance to find their eye, while it provided plenty of fielding practice. The game sparkled with pretty fielding plays, the players showing to good advantage in this department of the game.

BYRNE AND PIRCE STAR.

Once again the work of Price and Byrne featured the practice. The third-baseman is playing better ball than ever. As was noticed last season he is at his best when he has opposition, and with a flock of infielders looking for his berth, the Philadelphia boy is performing sensationally at the difficult corner. Eddie Price has so far given a fine account of himself in the short-field. He has been fielding his position in grand style and may prove a capable substitute for Harry Brant. It is too early to make any definite predictions, but it would not cause much surprise if this pair was found patrolling the third-base side of the Petes' infield when the Blountmen face the barrier at Erie two weeks from Thursday. This is, of course, only a guess—Manager Blount is decidedly reticent in discussing his probable line-up, and is evidently going to give his team more than the once over before he makes his final choice.

A NEW OUTFIELDER.

A feature of the game to-day was the work of Outfielder Conway, a player who has seen service with Youngstown in the Ohio and Pennsylvania League, and also with Washington in the American. Conway is a big fellow, who can field and hit, and although to-day was his first time out he looked mighty good from the side.. He is living here now and the Petes may be able to persuade him to sign a contract.

The Petes still have a two weeks' training grind before them before they go into action, and it is safe to say that the squad has already had more hard work in the last six days than the Peterborough club had in either of its previous spring training periods. Manager Blount is making them all work and is setting the pace himself. Another week, especially with favourable weather should see the squad in good physical condition and the last week can be devoted to perfecting team play. The Blountmen are looking forward with pleasure to the week-end games this week as a pleasant break in the daily routine. On Saturday they will clash with the Girard Independents, a strong semi-professional club, and on Sunday they will be given a battle royal when they tackle the Pittsburg Independents, a team composed of former college players and said to be a rattling strong club.

A College Product.

Manager Blount went on a miniature scouting trip on Saturday and looked over a college game. The result of his visit is that he he secured the promise of a star college twirler to join Peterborough at the close of the school term. The youngster fanned eleven men in Saturday's game and looked very good to the Petes' leader.

The soreness and stiffness of the first few days has begun to disappear, although a number of the players are still complaining. Some warm weather would be a decided boon. An accident to the plumbing in the dressing-room at Wright Park has left the Blountmen temporarily without hot water, but the matter is being remedied at once.

Jim Thorpe—One of the most-talked-of baseball players in the game. He has won great honours as an all-round athlete, and a couple of years ago was taken on with the New York Giants. After making the round-the-world trip with that team he has been turned over to the Toronto International League team for training. He will be one of the biggest drawing-cards the team has ever had. He is a full-blooded Indian Chief.

The club will have an increased membership, and it is hoped that the work of the officers will be carried out successfully. Enthusiasm was the predominant feature at last night's meeting, which speaks well for the progress the club will make.

Opening Of Central League

Special to The Examiner:

FORT WAYNE, Ind., April 22.—The Central Baseball League started its twelfth season to-day, with Springfield playing at Dayton, Terre Haute at Evansville and the Champion Grand Rapids team in this city. Since the close of last season steps have been taken to strengthen the weaker clubs and the owners and managers in all the cities of the circuit are optimistic over the chances of winning the pennant. The schedule will close September 7.

BOXING

Kid Williams and Kid Herman have been matched to box in New Orleans on May 11.

Jim Johnson, the New York negro heavyweight, has been promised another match with Champion Jack Johnson.

On his return to Boston rom the South Sam Loggford will sail for Europe to make another try for a mues with Jack Johnson.

Louis De Porthieu, whom Frank Erne developed into the champion featherweight of France, has been signed by Snowy Baker to accompany George Carpentier to Australia.

Eddie Cicotte—Pitcher for the Chicago White Sox, who last season had an average second only to that of the famous Walter Johnson.

JOE GANS THE "OLD MASTER"

Gans! What does the name mean to you? To those of us who knew the "Old Master" at his best, it recalls a champion who had everything; a fighter who was clever to a superlative degree; who could hit like a miniature Fitzsimmons; who had the endurance characteristic of the coloured race; who had as great a fighting head as any man the ring has known.

Perhaps you have seen the present titleholder, Willie Ritchie, in action. If not (or if so), and you have the good fortune to be in California on April 17, blow into the Ritchie-Murphy fracas, imagine Ritchie of Ethiopian hue, and you will get a fair idea of Joe Gans in his prime.

Gans had many a hard battle. He met them all at a time when great lightweights were in abundance. George McFadden beat him in a terrific struggle. His three battles with Nelson were notable in the history of boxing. And the first of these, that 42-round fight at Goldfield, Nev., in 1906, was undoubtedly the hardest battle of the "Old Master's" great and chequered career.

Gans' gameness has often been questioned. What grounds there are for the supposition that he lacked heart, we do not propose to discuss here. But this much we will say in defence of Joe, there was never a man faced a discouraging situation more gamely than the great coloured champion faced the 42 rounds of milling against a man who seemed inhuman—who could, and did, take as hard a beating as was ever handed out, and came tearing in incessantly for more.

Gans won that day on a foul. He was a mighty lucky champion to get the decision—and he knew it! George Siler's verdict has often been questioned, but it stands. Anyway, Nelson beat Gans decisively twice afterward, so why rehash an old story

The man who really got the battle for Goldfield was not Tex Rickard, whose name is always linked with it, but Graham Rice, who has been much in the limelight of late years, due to connection with Wall Street mining stock scandals. Rice was interested in publicity for Goldfield, and saw that he could put the town on the front page of the newspapers of the country by offering a sensational purse for a fight between Nelson and Gans. He broached his scheme to Rickard and others, and the $30,000 purse was the result

Coloured champions are never popular. Gans, champion lightweight of the world, was forced to let Nelson, the contender, dictate the terms of the battle. All Bat asked was $20,000, win, lose, or draw, and all Billy Nolan demanded was that Gans weigh 133 ringside in fighting togs.

Joe wore himself out making the weight. He weighed in three times on the day of the fight. At ringside he did Nolan's 133 in fighting togs. He looked thin and drawn.

As Gans' record was not without its shady side, Goldfield, having put up some $30,000 perfectly good simoleons, took no chances on any crooked work. The ringside bristled with cannon. Joe fought on the level all along.

From the start the battle was all Gans. Bat never stopped tearing in, but the champion beat him unmercifully. After the tenth round one side of Nelson's face looked like a balloon.

As usual, Bat was rough. He butted Gans with his head time and again. Once he kicked him in the shins, and Joe, getting into the spirit of the occasion, kicked him back. The blow that lost for Nelson may or may not have been a foul, but there were at least ten times during the fight that Siler could have disqualified him for butting — and didn't!

When 25 rounds went by and he failed to stop the Dane, Gans wore a worried look. The crowd couldn't understand it either. Here was a man being beaten to a pulp, and yet coming tearing in round after round.

In the 42nd round Nelson was a terrible sight, but was fighting hard Jim Coffroth got up to get a drink. As he did so Nelson swung. "There goes Gans!" shouted Billy Roche a him. This champion was down writing aparently in agony on the canvas. Siler, the referee, started the count, stopped, waved Nelson aside, and declared Gans the winner on a foul.

There was a pool of blood in the ring where he lay. Many people believe that Joe had a hemorrhage in the ring from making the weight. At any rate, Billy Nolan's 133 ringside sounded the death-knell of his fighting career. He was never "the old master" afterward.

BASEBALL

Miller, Wilson, Butler and Dolan all former Pirates, are delivering in great style for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Frank Chance has several likely looking youngsters who may be able to boost the Yankees a notch or two

Tom Daly, the boy who showed the King of England how to break up a game with a hit, is still denting the fence for the White Sox.

Because they defeated several big league teams this spring the Columbus team is being touted as a winner in the American Association race.

If the Robinson Robins and the Bradley Tiptops continue to pastime so brilliantly the Brooklyn fans will have the time of their lives this season.

Some accounts say the Baltimore fans have given the Orioles the frosty shoulder since the Federal League Terrapins came to town.

Manager Clark Griffith of the Senators is sticking close to the dugout these days, leaving Dutch Schaefer and Nick Altrock to do the coaching.

Boston fans are already proclaiming young Scott a wonder. The St. Paul rookie is filling Heine Wagner's place at short and seems to be making good.

With Herr Hoblitzell, Herr Niehoff Herr Herzog, Herr Groh und Herr Berghammer, Cincinnati has the classiest pretzel infieldings yet is.

The Chicago Cubs and Boston Braves appear to be weak in the pitching department. With a reliable finger added to each staff O'Day and Stallings would be able to command attention.

Another pitching marvel named Johnson has broken into the headlines. Recently he showed the home folks in Jacksonville, Fla., how a no-hit, no-hit game is produced.

Dr. Flaherty has severed his connection with the Tewksbury insane asylum to join Hugh Duffy's baseball team in Portland, Me. It is not known whether the Doctor has been engaged to pay ball or to give the Portland players the 'once over.'

And then again, ther were to be no more baseball stories written by star players, neither were the cut-ups to be permitted to do stunts on the coaching lines. But since that old Federal League butted in all kinds of major league rules seem to have been forgotten.

T. C. Livingston—a native of Vancouver, and the only Canadian in the famous Cambridge team which beat Oxford crew in the annual races. Livingston is an all-round athlete, and is well known in all lines of athletics in England. He rowed third in the team.

EARNINGS WERE $200,000,000

The earnings on our Canadian railways during 1913 amounted, broadly, to $200,000,000. These figures include all the subsidiary lines, and other affiliations of whatever nature; but the figures are remarkable. Thirty years ago the C.P.R., which now shows gross annual earnings of $140,000,000, could hardly buy axle grease. Its 35,000,000 acres of land were worthless. The land now sells at the rate of from $5 to $35 per acre. That worthless land in its totality represents a cash value of nearly $350,000,000. The lands still to be sold will realize $200,000,000. The commissioner, which the London paper of Lord Northcliffe's called Answers sent out to investigate conditions in the Dominion, reports in one of his letters that the C. P. R. should have sold its land—any part of it—to speculators in the early days. The company regrets that policy to-day itself; but at the moment there did not seem any alternative. The people could not be coaxed at the time to settle in the wilderness; and the company needed money; and the big parcels were parted with—parcels which in their unoccupied state are the wonder of the incoming settler, who has to go further back while the splendid lands lie idle close to the railway. Of course, not an acre is sold now except to the genuine settler, but the point of value is that in the course of a comparatively few years, our Canadian railways, which began in feebleness and doubt, without great faith in the future, and mocked at by critics, can show the enormous earnings, in a twelvemonth of $200,000,000.

Enthusiasm Shown at Gathering in the Dominion Bank Chambers —Officers Were Elected.

MR. CUNNINGHAM PRESID'NT

A very interesting and enthusiastic meeting of the Brookside Bowling Club was held last evening in the Dominion Bank Chambers at 8 o'clock. A large number of the members were present. President R. M. Waddell was chairman.

The following officers were elected for the coming season:

President, J. P. Cunningham.

Vice-President, J. H. Renwick.

Secretary-Treasurer, T. C. Elliott.

The Executive Committee is: The President, Vice-President, Secretary-Treasurer and Messrs. J. W. Maynard, Ray Best and George Cairns.

A membership committee of the following members was also elected: D. N. Moore (chairman), T. Brightman, R. G. Cottrell, D. Belleghem, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, Dr. Wightman and R. M. Waddell.

The members of the Lawn Committee are: Messrs. D. Belleghem, T. Brightman and W. Gray.

A resolution was passed that the Executive Committee meet with the representatives of the lawn tennis section and make arrangements for the season's work.

A resolution was also passed, asking the Executive Committee to draw up a set of by-laws for the benefit of the members of the club.

A motion was passed that the secretary-treasurer's report be passed as read. The work of the season will soon be commencing, and it is anticipated that some very interesting matches will be arranged during the season.

The club will have an increased membership, and it is hoped that the work of the officers will be carried out successfully. Enthusiasm was the predominant feature at last night's meeting, which speaks well for the progress the club will make.

Opening Of Central League

Special to The Examiner:

FORT WAYNE, Ind., April 22.—The Central Baseball League started its twelfth season to-day, with Spring field playing at Dayton, Terre Haute at Evansville and the Champion Grand Rapids team in this city. Since the close of last season steps have been taken to strengthen the weaker clubs and the owners and managers in all the cities of the circuit are optimistic over the chances of winning the pennant. The schedule will close September 7.

BOXING

Kid Williams and Kid Herman have been matched to box in New Orleans on May 11.

Jim Johnson, the New York negro heavyweight, has been promised another match with Champion Jack Johnson.

On his return to Boston rom the South Sam Loggford will sail for Europe to make another try for a mums with Jack Johnson.

Louis De Porthieu, whom Frank Erne developed into the champion featherweight of France, has been signed by Snowy Baker to accompany George Carpentier to Australia.

Eddie Cicotte—Pitcher for the Chicago White Sox, who last season had an average second only to that of the famous Walter Johnson.

JOE GANS THE "OLD MASTER"

Gans! What does the name mean to you? To those of us who knew the "Old Master" at his best, it recalls a champion who had everything; a fighter who was clever to a superlative degree; who could hit like a miniature Fitzsimmons; who had the endurance characteristic of the coloured race; who had as great a fighting head as any man the ring has known.

Perhaps you have seen the present titleholder, Willie Ritchie, in action. If not (or if so), and you have the good fortune to be in California on April 17, blow into the Ritchie-Murphy fracas, imagine Ritchie of Ethiopian hue, and you will get a fair idea of Joe Gans in his prime.

Gans had many a hard battle. He met them all at a time when great lightweights were in abundance. George McFadden beat him in a terrific struggle. His three battles with Nelson were notable in the history of boxing. And the first of these, that 42-round fight at Goldfield, Nev., in 1906, was undoubtedly the hardest battle of the "Old Master's" great and chequered career.

Gans' gameness has often been questioned. What grounds there are for the supposition that he lacked heart, we do not propose to discuss here. But this much we will say in defence of Joe, there was never a man faced a discouraging situation more gamely than the great coloured champion faced the 42 rounds of milling against a man who seemed inhuman—who could, and did, take as hard a beating as was ever hauled out, and came tearing in incessantly for more.

Gans won that day on a foul. He was a mighty lucky champion to get the decision—and he knew it! George Siler's verdict has often been questioned, but it stands. Anyway, Nelson beat Gans decisively twice afterward, so why rehash an old story

The man who really got the battle for Goldfield was not Tex Rickard, whose name is always linked with it, but Graham Rice, who has been much in the limelight of late years, due to connection with Wall Street mining stock scandals. Rice was interested in publicity for Goldfield, and saw that he could put the town on the front page of the newspapers of the country by offering a sensational purse for a fight between Nelson and Gans. He broached his scheme to Rickard and others, and the $30,000 purse was the result

Coloured champions are never popular. Gans, champion lightweight of the world, was forced to let Nelson, the contender, dictate the terms of the battle. All Bat asked was $20,000, win, lose, or draw, and all Billy Nolan demanded was that Gans weigh 135 ringside in fighting togs.

Joe wore himself out making the weight. He weighed in three times on the day of the fight. At ringside he did Nolan's 133 in fighting togs. He looked thin and drawn.

As Gans' record was not without its shady side, Goldfield, having put up some $30,000 perfectly good simoleons, took no chances on any crooked work. The ringside bristled with cannon. Joe fought on the level all along.

From the start the battle was all Gans. Bat never stopped tearing in, but the champion beat him unmercifully. After the tenth round one side of Nelson's face looked like a balloon.

As usual, Bat was rough. He butted Gans with his head time and again. Once he kicked him in the shins, and Joe, getting into the spirit of the occasion, kicked him back. The blow that lost for Nelson may or may not have been a foul, but there were at least ten times during the fight that Siler could have disqualified him for butting — and didn't!

When 25 rounds went by and he failed to stop the Dane, Gans wore a worried look. The crowd couldn't understand it either. Here was a man being beaten to a pulp, and yet coming tearing in round after round.

In the 42nd round Nelson was a terrible sight, but was fighting hard Jim Coffroth got up to get a drink. As he did so Nelson swung. "There goes Gans!" shouted Billy Roche a him. Thid champion was down writing aparently in agony on the canvas. Siler, the referee, started the count, stopped, waved Nelson aside, and declared Gans the winner on a foul.

There was a pool of blood in the ring where he lay. Many people believe that Joe had a hemorrhage in the ring from making the weight. At any rate, Billy Nolan's 133 ringside sounded the death-knell of his fighting career. He was never "the old master" afterward.

BASEBALL

Miller, Wilson, Butler and Dolan all former Pirates, are delivering in great style for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Frank Chance has several likely looking youngsters who may be able to boost the Yankees a notch or two

Tom Daly, the boy who showed the King of England how to break up a game with a hit, is still denting the fence for the White Sox.

Because they defeated several big league teams this spring the Columbus team is being touted as a winner in the American Association race.

If the Robinson Robins and the Bradley Tiptops continue to pastime as brilliantly the Brooklyn fans will have the time of their lives this season.

Some accounts say the Baltimore fans have given the Orioles the frosty shoulder since the Federal League Terrapins came to town.

Manager Clark Griffith of the Senators is sticking close to the dugout these days, leaving Dutch Schaefer and Nick Altrock to do the coaching.

Boston fans are already proclaiming young Scott a wonder. The St. Paul rookie is filling Heine Wagner's place at short and seems to be making good.

With Herr Hoblitzell, Herr Niehoff Herr Herzog, Herr Groh und Herr Berghammer, Cincinnati has der classiest pretzel infieldings vot is.

The Chicago Cubs and Boston Braves appear to be weak in the pitching department. With a reliable finger added to each staff O'Day and Stallings would be able to command attention.

Another pitching marvel named Johnson has broken into the headlines. Recently he showed the home folks in Jacksonville, Fla., how a no-hit, no-hit game is produced.

Dr. Flaherty has severed his connection with the Tewkabury insane asylum to join Hugh Duffy's baseball team in Portland, Me. It is not known whether the Doctor has been engaged to pay ball or to give the Portland players the 'once over.'

And then again, ther were to be no more baseball stories written by star players, neither were the cut-ups to be permitted to do stunts on the coaching lines. But since that old Federal League butted in all kinds of major league rules seem to have been forgotten.

J. G. Livingston—a native of Vancouver, and the only Canadian in the famous Cambridge team which beat Oxford crew in the annual races. Livingston is an all-round athlete, and is well known in all lines of athletics in England. He rowed third in the team.

EARNINGS WERE $209,000,000

The earnings on our Canadian railways during 1913 amounted, broadly, to $200,000,000. These figures include all the subsidiary lines, and other affiliations of whatever nature; but the figures are remarkable. Thirty years ago the C.P.R., which now shows gross annual earnings of $140,000,000, could hardly buy axle grease. Its 25,000,000 acres of land were worthless. The land now sells at the rate of from $5 to $35 per acre. That worthless land in its totality represents a cash value of nearly $250,000,000. The lands still to be sold will realise $200,000,000. The commissioner, which the London paper of Lord Northcliffe's called Answers sent out to investigate conditions in the Dominion, reports in one of his letters that the C. P. R. should have sold its land—any part of it—to speculators in the early days. The company regrets that policy to-day itself; but at the moment there did not seem any alternative. The people could not be coaxed at the time to settle in the wilderness; and the company needed money; and the big parcels were parted with—parcels which in their unoccupied state are the wonder of the incoming settler, who has to go further back while the splendid lands lie idle close to the railway. Of course, not an acre is sold now except to the genuine settler, but the point of value is that in the course of a comparatively few years, our Canadian railways which began in feebleness and doubt, without great faith in the future, and mocked at by critics, can show the enormous earnings, in a twelvemonth of $209,000,000.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN ADAMS.

Elizabeth Reynolds, widow of the late John Adams, of Brownton, passed away at her home this morning, after many years of residence in this neighbourhood. The late Mrs. Adams was 85 years of age and had lived most of her life in Harvey Township. In that township, and in Peterborough, where she has resided of late, she has very many friends who will be sorry to learn of her death.

The deceased lady is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Benjamin Bingham, from whose residence the funeral will be held to-morrow morning at 9:30 o'clock to the Lakehurst cemetery. Service will be conducted at the house to-morrow morning at nine o'clock by the Rev. F. J. Sawers.

There are those who never banked a dollar who keenly appreciate the Madoc situation. With the former it is a habit to be broke. It is a misfortune for the latter.

ELECTORS OF ONTARIO FACE THE PENALTY

Ontario's Government has come forward with the admission that $5,000,000 have been borrowed for Northern Ontario development, and that although $3,000,000 have been spent for other purposes the Province is confronted with the necessity of borrowing $8,000,000. This will serve, as the Provincial Treasurer complacently put it, to carry the Government until the House again assembles and can grant more borrowing power. With direct liabilities of $32,267,229 and indirect liabilities of $9,658,390, this should awaken the Province to an appreciation of the serious aspects of the Government's course. During the previous session Mr. Rowell pointed out clearly the reckless policy that was being adopted. His estimate of the deficit in prospect was regarded as occasion for merriment by the Ministers, not that they were blind to the serious results such a deficit would entail, but because they did not understand or did not want others to understand the real state of affairs. Mr. Rowell said the Province would be faced by the necessity of subjecting to heavy taxation, making extensive borrowing, or both. We have suffered both.

Our taxation is now in some respects the heaviest in the Dominion, although a few years ago we held a heritage of land, timber, and minerals sufficient to avert the necessity of taxation during the measurable future. The Province now has a needless burden which every industry, every enterprise, and every citizen must feel, and there are prospects of it growing heavier.

The danger of departure from Governmental responsibility through the intervention of Commissions was forcibly pointed out by Mr. Rowell. The Treasurer explained that $275,000 of the prospective borrowing was for the Elk Lake and Gowganda extension of the Provincial railway. The power of voting on the policy of extending that or any other line or branch is taken from the Legislature, and the public thus lose the benefit of open discussion. The Government also escaped the needed restraint of free criticism. A former Elk Lake extension was mixed up with the general election in any unsavory way, and it is suggestive that this use of the Commission for new borrowing is decided upon when an election is in prospect. Ontario electors have always regarded public affairs with seriousness. Their reward has been a well-administered heritage which had averted taxation. The penalty for relaxed vigilance has been swift, and it will be all the more enduring the longer needed reforms are delayed.—The Globe.

FIVE CASES FOR NON-JURY SITTINGS

Thos. Brightman Claims Sum of Money Alleged to Have Been Loaned to M. J. Quigley

The non-jury sittings of the High Court will be opened on Tuesday next, when Chancellor Boyd will be the presiding judge.

There are several cases for disposal, and included actions for $5,000, $4,000 and $3,985, respectively. The cases are as follows:

Brightman vs. Quigley.

Thomas Brightman, leather merchant of this city, is claiming the sum of $2,334 and interest, which he alleges, he loaned to the defendant, M. J. Quigley, in 1907.

On or about September 27th, 1907, the defendant applied to him, through one John Welsh, for a loan of $2,334 and further said Welsh at that time informed the plaintiff that the defendant would shortly be entitled to that amount of money out of the estate of defendant's deceased father.

The plaintiff has demanded from the defendant payment of the said sum of $2,334 and interest, and defendant has refused to pay, and the said sum remains unpaid and due plaintiff by defendant, together with interest thereon at 5 per cent per annum.

The plaintiff therefore claims as follows:

Interest on that sum, at 5 per cent., from Sept. 25th to date, $651.54, making a total of $2,985.54.

The defendant denies the allegations of the plaintiff's statement of claim, and puts plaintiff to the strict proof thereof.

He denies receiving the sum of $2,334, and states that if Welsh did apply for the money and obtained it, he did so for solely his own use, and not for defendant. Mr. G. N. Gordon will conduct the defence, and Messrs. Hall, Medd and Davidson will represent plaintiff.

Carton vs. The City.

Matthew Carton is suing the Corporation of the City of Peterborough for the sum of $5,000, which he claims as the result of being injured.

Mr. Carton, it may be remembered, was struck by the limb of a falling tree on George street in March last year, near the "Brown Monument," and which he states in his claim, struck him violently in the body, and, crushing the bones of his left leg, caused a compound fracture and other serious injuries, permanent in their nature.

The defendant alleges that the defendants, their officers, and agents, were negligent in that they pulled the limb of the tree from the wire which kept it suspended, allowing it to fall on the plaintiff, and did not give him any warning of his danger.

The officer in charge of the limb, so far as he can ascertain, was Alexander Fitzgerald. The plaintiff had to go to the hospital to receive treatment. He therefore claims $5,000 damages, and costs of the action.

Defendants admit certain of the statements made by plaintiff, but others they deny. Plaintiff they claim, did not notify the city as is required in the Municipal Act.

Messrs. Peck, Kerr and McElderry are acting for the plaintiff, and Mr. G. N. Gordon will work in the interests of the city.

Elliott vs. Elliott.

George Elliott is a farmer now residing in Cavan. Defendant is the plaintiff's son. On February 19th, 1913, the defendant procured the plaintiff to execute an agreement in which the defendant and plaintiff both were parties, and also by the defendant, the conveyance of one-half lot No. 18, in the 1st Concession of the Township of Emily. The defendant has deprived the plaintiff completely of the use of the documents cited. The plaintiff asks that the said agreement set aside as null and void, and seeks a declaration of the court to give possession of the premises and chattels to plaintiff, together with the costs of the action. The defendant denies all the allegations. Messrs. Peck, Kerr and McElderry are acting for the plaintiff, and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the defendant.

Althouse vs. Ontario Rock Co.

The plaintiff is a labourer and resides in the Township of Belmont, and the defendant company is a duly incorporated company in the laws of the Province of Ontario, and quarrying and shipping rock in the said Township of Belmont. On September 9th, last, the plaintiff, while in the service of the defendant company, met with serious and permanent injuries to his right eye, which necessitated the eye to be removed by a physician and surgeon. He alleges the negligence of the servants and officers of the defendant company.

The action is brought under common law, as well as under the Workmen's Compensation Injuries Act.

The plaintiff claims $5,000 damages and costs of action.

Messrs. Peck, Kerr and McElderry for plaintiffs.

The defendants admit some of the statements of the plaintiff, but deny they were guilty of negligence. They are defended by Messrs. Beatty, Blackstock, Fasken, Cowan and Chadwick of Toronto.

Settlement Made With Mr. Carton

The city council has made an amicable settlement with Mr. M. Carton in connection with the accident which he sustained last year, occasioning a broken leg and some minor injuries. Mr. Carton was struck by a falling tree which was being felled by the city and by employees of the city. His injuries confined him to his home for a considerable time and caused him a great deal of inconvenience.

FOUND HIS CROWD

He had been around from church to church trying to find a congenial congregation, and finally he stopped in a little church just as the congregation read with the minister:

"We have left undone those things which we ought to have done, and we have done those things which we ought not to have done."

The man dropped into a pew with a sigh of relief.

"Thank goodness," he said, "I've found my crowd at last."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Bankers, report the following:

There was some further irregularity in the Stock Market to-day and the general stock market offerings were met on any declines. Evidence of greater willingness to buy on weakness is coming to our attention, important sources find a disposition to absorb stocks in fair amounts, notwithstanding the Mexican situation. The feeling is growing that perhaps the drop of steel from its high to the recent low, a drop of ten points, is a readjustment proportionate to the technical requirements. The pressure on Great Northern Pacific is now understood to have been largely due to assimilation of the new stocks. The selling of Union Pacific has been for short account. We are told that Reading will find good buying on dips.

The copper stocks are well bought where they reflect good earnings.

Huerta Planned Incident to End the Civil War

SUSPICION IS CONFIRMED

WASHINGTON, April 23. — News that Gen. Venustiano Carranza, Constitutionalist chief, had regarded the seizure of Vera Cruz by the American naval forces as an act of hostility to the Mexican nation, fell like a bombshell in official circles last night.

President Wilson has especially disclaimed any act of hostility to the Mexican people, particularizing Gen. Huerta as the object of the American operations to secure reprisal for offences at Tampico and elsewhere against the American flag. Consequently the Washington Government had hoped the Constitutionalists would remain silent and not interject themselves into the imbroglio. The Carranza letter, however, confirms the fears of many officials that the Constitutionalists might side with Huerta. This was the one possibility which has been discussed in administration circles all day as the most serious phase in the situation.

Should hostility on the part of the Constitutionalists crystallize the plans of the army will be changed. There were reports during the day that the joint army and navy board already had recommended the restoration of the embargo on arms.

Action by Congress approving the President's course in using the army and navy in view of the situation he had presented in his message, and the receipt of details of the fighting at Vera Cruz were the chief developments of the day.

Future steps were uncertain. The President has determined that his course shall be gradual. No orders have been issued to seize the customs house at Tampico. It is the purpose of the administration to keep order in Vera Cruz and await the full effect upon Huerta of the first act of reprisal by the American Government.

There is every reason to believe that the railroad running inland from Vera Cruz for twenty miles, together with a valuable trestle, will be policed by American marines and bluejackets. This section of the railroad is of supreme importance should future developments require a movement on Mexico City.

Beyond the holding of Vera Cruz and this railroad, the Washington Government does not want to act at present, but persons in the confidence of the administration admit that action by Huerta or Carranza at any time may alter completely the plans.

In this connection a high Government official made public a letter from a friend whom he regarded as trustworthy, which read as follows:

"I hear on reliable authority, from a man arriving from Mexico City, that Huerta personally, with the Mexican Foreign Minister, planned the Tampico incident with a view of bringing an armed intervention and uniting the Mexican factions with him."

The same official expressed the view that Huerta had delayed his answer to the United States for a month to the flag pending the arrival of the shipment of ammunition on the German vessel.

Volunteers for service in Mexico will not be called for unless there is a formal declaration of war by Congress. This was announced in the House yesterday by Chairman Hay of the House military affairs committee.

Movements of the navy were continued yesterday. The Navy Department feels that a sufficient force of marines is on the way, not only to take care of the situation at Vera Cruz, but at Tampico, too, if the order is given for the seizure of the customs house there.

Foreigners Leaves Mexico City.

GALVESTON, April 23. — Communication was established yesterday afternoon with Mexico City. Charge O'Shaughnessy is safe and the city is quiet, but business demoralized. The city is completely in the hands of the Federal Government. A train left yesterday afternoon for Vera Cruz with foreigners on board, and was escorted by Federals.

CARRANZA'S DEMAND.

Ask U. S. to Withdraw as Soon as Possible—May Inflame People.

WASHINGTON, April 23. — Gen. Carranza's note to President Wilson declaring the seizure of Vera Cruz by American forces a violation of the national sovereignty of Mexico, inviting the United States to suspend hostile operations and withdraw its forces, and suggesting that the Constitutionalist Government should receive demands for reparation of offences committed by Huerta stirred the Mexican situation to a new and acute crisis late last night.

The opposition to the American Government's action, coming from an unexpected quarter after the Washington administration had hoped for an attitude of neutrality and passive observation from the Constitutionalists, brought the Government face to face with possible hostility from the great body of Mexican forces lying in proximity to the southern tier of the United States.

Carranza agreed with President Wilson that Huerta did not represent the Mexican nation, but, on the other hand, feared the Mexican people might be inflamed and drawn into a conflict which would make them sacrifices to the usurpations of Huerta.

Gen. Carranza described the Constitutionalist successes, saying that Huerta was slowly being crushed and that the Constitutionalists soon would be in possession of the Mexico City Government. When they triumphed, he stated, ample reparation would be made for all offences. In the meantime he wished the United States to take no steps which would excite the Mexican populace.

The note, it was admitted by many officials, was capable of a friendly construction, but there was some doubt expressed that the subordinate officers under Gen. Carranza might not be so conservative. Apprehension over this situation was manifest in many quarters.

Government Evades an Investigation into Snider Episode

MINISTRY IS UNDER FIRE

TORONTO, April 23. — It was a case of "chickens come home to roost" in the Legislature yesterday when the interference of the Government through Inspector Snider in the recent Canada temperance act campaigns in the counties of Welland, Peel and Huron were visited upon the administration when the Opposition asked for a select committee to investigate the matter. The motion was defeated 70 to 20.

In support of his motion Chief Liberal Whip Bowman said that because the Scott Act made dry certain places which were wet under the Local Option Act, the contests were unusually interesting. Welland had been a testing ground, and the liquor people had spent $60,000 there to defeat the temperance bylaw. Snider, he said, went into the riding to tell the people that the Government did not want the act passed. He was repudiated at first, but afterwards acknowledged, but whether "all his own bat or not" he had acted improperly.

"He should have been brought to the carpet, and not only reprimanded, but suspended," he declared. "No official of the Government has the right to take part in elections in this way."

Hon. Mr. Hanna stated that the description of the man given to him would not warrant his identification at the time.

"Didn't you know he was there?" asked an Opposition member.

"No, I did not," was the reply.

"Was there such a close alliance between the Government and the liquor interests that the latter had pressed for Snider going for a set purpose?" asked Mr. Bowman.

"Any insinuation or suggestion involved in that statement is absolutely untrue," declared Hon. Mr. Hanna. "I will ask the hon. member a question 'Why does he ask it'."

Mr. Bowman replied that statements had been made that J. P. Haverson, counsel for the liquor interests, had visited the Minister with that end in view.

"He had not,' was the emphatic reply.

Mr. Bowman, in conclusion, urged that the committee asked for be appointed and the matter cleared up.

Mr. Hanna said that he and Eudo Saunders, chief license officer, had discussed the whole effect of the Scott Act on the province, and the conclusion was that a statement setting forth what the law really meant should be issued to the press as authoritative, and yet not from the Government, to avoid influencing the election. It was conceded that in unorganized districts the measure was a good one, but in old counties people should understand certain conditions to be met. Huron had most to expect and less to lose, but in Peel it was imperative that they know that when the Scott Act was passed it suspended all local option laws and the bulk of the county was under them. Snider had known of the statement to be published but not of how it was to be used. His actions he had taken to be within his duties, and afterwards affirmed that his conversation had begun and ended with the facts given in the statement.

"I say now as I said then, that I had no idea Inspector Snider was in Welland at the time," Hon. Mr. Hanna declared.

Hon. Mr. Foy said Mr. Bowman had not produced anything that would warrant his asking for a select committee of investigation. His speech was "a bundle of hearsay and newspaper scraps." He would ask him to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Rowell held that either the officer had violated the Departmental rules and deserved punishment, or that he had been sent with a purpose to discourage electors from passing the temperance measure.

Hon. Mr. Lucas said that too much could not be done nowadays to make public life inviting to good men and to stop the hurling of dirt and insinuendoes across the floor.

J. G. Anderson (Lib., S. Bruce), Chas. McCrea (Con., Sudbury), and Evan Fraser (Con., Welland) also spoke.

GOING TOO FAST!

Mr. Rowell Checks Attempt To Jam Redistribution Bill Through.

TORONTO, April 23.—In the latest draft of the redistribution bill, which will probably be subject to little change, provision is made for an addition of four new members to the Ontario House. These will come from a new city riding, comprising Windsor, Walkerville and Sandwich; from Cochrane, a new electoral district in the north, and from the two new seats given to Toronto. There will be two Lincoln ridings. Monck is abolished.

Among the ridings which have had their boundaries considerably altered are the Grays, Middlesex, Victoria, the Bruces and North Oxford.

At the meeting of the committee yesterday Mr. Rowell claimed that the Liberal members had not had nearly enough time to study the situation, and quoted the division of the Victorias and North Oxford as evidence of [illegible].

"Too much of a closure flavor," suggested a member.

"There is only a question of one hundred Liberal majority; that is all," said Mr. Rowell. "We should have an opportunity to hear from the different parts of the province."

"That is out of the question," said Mr. Hanna.

Mr. Rowell insisted however and another meeting was arranged for today at 10.30 before the reporting of the bill in the House this afternoon.

William McDonald (Centre Bruce) fought strongly for the Bruces as at present distributed. He said the average difference in the Kents and other counties was greater than there. He urged that to change the makeup of the centre riding and to call it West Bruce with the municipalities grouped as proposed would destroy the "old fighting ground."

Mr. Rowell said that the inclusion of Sullivan Township in North Grey seriously hurt the Liberal cause.

Hon. Mr. Lucas stated that the bill merely sent back certain sections to where they had been before the Liberal redistribution.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Children and Sore Throats.

Don't trifle with your child's sore throat. It may be harmless, and it may be the center of infection from which diphtheria will spread through an entire neighborhood. Antitoxin is an almost absolute cure for diphtheria when given in time. It is likewise a proved preventive, acting in this regard like a temporary vaccination. With such an agent in the hands of medical science all that is needed is care and co-opgration on the the part of parents and teachers to wipe out the diphtheria scourge altogether.

HAVANA'S NEW BRIDGE.

Planned to Be Unique in Height, Construction and Approach.

The harbor of Havana, Cuba, long admitted to be one of the handsomest in the world, will shortly be spanned by a bridge unique in height, construction and approach.

For years it has been planned to erect a bridge from the Morro castle side of the Havana harbor to the city side, but this undertaking has always been postponed because of the large amount of heavy sea traffic which would of necessity have to pass beneath the bridge and because of the difference in levels between the two sides of the harbor. The former objection, engineers said, would necessitate a bridge over 250 feet in height and the latter would entail a long and very costly approach on the city side of the harbor.

Modern engineering methods, however, have provided solutions for both of these problems, and the bridge will soon be commenced, the Cuban congress having appropriated $2,500,000 for the construction of the giant span.

The bridge itself will be nearly 300 feet above the surface of the harbor, thus allowing the largest vessels afloat to pass beneath without danger to their superstructure. There will be but a single span to the bridge, supported by massive masonry pillars at either side. The central portion of the bridge will be "raised" so as to offer additional protection to vessels passing beneath it.—Popular Electricity.

FASTER OCEAN LINERS.

Thirty Knot Ships Wait on the Genius of Engine Designers.

In the year recently ended we have seen the last word in modern shipbuilding appear in New York harbor, and it would perhaps be interesting to consider the strides made in this century. In 1900 the twenty-three knot Deutschland won the blue ribbon of the Atlantic, and when the Cumarders with twenty-six knots to their credit obtained the place it was prophesied that in a few years the four day thirty knot boat would be seen; but, though the sizes of ships have increased and shortly the giant Imperator will no longer be the mammoth of the seas, the speed has dropped. Economy in space, in fuel, in cost of operation, has compelled a halt, and we seem to have reached for the moment the practical, highest speed of a transatlantic boat.

That the limit is actually reached is hardly possible, but the burden of increased speed lies now not with the ship designer, but with the engine designer. A smaller engine of higher speed with some as yet unknown reduction gear and we shall have the thirty knot boat in economical practical form. The ship can stand it. Can the engine designer design it?—American Machinist.

For the Children

Two Little Girls Posing in the Snow.

Winter is a jolly season for little people, even if grown folks don't seem to care much about cold and snow. Children have the happy faculty of enjoying whatever season it happens to be, for each has its special games and sports. Springtime brings the flowers, summer for bicnics, boating and bathing, autumn is the season for nut gathering, but when Jack Frost comes in the best time of all. Sleds and skates and sleigh rides are but a few of the joys of winter. Warmly clad in cold defying garments, it is a pleasure just to play in the snow. Snowballing and snow houses interest the boys and many girls as well. It is fun, too, to wander in the fields or parks after a fresh fall of snow and note the tracks of beast and bird. Take it altogether, old Boreas is a friend of the little folk. The two girls pictured in winter array are the Misses Arpence and Ardius Tavsanajian of New York city. They were playing in the park when the photographer happened along.

Game of Plum Pudding.

The players sit at a table with a plate on it to represent a plum pudding. A tin plate is best as being light and unbreakable. Each player takes the name of some article of food or something used at dinner. One tells a story about a plum pudding and when he utters the name spins the plate and mentions some other dish. The person who has taken that name instantly gives the plate another twirl and continues the story, spinning the plate when it begins to slow down until he names another player, who must catch the plate before it falls, keep it twirling and go on with the story.

Plum pudding must be brought into each story and its continuation and the plate never allowed to fall. The story may be like this: "It was Christmas, and we were all at my grandmother's house. She let me help her order the dinner. Of course there was a plum pudding (spin the plate) of great size, and we all liked it better than mince pie." Mince pie must then catch the spinning plate, give it a fresh impetus and go on with the story: "In which they showed bad taste. I think, for, while mince pies are fine at Christmas, I should prefer plum pudding to roast chestnuts." Roast chestnuts seizes the plate and goes on: "Yes, but they are for dessert. I think plum pudding would be better than cranberry tart." And so the game goes on till all are tired or wits give out.

Any one letting the plate fall or failing to continue the story pays a forfeit or leaves the game, as arranged beforehand.

Some Animals in Winter.

During the autumn all kinds of bears become very fat in consequence of the ample feasts they make in preparation for passing the cold and inhospitable months of winter. When they have prepared their winter quarters they cease feeding and remain through the winter in a dull, lethargic state. Some kinds of animals that hide away in winter are not sound asleep all of the time. The blood moves a little, and when it is mild they wake up enough to eat. The curious thing is that they know this beforehand and lay something to eat close by them when they go into winter quarters. But those that do not wake up do not lay up food. The little field mouse stores up nuts and grain and eats them when he is partly awake on a warm day. The bat does not need to do this, for the warmth that awakens him brings out the insects on which he feeds. When he is going to sleep again he hangs himself up by his hind claws. The woodchuck lays up dried grasses beside him so that they may be ready the first thing when he awakens in the spring, that he may eat and be strong before he comes out of his hole.

The Squirrel's Vacation.

"Hurrah for vacation!"
Cried Squirrelio Grey.
"Now is the time
For wood folk to play.

"A round summer house
I built in a tree.
I roofed it with oak leaves
As neat as could be.

"My five furry babies
I tended with care.
One took a prize
At the last forget-fair.

"My acorns and chestnuts
Are all stored away,
Many a meal
For a cold, stormy day.

"And now 'tis vacation!
Come, wood folk, and play!
Hurrah for some fun!"
Shouted Squirrelio Grey.

A Story of the Great Blizzard of 1888

By CHARLES CRAIG

What a terrible storm was that which occurred in March, 1888! How the snow whirled! How deep it became! How many persons were caught, bewildered, and sank down within reach of safety, yet never arose alive!

During the day I, rebelling against remaining longer imprisoned, started out to walk to the village, a mile distant. How I got as far as I did I don't know, though I didn't get very far. Between my home and the town was an old brick house that had been built 150 years. It had been occupied till six months before, when the tenants left it, shutting it up with all the high post bedsteads and other old fashioned furniture. Seeing this house and realizing that I was battling a storm that was too much for me, I made for it, climbed the fence—the snow would not admit of opening the gate—and after struggling over a hundred feet up to the porch sank down at the front door in a stupor.

Things were vague after that. I seemed to have forgotten that the house was unoccupied, and, making an effort, I pulled myself up to reach the brass knocker and rapped. The door was opened by a gentleman, and, strange to say, he wore the uniform of the Continental army. I saw many persons moving about in the rooms and heard the strains of music.

"Bad night, sir," said the gentleman. "Come in and warm yourself."

"I certainly will," I replied. "I feel very queer. I am certainly benumbed."

"Fortunately some hot punch is just being served. It is just what you require."

He put his arm through mine and supported me to a room with a sideboard in it on which was an enormous bowl, from which a negro was ladling out a steaming beverage. My conductor took one of the mugs and handed it to me. I put it to my lips, but somehow I couldn't taste anything. It was like drinking air.

"I shall be happy to present you to my friends," said the man who had admitted me. "We are having a dance here tonight in honor of the officers commanding the troops just arrived and who are to be quartered in the neighborhood."

All this seemed natural enough. It didn't strike me that there was anything remarkable about it. I was taken up and introduced to ladies with enormous wigs and queer cut dresses. I tried to say something, but somehow I couldn't talk. There were a lot of men in Continental uniform and a few in citizens' dress, the latter with a yard or more of white stuff wrapped around their throats, and ruffles standing out from their bosoms.

"A bad night for our boys at Valley Forge," remarked a tall man, who as I looked at him seemed to resolve himself into General Washington.

"I should say so," I replied. "I'm cold myself here in these warm rooms. What must be the condition of these fellows living in huts or tents without sufficient blankets?"

Our conversation was interrupted by the entrance of a young man, who approached Washington and whom the general received with marked favor.

"Who is that?" I asked of a guest.

"The Marquis de Lafayette."

The next thing I remember was seeing the general dancing the minuet, and I wondered how he could be dancing when his troops were freezing, to say nothing of starving.

While he was engaged in the dance I heard a colored servant standing at the door announce in a loud voice:

"General Arnold!"

I looked at the man who entered and recognized—from portraits I had seen—Benedict Arnold. He went straight up to Washington and tapped him on the shoulder. Washington turned, and the look of contempt and loathing on his face was terrible to see. While I was looking at it the view dissolved before me, and there was a blank. Then I was in a room in which Washington was talking and gesticulating with an officer against whom he seemed to have a very bitter feeling. I asked who this man was and was informed that he was General Charles Lee, who deliberately disobeyed Washington's orders at the battle of Trenton. There were high words between the two till Washington slapped Lee's face.

The sound of the slap dissolved into a voice that sounded in my ear.

"Hello! Wake up!"

I was violently shaken and slowly came to a realizing sense that I was on the porch of the deserted house thoroughly benumbed. Two men were trying to arouse me. They chafed me, hammered me, lifted me to my feet and held me there in spite of my desire to sink down again.

I had been at the door but a few minutes. Two men who had walked behind me saw me turn into the deserted house and, realizing that it would be unsafe to leave me there, had followed me on to the porch. As soon as they had restored my circulation one of them found a loose window sash, which he opened, and we went inside. My rescuers had matches, and we found some lamps, also enough wood to make a blaze in one of the big fireplaces. We were forced to remain in the house during the night and in the morning had a hard time getting anywhere else.

I never pass the house but I think of the strange scenes I dreamed while freezing.

Fate of a Fallen Queen.

When the French dethroned Queen Ranavalona of Madagascar she was given a small house in Algiers and a still smaller pension. Some little time ago she was permitted to visit Paris. No carriage or car was placed at her disposal. She was left without money to see the sights or go shopping, and she was not taken to theaters or social gatherings. Most of her time she passed in her room, looking out through the window at what was going on below. At last she was driven to apply to the authorities for passage back to Algiers, and there she has since remained, living in the most humble fashion imaginable. Yet the island over which she once ruled is larger than France itself.

Story of the Bible in Films.

The biggest cinematograph feat yet is that of an Italian company, which is now at work upon "The Holy Bible From Genesis to Revelation." Many of the scenes will be filmed in Palestine. Six thousand people will take part in it. As a film of such length—30,000 feet—would occupy a long time in exhibition, the company have decided to divide it into fifteen parts of two reels each. The flood and the fall of Babylon are two of the proposed scenes.

A rival Italian concern has already issued a long picture entitled "The Bible," but it is a highly sensational drama, not religious.—London Globe.

Cold Coal A-plenty.

A geological survey of parts of Spitsbergen shows that there are immense deposits of superior coal in various places, and interested individuals and companies alike are planning to tap these resources and bring them upon the highway of international trade. Not many years ago Spitsbergen was an unknown land, and for many years it was a resort only for whalers, fishermen and bandits.

Coining a Word.

Nothing could be more fallacious than the common notion that whatever the dictionary says is right. Every one of them contains much that is not right. Worcester, for instance, had a word, "phantomnation," defined as meaning "illusion," which was copied from the cranky work of a man named Jodrell, who presented as one word every two word phrase not, according to his idea, in regular grammatical construction. He had made the word from Pope's line "The phantom nations of the dead" and credited it to Pope. His obsession led to many other ridiculous perversions of language. The one mentioned was repeated in each work printed before 1890, when it was dropped.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Inoculated.

During a session of the supreme court of Maine a tedious and complicated suit had well nigh exhausted the patience of counsel on both sides. One of the lawyers engaged was a certain Appleton, said to be the wittiest lawyer in all New England.

Opposing him was a lawyer of pompous mien and much avoirdupois, who committed blunder after blunder, until even the judge became irritated. After the commission of a particularly aggravating error this lawyer said:

"I beg your honor's pardon, but that was another mistake. I seem to be inoculated with dullness today."

"Inoculated, brother?" asked Appleton. "Why, I thought you had it in the natural way."—Lippincott's.

Nerves Were So Bad
THOUGHT SHE WOULD GO OUT OF HER MIND.
Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.
Many women become run down and worn out by household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with the nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.
On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.
Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the nerves, strengthen the heart and build up the entire system.
Mrs. Archie Goodine, Tilley, N.B., writes:—"When I was troubled with my heart two years ago, I was very bad. My nerves were so unstrung that sometimes I would almost go out of my mind. I doctored myself with everything I could get, until at last I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they have cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this wonderful remedy, and will recommend it to all sufferers."

PRUNING TIME

By W. T. Brierley

The orchard trees should be pruned before the buds begin to swell. The trees can be put into fairly good shape by careful work but this must not be done all at once if it means the removal of a considerable quantity of wood. If properly done there will be no evil results and the work of spraying, thinning and harvesting will be made easier.

Make all cuts close up so that no stubs are left to die and start decay in the heart of the tree. After the wound is made, if it is more than three-quarters of an inch across, be sure to give it a good coat of paint, or of melted grating wax.

Cut all dead or injured wood for a start and then remove some of the tangled crossing branches in the centre. This will open up the centre, and give fruit of better color on the shady side of the tree. Some heading back may be needed, but it will be best to leave that for another year if much wood has been removed. Following this plan will give moderate pruning, which will give the best results.

AERIAL TIME SIGNALS.

How They May Be Picked Up by Owners of Wireless Outfits.

The freedom of furnishing vessels at sea with the correct time by wireless has been demonstrated time and again since the government began sending the signals over a year ago. Since that time, too, many jewelers, railway officials and others on land who need the correct time have been taking the messages. The sending instruments are extremely powerful, and any owner of a wireless outfit within their range may get the time absolutely correct twice a day by properly tuning his receiving apparatus.

The stations that send out the reports and the wave lengths used by each are as follows: Arlington, 2,500 meters; Key West, 1,000 meters; New Orleans, 1,000 meters; North Head, 3,000 meters; Eureka, 1,400 meters; San Diego, 2,000 meters; Mare Island, 2,500 meters.

The time signals have been distinctly noted over 2,000 miles from the sending station, and as the waves travel 186,000 miles a second the difference between the sending and receiving time is practically nil.

'All the stations send the time signals at noon and 10 p. m., the first three according to seventy-fifth meridian time and the last four according to one hundred and twentieth meridian time. The signals begin five minutes before noon and 10 p. m. Every second is sounded except the twenty-ninth in each minute, the last five seconds of the first four minutes and the last ten seconds of the fifth minute; then at noon and 10 p. m. the signal is a longer contact after another ten second break.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Egyptian Cotton Crop Poor.

Cotton experts report that staple cotton crop of Egypt is poorer this year than in 1913, and they comment on the amount of dead cotton and the ravages of the boll worm.

WHOOPING COUGH

Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly completely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

GLACIERS OF THE ALPS.

Most of Them Appear to Be Melting and Retreating.

Recent new measurements by the Swiss Alpine club confirm the continued recession of the Swiss glaciers. In spite of the bad weather of 1912 and in spite of the fact that some of the glaciers were protected by heavy snowfalls or have had hardly any sunshine, their liquefaction continues to proceed at an increasing rate.

The largest of the glaciers, L'Aletsch, has retreated ten feet, following on nearly sixty feet in 1911, and rather more in 1910. The Rhine glacier has gone back thirty-four feet in addition to the seventy feet lost in the previous two years. An exception to the general rule appears at first to be furnished by the two glaciers of Grindelwald, which have come on since last year, but the advance does not compensate for the loss of the previous year, and since 1905 the two glaciers have lost nearly a quarter of a mile. Their temporary advance is clearly attributable to the inclement weather of last year.

Nearly all the smaller glaciers, out of the fifty-two surveyed by the Alpine club, show some retreat, and the largest loss appears to be that of the Palu glacier, near Bernina, which is losing regularly seventy feet a year. Periods of recession of the Swiss glaciers have been noted before, and they have been followed by periods of advance, so that it has been suggested that the present instances are dependent merely on cycles of less rainy or snowy winters and that there is no permanent glacier loss.—London Post.

Thomas Hardy at Home.

A London paper, commenting upon the standing of Thomas Hardy with his townspeople, says: "In point of fact the presence of Thomas Hardy—a legend to the great world — means practically nothing to the life of Dorchester. Its farmers, factors, shopkeepers, keen, plump, rosy, practical men, who are hard as nails at a bargain and 'do themselves well,' look upon Thomas Hardy as the son of his father and the brother of his brother. They know dimly that he has 'made a good thing out of book writing.' They respect him. They are proud to know that the world rings with his fame. But they wonder why."

Youre not really sick, still you don't feel "just right."

"While on a trip with a survey party in Northern Ontario two years ago, I contracted rheumatism through exposure and sleeping in damp clothes. When I returned home I was very bad, and the pain in my joints was something awful. I was advised to try Wesden's Kidney Pills, and after taking four boxes my rheumatism was entirely gone. Satisfied.

There is supreme satisfaction in knowing just what you want, and getting it. There is very great lack of satisfaction in not knowing exactly what you want and getting something you are not quite sure of. If you will read the advertising columns, you will probably find just what you want, and where to get it. The makers and sellers of things, good to eat or to wear, do not make any mystery of their business. They tell you, as plainly as print can, what they have, and how good it is, and most of them give an unqualified guarantee of satisfaction. Read the advertisements, know what you want, and insist upon getting it.

Shy on Names.

One would suppose that even in large families parents wouldn't run out of names to give their children. But a certain lack of imagination—or material—is evident in sections of the foreign populated west side. A United Charities worker on one of her recent investigations came across a family where three of the young ones were named Joe. Her first thought was that either the father or mother had been married more than once, but to her amazement such did not prove to be the case. The mother simply liked the name Joe and took the path of least resistance.

"But," asked the visitor, turning to one of the little fellows, "how do you know when to come when your mamma wants you?"

"Oh, that's easy," was the reply. "When she wants me she calls 'Joe,' and I come, and when she wants my brother, why, he comes."

This explanation is still rather unsatisfactory, but the practice of calling several children in one family by the same name, I understand, is not uncommon in Chicago.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Freak in Stone.

The rocky maze of Prachov, near Japan, in northern Bohemia, is a veritable natural curiosity. It has been well described as a gigantic "freak in stone." To enter the labyrinth without a guide is a perilous proceeding, for an unwary adventurer would probably speedily be lost in the tortuous windings of the maze, where the paths are so narrow and crooked and the cliffs on the side so high that the explorer soon loses all idea of locality. In days of fiery persecution the Moravian and Bohemian brethren's secret prayer meetings used to be held here, just as the early Christians assembled to worship in the catacombs. The cliffs are honeycombed with cells, and at the far end of the maze is a rock castle where in the old days a robber baron lived and took toll of all wayfarers. The shape of some of the rocks is very curious. There are, for instance, the "bishop and miter," the "Madonna and the child" and many others.—London Sketch.

Boys and Sleep.

One thing a growing boy wants to be long on is sleep, and yet he is most apt to be careless about it. It is during sleep that a boy grows most and catches up. During his waking hours he tears down and burns up more tissue than he builds. Good, sound and sufficient sleep is essential to growth, strength and endurance. A boy scout should have at least nine or ten hours of sleep out of every twenty-four. If you lose out on this amount on one day make it up the next. Whenever unusually tired or when you feel out of trim stay in bed a few hours more if it is possible. A boy should wake up each morning feeling like a fighting cock. When he doesn't he ought to get to bed earlier that night. Sleep is a wonderful restorative and tonic. It helps to store up energy and conserve strength.—"Boy Scouts of America."

Manners in Russia.

Mme. Viardot, the famous musician, gives one a poor impression of Russian manners from the account she narrates in her "Memories and Adventures" of a visit to the Crimea in 1858. Their "want of logic" amused her.

"It enables them to be scrupulously clean in their persons," she says, "and yet they are not nice in their table manners. One substitutes his finger for his fork, another drinks out of the cream jug, a third cools his perspiring brow with the bread knife."

But, if their manners were doubtful, their music was divine. "The whole nation is thoroughly musical, down to the lowest." And in the matter of manners, as in other things, Russia has traveled a long way since 1858.

The Orange.

The orange was brought from Asia to Spain and Portugal in the sixteenth century. It was taken to South America by the early explorers and ran wild in the forests of the Amazon. Originally a small, sour fruit, it has been cultivated up to its present size and sweetness. The orange industry began in the United States about 1875 and about 1885 was well advanced. The number of orange trees in this country is now close to 10,000,000, of which California has about 60 per cent and Florida 30, the remainder being chiefly in Louisiana and Arizona.

Significant.

An amusing story is told concerning the Duke of Sutherland by Lord Suffield in "My Memories." When the Shah of Persia visited England the late King Edward, who was then Prince of Wales, told him that the Duke of Sutherland owned large estates in Scotland as well as in England. The Shah is alleged to have said, "He must be very rich. Of course, when you come to the throne you will"— And here he made an expressive gesture with his finger across his throat.

Dream Came True.

One recorded instance of a dream that came true, which was authenticated by the dreamer relating it at once to a number of persons, was that concerning the assassination of Spencer Perceval in 1812. Mr. J. Williams, living at Redruth, in Cornwall, England, on May 3, 1812, eight days before the occurrence, dreamt three times in the same night that he saw a Mr. Perceval shot in the lobby of the House of Commons by a man in a brown coat. The impression made was so deep that he consulted his brother and other people as to the propriety of communicating with Perceval, but they dissuaded him. After the event he went up to the House of Commons and pointed out the exact spot where Bellingham stood when he fired. — London Daily Chronicle.

Why India Imports Buckets.

The European element in India makes a specially large use of imported buckets and pails. For instance, there are very few houses in India, except in Bombay and Calcutta, equipped with forced water supply and pipes and faucets for turning on water (at least above the first floor). This means that all the water for one's bath must first be poured into galvanized iron buckets or pails and brought into the bathroom by servants or coolies and then poured into the bathtub.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to flush Kidneys if Back hurts or Bladder bothers

If you have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyses the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralise these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in glass of water before breakfast for few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralise the acids in urine, so no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

Tragedy of Cleaning Our Shoes.

In "America as I Saw It" Mrs. Alec Tweedie, writing of our home life, says:

"But home life—where is it? The poor man who pays so heavily for everything cannot even get his boots blackened at home, and he has to go into the streets to the nearest 'shine' for the purpose. At the street corners of every town are high, strange looking chairs under an awning, and there the men—aye, and women, too—sit solemnly, with a foot reposing on each leg rest placed there for the purpose, and while they read their morning papers a darky browns boots for fivepence or blacks them for twopence halfpenny. Even in hotels it is difficult to get boots cleaned, and they have to be put on dirty and worn by their owner down to the boot room, where, in the larger hotels, they are now kind enough to have a separate department for ladies. "Is the land of luxury, but not of comfort. Those little comforts, which to us in England are the necessities of life, are not to be found in America. Why? Because there are few people to render service."

Clement Moore's One Poem.

Just one poem was written by Clement Clarke Moore, whose grave is in Trinity churchyard, at One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street, Washington heights. "'Twas the Night Before Christmas" lives because it touches now and has always touched human hearts. It was put into an autograph album in 1822 and published a couple of years later without the consent of the author, who was professor of Greek and Hebrew at Columbia college and did not think it comported with his dignity to write children's verse. Dr. Moore died in 1863 at the ripe age of eighty-four. His fame as a scholar is lost. His fame as the author of that one real poem will live while the English language is spoken and read anywhere on earth.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Who Was Daffydowndilly?

Mother Goose, like all world people, never told half she knew. Poetess laureate of the English speaking nursery, her most complete achievements in rime are yet of an incompleteness that insure us against satiety. In these shreds and patches of verse, those isolated couplets and quatrains suggesting so much and saying so little, we perceive the promise of that perfected art foreshadowed in the unfinished tales of a Dickens and a Stevenson. Rudyard Kipling, deliberately fashioning metrical fragments for preludes to his Indian tales, struck a note seldom sustained in his completed compositions.

Who was Daffydowndilly, and what did she do when she came to town? Was Jumping Joan flesh, fairy or symbol? Would we laugh or cry did we understand the fantastic apparition of Banbury Cross? Why did Margery Daw sell her bed to lie upon straw, and was there not something behind the appearance of her purely eccentric depravity?—W. T. Farmed in Century.

Sign of Poverty.

It rained Saturday. And on the morning of Saturday—not so very early in the morning, but well before the ordinary man's luncheon hour—a friend of ours met an acquaintance strolling along. Do you remember the fellow who would not carry a latchkey because it spoiled the set of his clothes? Well, it was that fellow.

"Gee whizz, fellow!" said our friend. "You are wandering along here in the rain just as if it was fine weather. You will catch your death of cold. Why don't you carry an umbrella?"

"Oh, I don't like to carry an umbrella," answered the other.

"Afraid you'll lose it?"

"Oh, no; it isn't that. But it seems so vulgar to carry an umbrella—looks as though a fellow didn't have another suit of clothes, don't you know?"—Boston Advertiser.

Japanese Goldfish.

There is a great variety of Japanese goldfish. The more common "fantails," "fringe tails" and "comets" cost from 25 cents to $5 apiece, and those bulging eyed aristocrats of the finny world, the telescope fish, will cost from $5 apiece up, according to shape, color, size, eyes, etc.

Fish are subject to a few diseases, but for the amateur the principal thing to remember is that salt water is the universal remedy. If a fish is not in usual health and the trouble is neither due to overcrowding or overfeeding a five minute bath in salt water every day for a week will bring him back to health.

Goldfish often live to a great age. Some goldfish in a Washington aquarium are known to be fifty years old, and, by careful measurement, have not grown in over thirty years.—Farm and Fireside.

Our Japanese Sisters.

All girls in Japan are taught ethics. They are told to be filial to their parents, true to their friends, kind to brothers and sisters and to live peacefully with their husbands. These principles are taught to boys and girls alike since 1890, when the emperor commanded it. Before that girls were taught according to the laws of the Japanese sage, Kaibara, that their great duty in life was obedience, first to their parents and then to their husbands. They were especially instructed that they must regard their husbands as gods. It is pretty hard to make a twentieth century woman subscribe to that doctrine even in Japan. It is lucky that it has been dropped there, though it is still in full force in India, Persia and in most of Turkey and China.—Kate Upson Clark in Leslie's.

Old London Bookshops.

Just within the gateway of Gray's Inn, London, is the greatest curiosity of the lot—the famous old bookshop of Jacob Tonson, Pope's publisher, which is now the head porter's lodge. Here he published Addison's "Campaign." After him, Osborne, the bookseller, whom Johnson immortalised by knocking down, had the premises.

The shop is often confused with the one under the Holborn gateway, which is erroneously said to be the shop of Tonson. This was occupied by Tomes, the publisher of the first edition of Bacon's "Two Bookes of the Proficience and Advancement of Learning" (1605).

OPENING UP AFRICA.

Cape-To-Cairo Railway Is Bringing Town Incognitos To Light.

Several factors make a reference to the Cape to Cairo project particularly appropriate at the moment, says H. J. Shepstone in The London Graphic. There is, first, the enormous advance made during the last few years, and, in the second place, the recent announcement that the Belgian Government has ceded to Britain a strip of land in the Congo, thus making it possible for the railway to traverse British territory throughout its entire length of 6,944 miles, that being the distance from Cape Town to Cairo, or 7,074 miles if we include the journey to the sea at Alexandria.

We get an idea of the rapidity with which the central regions of Africa are being opened up to commerce and civilization by means of the railway when it is stated that northward the track has been laid to within a short distance of Bukama, right in the heart of the Congo, though at present passengers can travel only as far as Elizabethville, also in the Congo, some 2,321 miles north of Cape Town. Train service is expected, however, to be established with Bukama, on the Congo river, early this spring. Then from Cairo the rails have been pushed southward to Kosti, on the Nile, some 1,370 miles from Cairo, right in the heart of the Soudan, though it may be added that there is a gap of 208 miles between Wady Halfa and Amuan, where steamers ply regularly.

Several short lines now nearing completion will materially assist the engineers in linking up this great transcontinental railway, notably between Congolo and Kindu, 217 miles in length, now completed, and the shorter line of seventy-seven miles from Pentherville to Stanleyville, where one crosses the Equator, which should be completed this spring. These lines have been constructed because of the impossibility of using the Congo river between these points for transport purposes on account of the rapids. On the other sections of the river, as well as on the Nile and also upon the Albert Nyanza Lake, steamers are to be placed to run in conjunction with the railway, which means that we have some 700 miles of rails to lay to establish a through communication. Within two years at the most it should be possible to travel all the way from Cape Town to Cairo by train and boat.

Although the Cape-to-Cairo Railway will now be British throughout, it must not be forgotten that its object is purely commercial. Starting, as it does, from the east end of the Mediterranean, it will never be able to compete against the direct sea-route from England to the Cape in point of speed. But, like a gigantic backbone, it will carry the nerves of commercial life along the continent, promote local traffic, and, by means of feeder lines to the oceans on east and west, furnish outlets for the great future trade of Africa's wealthiest regions—the central section.

Boiled In the Sea.

The steamer Makambo, which has arrived at Sydney, Australia, reports that the whole face of Ambryn Island, New Hebrides, Southern Pacific, has been altered as the result of the volcanic eruption there in January.

The site of the mission hospital is now fathoms beneath the sea, while there are two miles of hilly country where there was previously sea. During the eruption the sea was boiling and turtles and fish rose to the surface cooked.

Dr. Bowie, the principal missionary on Ambryn Island, says one by one the mountains burst into flames, until ten volcanoes were emitting molten lava. There was no panic among the natives, who numbered 2,500, in the threatened districts, but over 100 people perished.

Some natives were drawn into the streams of lava and others were blown away in the boats in which they had taken refuge and were drowned or boiled in the sea.

Order Your Own Weather.

Soon we will be able to have any kind of weather we want. If we want fine weather all that is necessary is to send up positive electricity into the clouds, and if rain is wanted negative electricity is discharged and a shower will result.

Such is the suggestion made by Sir Oliver Lodge before the Institute of Electrical Engineers in London. The possibility of controlling the weather caused much interest among the engineers.

Cardinal Manning, the famous English churchman, was gaunt of face. The great ecclesiastic's appearance was so ascetic that he seemed to have been almost starved. Once in Liverpool he visited a convent, and the cook knelt to him for a blessing, which she got.

BLACK HAND SECRETS REVEALED BY CHIEF OF SECRET SERVICE

The Baffling Mystery of the Barrel Murder

By William J. Flynn

William J. Flynn

Introduction.

IMAGINE a monstrous spider web. In place of filaments all but ethereal each slender thread of the web is a living organism electrified by human energy and intelligence.

The web spans all directions; its centre hangs in a certain desk in the city of Washington, and radiates to a thousand points scattered over the United States. At the desk sits William J. Flynn, and through his eyes the United States Secret Service, of which he is chief, sees all things which are of a special interest to Uncle Sam. Here is an intellect—an almost superhuman force—literally touching and controlling every thread of this wonderful spider web organization. A quick nod from the chief, the nervous clicking of a telegraph key and one of the filaments of the web is galvanized into activity and a criminal or a band of lawbreakers is hopelessly entangled.

Imagine this and you will gain a glimpse of the scope and potency of the Secret Service Bureau and you will understand something of how Chief Flynn works. Each day there come to his desk in the Treasury Building, Washington, reports from operatives scattered all over the country, informing the head of the bureau of the movements in detail of the criminals for whom the web is ready. These operatives are men of many nationalities. Sometimes they communicate with Washington by telephone, sometimes by letter, less often by telegraph in code. Many of these operatives are unknown to one another. They may sit at table together and not know it. They may travel together for hours, exchanging stories and cigars, but neither knows that the other is engaged upon the business of the spider web.

Chief Flynn is the only living person who knows them all. He has their names and addresses, but in the files of the service they are only known by number. The chief often sees and talks with his operatives, but should one of them see him in conversation with another he would never guess of what the two were talking.

This is the man—William J. Flynn, chief of the United States Secret Service—who will tell, in a series of ten articles, written expressly for us, more than has ever been revealed of the workings and the exploits of the Secret Service. There are many things which Chief Flynn cannot make public. A little slip of the tongue, a word too much emphasized, and he would hopelessly doom a score or more faithful agents of the service to a horrible death. Not only this, but he must in no way impair the competency of the bureau of which he is chief.

For a year and a half he made such a phenomenal record that John Wilkie, then Chief of the Secret Service, sent him to Pittsburg as head of the Western district of Pennsylvania. So promptly and decisively did he clean up this district, which was infested with counterfeiters, that Wilkie made him Chief of the Department of the East.

Mr. Flynn has been engaged in almost a constant battle of wits with counterfeiters for more than fifteen years, most of the time in New York, the busiest centre for the making of spurious notes in the United States.

In this work Chief Flynn pitted himself against the mighty power of the Black Hand and its murderous leaders, and it is chiefly of his desperate fight against this organization that he will tell in his own way in these articles. Many stories will be related for the first time, and several mysteries which have long baffled the police of New York and other cities will be cleared up. If there is any doubt in your mind that the Black Hand exists you should read these articles. Chief Flynn himself says that its organization and methods tax to the utmost the credulity of the American mind. It is difficult to believe that such a body of men can flourish in matter of fact America, yet it does, and Chief Flynn will divulge for the first time the very ritual of the society, the secret ceremonies they hold, and the way in which they plot murder and execute their schemes.

How does the Chief know this ritual? That would be telling the story too fast. He will describe it in his own way.

"A detective," he says, "should have some natural ability and a whole lot of common sense. He should also be patient and industrious. False whiskers and rubber boots belong to the melodrama—best seats in the house thirty cents.

"Steady hammering—that's my doctrine and advice. It doesn't do to drop a case under pressure of a new matter. Reserve a place for it in the back of the head. Think of it. Hammer away at it, here a little, there a little, until the men you are after are either apprehended or dead."

That is what Chief Flynn did with the Lupo-Morello band, as you shall see—read in all its astounding and dramatic details, which reveal facts never before made public.

Mr. Flynn was born in New York City forty-five years ago. After being educated in the public schools of the city he went into the plumbing business and owned a large establishment before he entered the Secret Service. If you were to ask the chief why he deserted plumbing for his present profession he would probably tell you:—

"Oh, I got tired of working so hard and seeing my men do the same. I might have become a prominent plumber had I stuck to the job, but I am glad I followed my bent and am now a detective."

There are a score of stories of his fairness and kindliness. An instance is the treatment he accorded to Comito—the Sheep—whose confession will be detailed in the subsequent articles. This, by the way, is another of the things described for the first time, and it plays upon the keyboard of all the emotions and passions that go to make up humanity.

Recently a man high in the federal government in Washington questioned the existence of a Black Hand organization. For several nights Chief Flynn was closeted with this official, telling him just what he is going to tell in this newspaper.

Do you doubt that there is a Black Hand in America?

This official no longer doubts.

Here Chief Flynn begins to tell you why.

By William J. Flynn, Chief of the United States Secret Service.

THERE is a "Black Hand" Society. It is not a figment of fiction, not the invention of a reporter adept in the coin of phrases, but a group of men bonded together by such obligations and for such detestable purposes as to readily test the credulity of the American mind.

I have had men in authority ask me if such a band of criminals actually exists in America, wishing to know the truth so that they might lend their aid in any effort put forth for the purpose of suppressing and removing from our midst the organization.

Giuseppe Morello and Ignazio Lupo, the Wolf, leaders of the society, languish behind bars in the federal prison in Atlanta, Ga.' Comito, the Sheep, whose confession helped to put them there, is in the Argentine, where he has reason to feel secure against the vengeance of the band, knowing that were he killed many Black Handers would lose their lives for his. Many of the men who were once powerful in the society are slain or have been placed by less violent means where their activities are harmless, but the work of the Black Hand goes on.

The headquarters of the Black Hand Society are in New York city, and it is there its members are most active in preying on their countrymen, robbing the unwary and living up to their pledges to grow wealthy by terrorizing Italians, to hurl bombs to destroy the property of those who refuse to submit to blackmail, to kidnap little children, to steal horses, to poison the animals of their enemies, to make counterfeit money and to commit murder when there is necessity.

All that I know of this organization I must not tell, for to do so would jeopardize the lives of men who serve the government unknown to society, unknown even to one another, identified in the files of the United States Secret Service merely by numerals. Should I divulge the names of these men—and I am the only person who knows them — THEY WOULD MEET CERTAIN DEATH.

But that is quite a story in itself. For the present I must show you why I make the categorical statement, "There is a Black Hand Society."

MRS. FRANCES CONNORS left her little room in an east side tenement house early on the morning of April 12, 1903, to go to the bakery for rolls for breakfast. Mrs. Connors was a normal woman and thereby endowed with a generous share of curiosity.

As she passed in front of the New York Mallet Works, at avenue D and Eleventh street, she noticed a barrel standing near the curb. An overcoat was thrown over the head of the barrel. It was a decent looking coat, not ragged enough to be thrown away, and Mrs. Connors' curiosity grew.

Why should any one, even a wealthy person, throw away an overcoat, which was not worn out.

She paused in her walking and regarded the barrel. Her interest increased. It had been drizzling all night, yet the overcoat was scarcely wet. It couldn't have been lying there very long. She glanced up and down the street. No one was in sight. Perhaps the coat was placed there to keep the contents of the barrel dry. That was strange, to use a coat for such a purpose. There would be no harm in gratifying her curiosity.

Mrs. Connors stepped to the barrel, lifted a corner of the garment and peered in. A cry of terror broke from her lips. She dropped the coat back over the grisly thing she had seen and staggered, pale and shaken, away from the barrel.

Other persons had seen her strange actions. In a moment a little group, also fired by curiosity, collected. The frightened woman stammered out what she had seen. Some one ran for a policeman, an ambulance was sent for, and the crowd grew.

Meanwhile a policeman drew the body of a man from the barrel, into which it had been jammed. When the ambulance surgeon arrived he announced what all had known. The man was dead. A strip of gunnysack had been wound around his neck, hiding a dozen wounds, any one of which would have caused death. The neighborhood was in a panic. The Police Department was at sea, and the entire city of New York was agog before Mrs. Connors recovered from the shock of her discovery.

At the Union Market police station it was determined that the man had been dead at least two hours. He seemed about forty years old and well set up. His complexion was swarthy and his ears were pierced for the rings, after the manner of many Sicilians. His clothing was of good quality and from his general appearance it was judged that he was not a laborer. The forehead was high and receding, covered with thin curly hair of a light brown tinge. His mustache was streaked with gray. On the left cheek were two old scars which formed an inverted letter "V."

Photographs of the man were made promptly and compared with pictures in the rogues' gallery at Police Headquarters, but the victim was not to be identified in that way. The police investigation of the circumstances of the crime was pushed to the utmost. Every detail of the man, his clothing and the barrel was recorded.

It was determined that at least two weapons had been used by the murderer or murderers. A wound directly below the left ear had been inflicted with a narrow two-edged blade and the incision was three inches deep. It takes a strong wrist and a heavy lunge to drive a knife in so far at that point. A wound above the "Adam's apple," which penetrated sheer to the spinal cord, had apparently been made with the same weapon. There were numerous similar wounds of little account, but a deep gash across the throat, literally from ear to ear, had evidently been made with a heavier and more clumsy knife.

All this the coroner found. A search through the clothing of the dead man put a number of details in the hands of the police. The most striking object found was a small brass crucifix, the like of which is not often seen and which to my knowledge was common to no particular locality. It was of foreign make and bore a Latin motto on the scroll work above the figure of the Saviour on the cross. At the base of the cross was a skull and crossbones. Since that time I have come across the same type of crucifix.

In the dead man's overcoat were two handkerchiefs, one small and delicately perfumed. But the only identification mark on the clothing was "Burt & Co., Opposite Produce Exchange," stamped on the shoes, which were well worn and had been patched.

Stencilled on the bottom of the barrel were the letters "W & T," and on the sides "G 283." It had evidently contained sugar, and in the bottom was a layer of sawdust, mixed with which were the burnt stubs of cigars and a quantity of onion peel.

Also there was a note in the handwriting of a woman. Part of two lines were legible and the Italian words "Giorno che venite * * * subito Turgeava" could be made out. The translation is, "Day that you come * * * suddenly the urgency."

Inspector George W. McClusky, then chief of the detective bureau, of New York, took personal charge of the case and directed the work of his men. Every act known to the police was employed. The entire uniformed force was put on the lookout for chance clews, and photographs of the murdered man were distributed in the hope that some policeman would recognize him. None did.

The shoes were so worn that any marks of identification by which Burt & Co. might have determined to whom they were sold had disappeared. The handkerchiefs told nothing. Not a pawnshop in the city had sold a crucifix similar to the one in the possession of the murdered man, nor had any of the regular dealers in such articles.

The markings on the barrel led to no discovery of value. The letter, which was regarded as perhaps the most promising clew, turned out to be only tantalizing. Half a dozen more words obliterated, perhaps only a single word, might have told so much. There was a tendency on the part of many to attribute the crime to a woman or at least to find in a woman the motive, because of the letter. However, as the identity of the victim was not established there was no woman to suspect upon whom suspicion might point.

Of all this I read in the evening papers. I was at that time watching in New York a band of Sicilians whom I suspected of certain crimes of which I shall treat later. In short, as long ago as 1903 I was convinced in my own mind of the existence of a Black Hand organization. From descriptions of the murdered man and from photographs it seemed to me that I had seen him. I could not quite place him, yet I was certain that I had seen the man.

I shut myself up with a cigar and pondered the matter. The murder was brought to my attention on April 14. Only two nights previously the band which I had under surveillance had exhibited unusual activity.

On the night of April 12 I was in the possession of sufficient information in regard to this band to feel justified in making a personal expedition into their stronghold. Certain of my men, playing the part of thieves, had gained the confidence of some of the lieutenants of Lupo and Morello and I was shaping up evidence enough to arrest them on a charge of counterfeiting.

On the evening in question I picked up the trail of several members of the band and followed them from their counterfeiting headquarters in the café at Elizabeth and Prince streets to the butcher shop of Vito La Duca, in Stanton street east of the Bowery. The Elizabeth street café was just around the corner from Ignazio Lupo's saloon, in the rear of which Giuseppe Morello conducted a restaurant.

In Vito La Duca's meat store I saw Morello, whom I had arrested four months before with a gang of counterfeiters, but who had been acquitted, though all the others were convicted. Two others who were present in the store were Antonio Genova and Domenico Pecoraro, both of whom I knew well as members of the band I was watching. These three men stood in the rear of the shop in animated conversation and while they talked a fourth man, whose face was strange to me, stood alone on the sidewalk near the door close to the flickering glare of the street light smoking. The three men were evidently arguing and presently they hung up a piece of bagging as a curtain at the door to the street. While I knew the men to be still talking, a covered wagon stopped in front of the shop and two men left it and entered the store. One of them came out almost immediately and drove away. Shortly after eight o'clock the visitors left La Duca's place left. They divided into two groups, the stranger going toward the Bowery with Morello and Pecoraro.

All this in the evening of April 12.

Now, after much thought and pondering the whole thing two nights later the feeling grew that the stranger I had seen in the little butcher shop and the man who was found in the barrel might be one and the same person. Yet the pictures did not seem to portray the same features exactly as I remembered them, and the suit of the dead man was described as blue while I remembered him to be clothed in brown. Of course he might have changed his clothes before meeting his death, but this was not likely.

I could not eliminate from my memory the covered wagon I had seen two nights before. It seemed to possess me. Finally I gave myself up to finding a reason for its presence and the unusual conduct of its drivers.

The more I thought the more I believed that it was the means by which the dead man had been transported from the place where he met his doom to the pavement in avenue D. The men were Italians and associates of the Black Handers. Then, again, the fact that the men in La Duca's had been afraid of being seen and had hung the bagging over the glass door, and the stranger standing apart on the street just outside the door, where he could not hear the talk, all strengthened my suspicions that the man in the barrel was the man I had seen. I knew much of the inside workings of the gang and felt that in some way the stranger had incurred the hatred of the Black Hand.

The murder was not within my province, yet I wanted, if possible, to solve it, partly for my own satisfaction, partly because every fresh fact I learned regarding the organization I was after could be used by me to advantage.

It was in a peculiar, slanting ray of light that I had seen the stranger and I determined to reproduce to the best of my ability the same lighting effect, and make certain of the man before committing myself. Accordingly, I went to the Morgue and viewed the body in the same kind of light in which I had first seen the face. I was no longer in doubt. The dead man was the stranger of La Duca's butcher shop.

To prove this was a different matter. Several of my men went with me to the Morgue. We measured the body according to Bertillon methods. Still the man had not been identified, nor did his measurements correspond with any record in the Bertillon files.

I was positive I was correct in my statement that I had seen the man as described, but I was troubled by the fact that the clothing was blue instead of brown, as I had seen it. Finally, with the aid of my men, I rigged up a light in my office such as I had seen the man standing near on the night of April 12. The clothes were brought from the Morgue and placed under the light. Sure enough, they looked brown instead of blue. I was then sure I was right and that the man had been a victim of the Black Hand.

I at once notified Inspector McClusky, and his men, working in conjunction with certain of mine, arrested eleven of the gang. They were Giuseppe Morello, Ignatio Lupo, Melsina Genova, Vito La Duca, Pietro Inzerillo, Domenico Pecoraro, Lorenzo Lobido, Giuseppe Fanara, Giuseppe La Lamia, Nicola Testa and Luciano Perrino.

All these men were Sicilians, and most of them when arrested were armed with knives or revolvers. On Morello the police found a .45-calibre revolver and a knife tucked in the waistband of his trousers. A cork fixed on the point of the blade prevented it scratching his leg and allowed him to bring it into play with a single motion of the wrist, much more readily than had he carried it in a sheath.

Luciano Perrino, known as "Il Boro" or "Tomasso Petto, the Ox," carried a pistol in a regulation holster and a stiletto in a sheath. Most of the men arrested were in the possession of permits to carry revolvers, issued by the Police Department of New York. It was this round-up of desperate men, most of them armed, which did much to bring about the passage of the law forbidding the carrying of dangerous weapons.

Now, while it was established beyond reasonable doubt that the man whose body was found jammed into the barrel was the stranger I had seen in Vito La Duca's meat shop, we were still at a loss to identify him.

The eleven prisoners were taken to the Morgue, and each one separately was confronted with the murdered man and questioned as to his acquaintance with him.

When Morello, whom I had seen walking with the murdered man, viewed the body he showed not the slightest sign of recognition or of agitation, though my men and detectives watched him as animals do their prey. He shrugged his shoulders and volunteered the statement "Don't know."

Domenico Pecoraro, whom I had also seen with the victim when he left the butcher store, was quite as loquacious. He shrugged his shoulders as only an Italian can, and varied the formula by muttering the words "No understand."

The other nine prisoners denied all acquaintance with the victim of the murder. None of them had ever seen him, they said.

We then hoped that relatives or friends would claim the body and thus establish the victim's identity, but for all we could tell after days of waiting he had died without a single friend, with no relative to care whether he went to Potter's Field or not.

The police redoubled their efforts, but to no avail. Every clew, and there were few enough of them, led to nothing. Each new line, which was run down to no purpose, left the case more baffling.

Joseph Petrosino was at that time in the Italian squad of the New York Detective Bureau. He received an anonymous letter telling him to keep off the case and describing the murder as a "Vendetta," which seemed to the writer of the letter sufficient reason for the barrel crime. Petrosino showed this letter to me. Here was a clew worth following. The writer was evidently afraid to divulge his name, even to the police, out of fear of the vengeance of the terrible Black Hand. I knew of no man so well qualified to handle the case as Petrosino himself, so after carefully thinking out a plan of procedure, I suggested that he go to Sing Sing prison, where several of the Lupo-Morello band were serving terms for counterfeiting.

Petrosino took with him a photograph of the barrel victim and showed it to several of the convicts whom he knew to be identified with the Black Hand. They professed ignorance of the dead man's identity.

It seemed as if it was to be the same story over again, but at last Petrosino showed the photograph to Giuseppe De Prisma, and without telling him of the murder asked him if he knew whose likeness it was.

De Prisma glanced at the detective and alarm showed in his face. He clutched at the pasteboard on which was the likeness of the murdered man's face.

"That is Marsano Benedetto, my brother-in-law," he cried. "What has happened?"

The detective told him that Benedetto was murdered. Giuseppe De Prisma fell to trembling like a leaf. Fear distorted his features. He knew the power that was behind the knife that had slit the throat of Marsano Benedetto, his brother-in-law.

He overcame his fear and it turned to anger. He cursed the murderers in his cell, he shook his fist against the bare walls and he strove a vendetta against the men who had slain his relative by marriage. When he was calmer he convinced Petrosino beyond reasonable doubt that he had identified the victim correctly.

He described a watch chain which had been found in one of Benedetto's pockets and described the curious crucifix which had been found with the body. He told of the scar on the forehead, face and other unmistakable marks of identification. Benedetto, he said, was a stonecutter and lived in Buffalo. For some months he had been out of work, and De Prisma believed he had recently been operating with a band of counterfeiters in New York. This, of course, was the Lupo-Morello gang, but De Prisma, for reasons of his own, would not tell too much. Nor would he tell, if he knew, who was likely to have committed the murder. His vow was vengeance, and he did not intend to aid the law to take over his prerogative. He steadfastly denied that he had the slightest idea who was the guilty man or men.

At last it was learned who the barrel victim was, and Petrosino returned to New York. Together we went to Police Headquarters and examined all the letters and papers taken from the men arrested as suspects in the case. Among the possessions of Luciano Perrino, or "Petto the Ox," I found a pawn ticket for a watch which had been pledged in a Bowery pawn shop for one dollar on the day of the murder.

We sent to Buffalo for Benedetto's wife. To the minutest detail she described the watch which her husband had worn. The one which "the Ox" had pawned was procured and it, tallied, in every particular with the woman's description. She was certain, when it was shown to her, that it had belonged to her husband. Before seeing it she described certain markings and engravings which could have been known only to a person familiar with it.

With the evidence in hand, "Petto the Ox" was indicted by the Grand Jury for murder in the first degree. The other suspects had been held on a charge of murder without bail, but as the evidence was not sufficient to hold them Magistrate Barlow turned them out. The Secret Service continued to watch these men, however, and what developed from this surveillance will be the subject of later chapters.

At this time came fresh evidence of the existence of the Black Hand organization. "Petto the Ox" was apparently penniless and counsel would have been provided for him by the State, but unbeknown, apparently from nowhere a great fund was raised.

High priced counsel were engaged to fight his case in court and money was spent freely in a campaign for his release. This money for the greater part was contributed by members of the society. Some of it was wrung from terrorized Italians, some of it was begged from the "compari," or godfathers, of members of the gang. Every Sicilian has two "compari," and they are bound to aid their charges when they are in trouble.

Meanwhile the police worked tirelessly in efforts to accumulate evidence against Petto. The watch which he had pawned was the only incriminating evidence that unearthed. I was morally certain who had murdered Benedetto, and reports from my men strengthened my belief.

From information in my possession I was certain the Black Hand organization was furnishing the funds to conduct Petto's defence. It was to my interest to find out just who were in this organization and just where the money came from, for I knew the hand to be engaged in counterfeiting. It was at this time that I learned a great deal about the organization of the Black Hand. While Petto was in the Tombs I ascertained that every member of the band was from Corleone, a town about twenty-seven miles from Palermo, Sicily. It was in Palermo that Joseph Petrosino was later murdered while executing a mission for Commissioner Bingham, of the New York Police Department.

I was seeking to get one or more of my operatives into the inner circle of the Black Hand, and I learned that a man to accomplish this must be from Corleone, or he must come recommended by a member of the society who came from Corleone or lived there at present.

"Petto the Ox" was in the Tombs four months awaiting trial. During this time the police bent every effort to produce evidence against him which would hold in court. Meanwhile the Black Hand was raising money for his defence and my men were working into the confidence of the Black Handers. Nevertheless, scarcely a piece of evidence which would have held for a moment in a court of law was unearthed by the police. Petto steadfastly denied his guilt, of course. There was no witness to the crime. Petto had not been seen with the victim by any person who was available as a witness, and the watch was the only slender clew which connected him with the crime.

There were a dozen different ways in which that could be accounted for. Petto's lawyer asked that the prisoner be released on his own recognizance on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence upon which to bring the accused to trial with any fair hope of a conviction. The "Ox" was released.

The barrel murder was more of a mystery than ever. The one man to whom circumstance pointed as guilty of the crime was discharged by the court because there was not sufficient evidence against him to make a conviction even possible. The police tried other clews. They worked once more upon the theory that there was a woman in the case. They tried to find some person with a grievance against Benedetto, but they failed.

Petto disappeared from his accustomed haunts, but the eyes of the Secret Service followed him and the long arm of Uncle Sam hovered over him, ready to strike. What happened to "Petto the Ox" and how I finally solved the mystery of the murder of Marsano Benedetto, which was never solved by the police, I will tell next week. It forges another link in the chain of evidence against the Black Hand.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HIS HEROINE

"Ho-ho-ho!"

The sudden, hearty outburst amidships was contagious, and from the stern of the little boat tossing about on the placid waters of Gloucester harbour, there resounded a rippling laugh, ha-ha-ha!

Then in sweet tones: What am I laughing at, Mr. Irwin? Little wonder that I do laugh, though, for I am very happy! I have had a delightful afternoon and now a moment more will complete my outlines. Painting is but a vacation pastime with me you know, yet I could almost wish it were my life work. What was the joke?

An editorial in a Crimson I found in my pocket. Listen: "The woman's Medical College contributed fifty more female physicians to the world of the sick last week. Let us hope they will remain womanly as well as wise.' I say now, isn't that rich?

From what viewpoint, pray?

Oh, I've an all round antipathy toward women doctors, that's all.

Indeed?

That's right! I wrote a paper on this when at Harvard. It appeared in the Lampoon, and at one jump I was famous.

Ridicule?

Alpha to Omega!

Why?

There was a marked stress on that word, and the dark eyes of the questioner looked searchingly into the face of the stalwart on the centre thwart.

Why? Oh, on general principles. From personal experiences?

Ho-ho-ho! I'm cornered now, that's a fact. Well, here goes! During my first year at Cambridge I didn't live in the yard, but roomed outside. I waked up one morning to be told by my landlady I'd had a bad spell o' typhoid. Then, in came her friend, a woman doctor. It seems I'd been under her care. I wanted to get up. She insisted I should not, and we clashed.

Which won?

That's the very point. Her obduracy was the genesis of my feeling toward her sister craft. They all get arbitrary, and that isn't womanly.

"Indeed! Well, Mr. Irwin, I must say yours is at least a novel definition for lack of womanliness. But am I to understand by all this that you are one of the now very few individuals who yet profess to believe it impossible for a woman to practice medicine and remain womanly?

That's right, Miss Ainsley. As between the two, mankind admires womanliness in a woman rather than wisdom. I do not say that the female doctor allows herself to lose sight of every interest in her life save her encyclopaedia and pill box.

"My!"

The exclamation seemed to voice more than astonishment. A seance followed, during which Miss Ainsley worked rapidly. Then she spoke reflectively. "I do not agree with you, Mr. Irwin. When first the woman doctor was heralded your views may have been the expectation. She has, however, proven the contrary; for she remains in every sense of the word, womanly! Again, from my point of view the natural sympathy and tenderness of her sex seems particularly adapted to easing the sufferings of—"

"Hold on, Miss Ainsley, please! We won't argue the matter, for I perceive trouble might ensue. You may remain their champion! I say, Miss Ainsley, don't rush things! Is the painting finished?"

Yes. That is, all that I can do here, and I feel sure, with that glorious sunset for my background, it will fulfill my every anticipation. It was kind of you to humor my whim to come out here, Mr. Irwin, and you have been very, very patient. I certainly do thank you. Row ashore now, please.

Must I hurry?

As you like.

Irwin settled himself, placed his oars, put the stern shoreward and began rowing.

This isn't much of a stroke, is it? he asked laughingly. When competing for old Harvard, though, I could row! Back, arms, legs, everything went into it! Being the hardy, rugged mortal I am I owe to college athletics, for they had this old body trained to a high point of perfection. Heigho! I missed the training since I buckled down to literary work. That reminds me, Miss Ainsley, you spoke of being happy. That's exactly how you have looked all afternoon, and watching you, I have called it the face illumined, and have rejoiced at his privilege of being of service to you. Another thing I thought of: I know your Christian name is Elisabeth, but I've wondered what the folks at home call you—Lizzie?

A pallor spread the sun-tanned features of the young woman, and slowly came the word: "I have no home, Mr. Irwin—that is, beyond the one I make for myself. My parents were missionaries in Morocco. Father died, and it was a great shock to my mother. She did not long survive him.

The voice was low and quivering. Irwin ceased rowing and extending a hand to his companion, said soothingly: So that was too bad! Yet do you know I believe, just as your mother loved, so would you love deeply, strongly, sweetly, always. There's nothing of the unloved woman about you, not a mite! Say don't spring on me that old remark about this being 'sudden, will you?'

What being sudden?

My proposal.

Proposal? Why, Mr. Irwin, you haven't known me quite two weeks.

Two weeks? I believe I have always known you! All I wonder is, why Heaven kept us apart so long! In all my life I never was happier than when you allowed me to carry your suitcase when we met on the Gloucester, to study the fisher folks home life, as a setting for my new novel. I have also found my heroine, the noblest, dearest, sweetest, lovable and womanly little woman in all the world! Lizzie, you are my heroine. I love you. In this, my life-book, what shall the climax me?

The hand not within the outstretched palm slipped into a small handbag, and as she handed Irwin a bit of pasteboard, in low, yet steady tones Miss Ainsley said: "Will you read my business card. Then please row me ashore quickly."

In the semi-darkness Irwin read: ELIZABETH AINSLEY, M.D.

Two Doctors Said He Had Consumption.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HIM.

Mrs. John Elliff, St. John's West, Ont., writes:—"My little boy was very bad with whooping cough and severe cold. I went to two doctors with him, and they said he had Consumption. I could get no relief for him, he would cough all night long, with a dry hacking cough.

I was persuaded to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and was surprised to see the first bottle did him good. I have had five bottles, and they cured him, he rests well at night now, and is well and hearty. If he gets a cold we always give him Pine Syrup and he is soon better. I did not think I could raise him, but I am thankful to say Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup saved him from being a consumptive."

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the earlier stages of throat and lung trouble, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge "Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is without an equal for all affections of the Throat and Lungs.

WEDDING CUSTOMS.

Curious Practices From Odd Corners of the World.

Love, the poet's theme, is always interesting, always new—interesting even to those to whom it comes merely as a dream of the golden past, now in its beautiful realization to the youthful and favored before whom are the possibilities of many years. Destiny awaits them, there is no black past to mar the present, no dull dread to cast its shadows over the future. Life and youth and love exist to give a roseate hue to all the long, beautiful years in store.

Alas! that disappointment should arise, disillusion, care, trouble—disenchantment.

But in fifty per cent. of the marriages that take place, these conditions are inevitable. The man and woman who can steer clear of these difficulties are indeed happy, and can steer ahead of troubles, but when such troubles can no longer be avoided, who can meet them hand in hand—without needless upbraidings or cruel reproaches.

Directly the wife assumes the husband's name, she assumes a proportion of the responsibilities in life that also belong to him. It is interesting to know the origin of the lady assuming the gentleman's name on marriage. This custom is a Roman one. When Julia became the wife of Pompey, she was known as "Julia of Pompey." Later on the custom still prevailed with the exception that the "of" was omitted.

In some countries, Iceland, for instance, the reverse is the custom, the husband assuming the wife's name.

The derivation of the word "wedding" is from the "wed" or security which the bridegroom-elect gave at the time of betrothal, the "wed" being placed in the hands of trustees, and as a further sign that he was betrothed he wore a ring. As for the wedding ring, that, we are shown by history, was first originated and designed by Prometheus, being fashioned from iron and adamant.

The wedding-cake, too, is said to have originated as a Roman custom. It was customary for the bride to hold in her left hand three ears of wheat, while at a later period the bride wore a chaplet of wheat. The bridesmaids strewed grains of corn or crumbs of cake upon the newly-wed couple, and the friends present used to collect and eat the symbolised morsels. The wedding cake actually came into fashion quite recently. It was at first composed simply of solid squares of cake held collectively by the icing only. As soon as the icing was broken, the cakes fell to pieces, and were eaten with much enjoyment by the guests.

Wedding favors and that pretty device, the true lover's knot, are of Danish origin, the later meaning, "I plight my troth."

The custom of throwing a shoe after the happy pair is a very old one, and doubtless arose from the former custom of the father giving a shoe to the young husband as a token that he gave to him all power over his daughter.

A Mourning Dog.

A resident of Mansfield, Eng., is very proud of his dog Floss, which has become accustomed to carry messages from Mansfield to Sutton, three miles away, with surprising quickness. Floss's most notable performance was when her master sent her from Mansfield to Cutton with a note in a blinding snowstorm, but the dog brought an answer back, doing the journey of six miles in an hour. The dog is also used by a football team to take half-time and full-time scores of the match from the field to an inn.

BROTHER NOVELISTS.

Silas and Joseph Hocking a Notable Example of Kin Gentlemen.

Under the title of "Famous Brethren," a recent issue of The Windsor Magazine contains a second series of portraits of well-known men of our time who belong to groups of two or more brothers of either parallel or divergent talents. In the accompanying letterpress the anecdotal biographer says:

"The laurels of the greatly successful novelists are shared by the two brothers, Mr. Silas and Mr. Joseph Hocking, whose novels enjoy an extraordinary popularity. They are Cornishmen, and are proud of their Celtic strain, to which they attribute in great measure their imaginative gifts. They were reared in a world of fancy, for their mother used to hold her boys spell-bound as she invented for them wonderful stories of the revels of pixies and fairies. Mr. Silas Hocking is eleven years older than his brother. He entered the ministry, and has held various pastorates. He has also twice stood for Parliament. But his vocation is preeminently that of the novelist. When he was about seven years old 'The Arabian Nights' fell into his hands. He read it in fear and trembling, for it was not approved of at home, and the book changed everything for the boy. It beat 'The Pilgrim's Progress,' and set him athirst for more exciting adventures. At sixteen he competed for a prize offered for a temperance story. Of his MS. he heard no more. Since 1878, when he published "Alec Green," he has sent forth a constant succession of widely-read novels.

"His brother, Joseph, even as a small boy, dreamed of achieving fame as a novelist, but farming and surveying were his first occupations. Then he received an unmistakable call to the ministry; but the spell of the story was on him, and would not be denied. He began with 'Elrad the Hie,' a novel based on a tour in Palestine. Other stories followed, but his first solid success came with 'All Men Are Liars,' a story written as a counterblast to pessimism, which appeared in 1895. Since then Mr. Joseph Hocking, like his brother, has not missed a year, and sometimes he has published two novels within the twelvemonth. Although the work of Mr. Silas Hocking is often written 'with a purpose,' and that of Mr. Joseph Hocking is sometimes written upon a controversial theme, and, as such finds a large part of its appeal, both authors can, when they choose, work with no less success along lines entirely unsectarian and rich in appeal to the general reader. Both writers are regarded with affection by a vast following."

Brought Phil May to Time.

Phil May, like most geniuses, was erratic, and it was not easy to get him to deliver his drawings on time. Carmichael Thomas, who had commissioned some special drawings for The London Graphic, secured their delivery in a strikingly original and highly successful way.

When May woke up in the morning he found a company of sandwich men pacing up and down before his flat carrying boards that announced Phil May drawings in a special number of The Graphic. Wherever May went that day the sandwich men followed him. When he chartered a hansom they chartered hansoms, and finally, as May told the story, he was driven to taking the first train down to the seaside. When he arrived there he got another jolt, for the first thing that met his eyes were the Graphic sandwich men parading outside his hotel. He went inside, sat down and finished the drawings.

Thus importunity and Carmichael Thomas conquered.

They're out today for good, I think,
For they are giving my plants a drink.

The rain goblins, frolicsome elves,
Are having sport all to themselves.
But it's for others they're at work.
Raindrops I never knew to shirk.

O rain goblins, we welcome you,
For you come our parched lips to wet
As a blessing you're here again.
We could not live without the rain.

Welsh Church Bill Needs Only One Reading In Commons.

LONDON, April 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—The Government is completely satisfied with Tuesday night's division on the Welsh Disestablishment Bill, although compared with last year's figures there is a drop of fifteen votes.

The figures were: For the bill, 249; against it, 265. Two Liberals abstained from voting, and one of them, Sir E. Beauchamp, voted against the bill. The Irish Nationalists attended in full force, no fewer than seventy of them supporting the Government.

This marks the third succeeding session in which the Commons have affirmed the principle of the present measure. It now only remains for the bill to be read a third time and be submitted to the Lords one month before the session is through to give it the privileges of the Parliament Act.

Hydro Commission Opposes.

OTTAWA, April 23.—The Hydro-Electric Commission has asked that the injunction against the W. C. Edwards Electrical Development bill, which was before the Private Bills Committee Tuesday, be sustained, as the way it stands at present it would be injurious to the Hydro-Electric system.

BETTER TREATMENT

Prison Abuses Must be Reformed Says Commissioner's Report

A BOARD SHOULD GOVERN

OTTAWA, April 23. — Many changes in the administration of penitentiaries are recommended by the report of the commission which has been enquiring into the management of Kingston and other penitentiaries, tabled in the House yesterday afternoon. It recommends:

That control of penitentiaries be given to a permanent commission of three, with power to appoint staff officers and heads of departments, make regulations, etc., the wardens to be given authority to employ and dismiss keepers, guards, etc. That a parole board of not less than three members be appointed for each penitentiary, to sit once a month, and that the field staff of parole organization be increased to three officers directly under the Justice Department.

That an arrangement be made with the provinces to take over the custody of first offenders and prisoners under 25 years of age. Should this be found impracticable, two reformatories for young prisoners and first offenders should be established in the east and west. That prison industries be established to supply the requirements of the Government services. That close cropping of hair be abolished, save for cleanliness. That in place of the present uniform a suit and cap of one tone material, blue or grey, be adopted. That a few copies of a carefully censored weekly newspaper be provided for the good conduct prisoners.

That moderate use of tobacco be allowed to good conduct men; that dining-rooms be provided for good conduct men, and that hooing and imprisonment in dungeons be abolished.

Other recommendations are for modern hospitals, reorganization of staffs of hospitals, school instruction, drill, and better educated guards.

At Kingston conditions were found discouraging for convicts, and the asylum ward was managed to give least trouble for those in charge. Tubbing and hooing are condemned, and responsibility put on Dr. Phelan and Inspector Stewart.

Respecting the charge of Dr. Edwards, M.P., that Deputy Warden O'Leary favored Roman Catholics in assigning posts, the commission finds the charges not sustained and due to "an unhappy spirit of distrust and suspicion." It is also found that O'Leary was not guilty of political partisanship. Overseer Wilson is exonerated.

It is also recommended that a system of classification be inaugurated, based on the conduct of the prisoners, to encourage them to habits of order, industry, etc. The report further suggests that outside work be developed to the fullest extent at each prison in farming operations, etc., and that a thorough physical and mental examination of each prisoner be made on his admission and a proper filing system be installed for records.

DEBATE NEARS END.

Final Speeches In Budget Discussion To Be Made To-day.

OTTAWA, April 23.—The budget debate is expected to conclude to-night with speeches from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Dr. Michael Clark and Geo. H. Boivin for the Opposition and Hon. Geo. E. Foster and Hon. Arthur Meighen replying for the Government. The debate took up most of yesterday with eight speakers on the floor, three Conservatives and five Liberal.

E. W. Nesbitt (Lib., N. Oxford) charged the Minister of Finance with mismanagement of loans and expenditures which made borrowing necessary. He believed that farmers would have been satisfied with the duty on implements if they had been given wider markets.

"The Finance Minister and his supporters," declared Dr. A. Thompson (Con., Tukon), who followed, "stand for moderate protection. This party stands or falls on a policy of moderate protection." Referring to the people of the west, he said that if they entered upon manufacturing, instead of confining themselves to the one industry of agriculture, they would become protectionists, and he urged upon the Government the desirability of developing the water powers of the Prairie Provinces and thus hastening manufacturing.

At the evening sitting Levi Thompson (Lib., Qu'Appelle) argued that trade was under a restriction which was hampering the development of the west, and consequently lessening the business of eastern industrial plants.

Donald Sutherland (Con., S. Oxford) advised the farmers of the west to do more than grow wheat.

BORROWED FROM LICENSEES.

Sidelight Thrown on Inspector's Methods In North Essex.

TORONTO, April 23.—At the request of the Provincial Secretary's Department, Paul Morand, license inspector for North Essex, resigned his position yesterday and a short time afterwards as a witness before the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature explained why he had done so. Under examination by Liberal Whip Bowman, he admitted that while in office he had been president and largest stockholder of a canning company that borrowed money from hotel license-holders. He did not know this to be improper, he said, until told so by his Department, and did not himself solicited the loans.

Chief Officer Saunders deposed that the matter had been brought to his attention through a query on the legislative order paper, and he had been asked to supply the answer. This led to Mr. Morand being interviewed as to borrowing money from hotelmen and his resignation had been demanded at once.

PROBERS WERE AWARE.

But They Did Not Report Any Waste Under Borden Regime.

OTTAWA, April 23. — Gordon Grant, chief engineer of the Transcontinental Railway, explained to the Public Accounts Committee yesterday the settlement made with J. D. McArthur, whereby $150,000 was cut off from the contractor's estimates on account of over-classification and over-break instead of $512,000, recommended originally by the arbitrators, of whom he was one.

Mr. Grant stated that the arbitrators had not at first taken into account the fact that by the commission's orders, the work had been rushed and heavy blasting had been done. For this the contractor was not responsible, and it would be unfair to hold him to it. Witness believed that if, under the circumstances, McArthur had gone to the courts he would have won. The contractor, to avoid litigation, was willing to have $150,000 taken off. Major Leonard, Mr. Cochrane and Mr. Lynch-Staunton were aware of the settlement, which he considered fair and just.

The case was reported to the House by the committee.

GERMAN LINE ADVANCES.

African Railway Has Now Reached Lieutenant's Old House.

The announcement that the German East Africa Central Railway has reached Kigoma, the best natural harbor on Lake Tanganyika, comes somewhat as a surprise in Germany. It is quite evident that the last section of the line, from Tabora to Kigoma, has been built at high pressure, as its completion was not expected until the beginning of April.

It is unnecessary to state that the completion of the railway marks a most important step in the development of the East African colony, and that it will have a considerable influence on the trade routes of Uganda and the Belgian Congo. It is significant that added to the official announcement of the completion of the railway is a statement to the effect that in a few months German steamers will ply across Lake Tanganyika to the Belgian Congo.

Kigoma is only a few miles from Ujiji, where Stanley met Livingstone. The startling contrast between then and now is best shown by the fact that this historical spot has been brought within three weeks' easy travelling from London or Hamburg. From Dar-es-Salaam on the Indian Ocean, the port of German East Africa to Kigoma is a distance of 788 miles. From the western side of the Lake, via the Congo to the Atlantic, the distance is nearly 2,000 miles. It will thus be seen that the German route gives export facilities which for some time to come cannot be given by the Atlantic route, and that the Germans will be afforded ready access to the rich copper and tin deposits of Katanga.

The new railway is of very narrow gauge and only a single line. For years the building of the railway was opposed in the Reichstag as an expensive and wholly useless undertaking. It is to the merit of Herr Dernburg, the late energetic Secretary for the Colonies, that the project finally found favor.

It was not until 1905 that the first sod was cut, Prince Adalbert, one of the Emperor's sons, performing the ceremony. The first section of 120 miles to Morogoro was opened for traffic in 1907, the second to Tabora, 530 miles from the coast, in 1912. The second section to Tabora, and the final section to Kigoma, presenting numerous engineering difficulties, but these have all been happily surmounted. The German Government owns about nine-tenths of the shares of the new line, and it is, therefore, to all intents and purposes a state railway. A service of express trains will run between Lake Tanganyika and the Indian Ocean, covering the distance in forty-two hours.

It is hardly likely that the new line, important as it is, will seriously affect the Uganda line by deflecting the trade of the British colony, or by injuring the traffic of this line with the German protectorate. Future developments of the German line to Rwanda may perhaps have results in this direction, but as Uganda is rapidly developing the Uganda railway will be compensated for any loss.

AN EASY WAY TO GET FAT AND BE STRONG

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on dragging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes unattended. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to the remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh builders. Sargol aims through its re-generative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines of literally soak up the following elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation has taken place and you notice how your shoulders fill out, hollows about your neck, cheeks and hands also appear and you begin to put on from 10 to 30 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Your druggist has it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution:—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

The Fox's Useful Brush.

Though it is only a useless and rather stupid trophy to the hunter, the fox's brush is of value in many ways as well as an ornament to the fox. His broad, bushy tail is the rudder which enables him to twist and turn at any moment when running at full speed. In approaching a wall or a hedge or a ditch which has to be jumped the fox gains additional impetus by rapidly twirling his tail round, just as an aeroplane propeller revolves. Again, in climbing trees the fox uses his tail as a balance or a sort of fifth leg, and finally in curling himself up to sleep he covers his head warm and cosily with his brush.—London Chronicle.

Idleness Is Death.

Most men cannot be idle and live. That sounds strange. It is true. It is a law of nature. If a man past forty lends an idle life the probability is that he will live to be fifty-seven years old. If he leads a harmonious and sufficiently occupied life he will live to be sixty-six. This is the experience of life insurance companies, which make a specialty of old age annuities.

The figures tell the story. Idleness is harder on the vital organs of mankind than work. To be idle is to die.

Sweet Revenge.

Mrs. Shopper (after inspecting everything in the store)—I don't see anything here that suits me. I suppose I may as well go down to Stacy's and see what they have. They usually have a good assortment.

Salesman—Here's a card of one of their salesmen. Won't you kindly ask for him?

Mrs. Shopper—Ah! A friend of yours, I presume?

Salesman—No, madam; he has owed me $10 for the past three years.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Cameron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis and said it would never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used [illegible] Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

Sleeping Sickness Overcome.

Sleeping sickness has proved to be an indirect blessing in Northern Rhodesia. In the Lulapula valley over 25,000 people had been removed from sleeping sickness infection, and since then there had been no new case. Model villages, with streets of houses and some system of sanitation, had replaced the old native kraals.

The latest addition to civilization was the Watwa tribe, people who lived like frogs in the unknown swamps of Lake Bangweolo. These swamps were quite impregnable, and the people would not formerly allow strangers to visit their haunts.

Now they have vacated the swamps, and live on dry land. They have become law-abiding, willingly pay their taxes, and even desert Government officials to their old-time homes.

In Livingstone, the capital of the territory, the mosquito problem has been practically solved. A suspicion war has been waged against these insects, with the result that they are now scarcely ever seen.

To Purify Clay.

An electrical process for purifying clay, brought to the notice of the English Ceramic Society by Dr. W. R. Ormandy, depends upon the fact that clay is electro-negative, while its chief impurities are electro-positive. The emulsified clay is partially coagulated by adding electrolytes, and is further purified by passing through a vessel having electrodes differing by 60 to 100 volts.

The clay substance, with as little as 15 to 20 per cent. of water, is deposited as a continuous blanket four and one-half feet wide and a quarter of an inch thick. When the particles are removed, and the solid product may contain as much as ninety-nine and five-tenths per cent. of china clay.

A Balanced Rock.

Near the summit of Mount Battle-rock, in the village of Plymouth, Mass., is a granite balance rock which probably weighs about 100 tons. It touches its rest for about twelve inches and balances on a very small point, but in the restored several determined attempts to dislodge it with a jackscrew.—Boston Globe.

Their Pride.

"I am a self made man," said Mr. Cumrod.

"And I suppose your wife and daughter are very proud of you?

"Yes. Just about as proud as they would be of a homemade dress."—Washington Star.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

Toronto, Monday, April 23.—At last we are having a spell of really warm, summer-like weather, and farmers generally are thinking more of seeding than of anything else. For the next few weeks the farm produce marketed will be of a rather limited character, and unless all indications deceive greatly the warm weather will have a favorable influence on trade, which to date has not been as satisfactory as might be.

The produce markets during the past week have been very quiet. So far as we know there was no export trade done, nor could it be, at a reasonable net, as brokers will not sell at the prices that are offered. Dairy produce is occupying a more important place on many of the factories are now in running order, and the regular shoemboard meetings are being talked of. The cattle market is firm.

WHEAT

Continued optimistic crop reports are most favorable to higher wheat quotations and prices on Western wheat have risen of half a cent in the past week. Seeding operations have already commenced in the Western states and land is being put in shape in the Canadian West. Ontario wheat holds firm in spite of a very slow demand for flour. Quotations are as follows: No. 1 Northern, 95½; No. 2, 92½; wheat arrivings, 60c to 65c; Ontario wheat, 80c to $1.01.

COARSE GRAINS

The market is quiet, with oats down a trifle. A few lots of barley have been sold to local maltsters but export offers are nil. Quotations: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 65c; No. 3, 60½c; Ontario, No. 2, 58c to 59c; corn, 90c to 90½c; peas, 95c to 96c; barley, malting, 86c to 88c; feed, 84c; buckwheat, 76c to 80c. Montreal wholesale quotations are: Oats, C.W. No. 2, 69½c to 70c; No. 3, 65c to 65½c; corn, 90c to 90½c; barley, malting, 85c to 90c; peas, 95c to $1c.

HAY AND STRAW

Local wholesale dealers report a small client supply of hay on hand, with prices ruling firm. It is quite possible that light receipts from now on through next week will hold the market firm. No. 1 hay, $14.50 to $15; No. 2, $13 to $14; No. 3, $9.50 to $10.

EGGS AND POULTRY

This is the prime season of the year for egg laying and receipts continue a record. Supply is much in excess of demand for present consumption, but cold storage men are taking much good care of the supply that prices hold firm at 28 to 30c to the trade and 32c to 35c in the country. As to poultry, the supply is rather limited, and prices are firm. Dressed fowl, 24c to 25c; chicken, 28c to 30c; spring chickens, 30c to 32c; ducks, 28c to 30c; geese, 20c to 22c and 24c to 25c; turkeys, 30c to 35c and 40c to 45c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

The past week has been marked by a rapid increase in receipts of butter and a falling away in price. The greater demand for the cheaper grades is making room for these stocks, and prices in dairy lots will be much lower. The importation of new creamery butter into Montreal has also tended to weaken the situation under. On one of this we have a large make in the United States Choice of the other hand is very scarce, finding the low grades are in demand. Quotations are as follows: Farmers' separator prints, 30c to 32c; dairy prints, 28c to 29c; creamery prints, fresh, 34c to 35c; storage, 32c to 33c; solids, fancy, 32c to 33c. Cheese quotations: New large, 19½c to 20c; twins, 20c to 20½c; old large, 20½c; twins, 20½c.

LIVE STOCK

Receipts did not overburden demand during the past week, but the Easter demand was almost total; therefore did not hold to quite the level of the previous week. A few heavy steers were bought, but these did not seem to be much in demand for this class of stock. Handyweight steers being what sought were of. The heavy fellows went at $7.50 to $8.25 and handy choice steers, $7.60 to $8.10.

Butchers' steers ran at $7.50 to $8.00 for good and down to $6.75; butcher bulls, $6 to $7; cows, choice, $6.50 to $7.25; cows, to good, $6.25 to $6.75; butcher bulls, $6 to $7.25; canners, $5 to $5.50. Stockers were in comparatively good demand, offered low to $7.00 and down to $6.50. Feeding steers were unoffered. Common milkers were traded at $45.00 to $4.00.

Choice calves held firmly at $10 to $10; steady to weak, $9 to $9; medium, $8 to $8. Large numbers of calves were offering, thus depressing the market for inferior stuff: Choice veal, $9.00 to $10.00; inferior grades, $5.00 to $8.

The lamb market has been well supplied, both from the United States and Ontario points, but prices hold firm: Spring lambs, $9 to $9 each; culls, $8 to $8; steady to weak, $8 to $8; heavy lambs, $8.50 to $9; light ewes, $7 to $7.50; heavy sheep and bucks, $6.50 to $6.00; culls, $4 to $5.50.

The swine market is strong, packers quoting $9.65 to $9.90 f. o. b. country points.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 23.—War excitement helped carry prices higher today for every speculative article on change. The close was strong all around with net gains, as follows: Wheat 1 1-2 to 1 3-4c, corn 1 3-8 to 1 5-8c, oats 7-8 to 1c, provisions 17 1-2 to 55c.

It Did.

In "Bohemian Days in Fleet Street" the following story of Charlie Williams, the war correspondent, appears:

"Charlie Williams could have given Baron Munchausen a stone and a beating. He spoke with a rasping North of Ireland accent, and his campaign anecdotes gained greatly by the stolid, matter of fact manner in which they were narrated. I recall now one of his campaign reminiscences. It is a quaint experience of a correspondent under fire.

"'I had got under cover of a big powder and had tethered my horse beside me. I was just munchin' a beskit, when a shell burst on the rock an' shot the nosebag right off my charger. He had shoved his ould head out of cover.'

"'And you?' asked Pearse.

"'I just went on munchin' my beskit.'

"'But,' suggested Dunning, 'if the shell took away the nosebag it ought to have carried away the beast's head as well.'

"'It did,' replied Williams, with the utmost sang froid."

"Going Into A Decline," Tired And Worn-out

Constant Pains in the Chest and Back—Wonderful Results Obtained by Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

What a host of symptoms are summed up in these words, "Going into a decline." It means, in short, that the patient is daily growing weaker and weaker without hope of recovery. But read the letter quoted below and learn of the great food cure which naturally and gradually nourishes pale, thin, weak, tired-out men and women back to health and strength.

There is no treatment you can so well rely upon, for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food contains in condensed and easily assimilated form all the elements required to rebuild wasted and depleted nerve cells. It cures in Nature's way by filling the system with new vigour and vitality.

Mrs. Rene McNulty, St. Theodose, Que., writes: "I had almost constant pains in the chest, and backache. I was tired and worn out nearly all the time. Four boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food did me more good than all the medicines I ever took. My system seemed to be all run down, and I was so weak I could scarcely do anything. The Nerve Food did wonders for me, and I want other women suffering as I did to benefit by my experience. I feel like a different person since using this great restorative."

Can you imagine any medical treatment better suited to the needs of a run-down system. As a tiring restorative there is nothing to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It purifies and enriches the blood, builds up the system, and drives out pains, aches, tired feelings, and discouragement. 35 MINE OFFICIALS TRAPPED IN BLAZING SHAFT HOUSE IN GRAVE DANGER OF DEATH

Thirty-Two Fatalities Already in the Most Serious War in the History of American Industry

TROOP TRAIN BESIEGED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TRINIDAD, Col., April 23.—So far the labour war here between the striking miners and the authorities has caused thirty-two fatalities, and to-day thirty-five persons, including women and children, are trapped in the blazing shaft house of the Empire mine and are in grave danger of death. They are mine officials and families who barricaded themselves in the place against the assaults of the miners. Then fire broke out, and they were unable to get out. In the meantime a troop train on the way here to restore order is besieged by fifteen hundred armed miners eighteen miles away.

The situation is desperate. This is the fourth day of fighting unparalleled in the history of American industrial warfare.

TRINIDAD, Col., April 22. — Six mine employees dead and two missing, three men, two women and a baby reported to be entombed in a burning mine; several mining camps destroyed and others riddled with bullets; less than 200 militiamen and company guards confronting an army of striking coal miners estimated by strike leaders at more than 900—this was the situation when the sun set on the third red day in the Southern Colorado labour war.

Strike leaders to-night asserted that none of their fighting men had been killed during the day's battle and that only two had been reported wounded.

A party of militiamen hastily sent from Ludlow, in steel cars, reinforced the guards, and after heavy fighting the strikers were driven back.

Trinidad was a scene of tense excitement to-night. The saloons had been closed by order of the city council, but throngs of men still congregated on the streets. Labour headquarters were jammed with strikers, mostly aliens, and the crowd overflowed to the sidewalks.

RAILWAY COMMITTEE VOTED BILL FOR ALL RED LINE CO.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 23.—The Railway Committee has decided that Canada is now sufficiently equipped with transcontinental railways, and when the "All Red Line" Railway Company Bill came up this morning they laid ruthless hands upon it. They first of all changed its pretentious name to "The Labrador, Quebec and Southern Railway Company." They then reduced its territory to suit the name. Then the committee reduced the capital stock of the company from one hundred millions to ten millions, and the minimum number of directors from 25 to 9. Having thus clipped the wings of the ambitious company they reported the bill which won't be recognizable as the same when it goes back to the Commons.

Messrs. A. Brown & Co.

The attention of all concerned is directed to the announcement of Messrs. A. Brown & Co., of this City, Real Estate dealers, 160 Charlotte Street. Of the real estate dealers in Peterborough who have grown up with the country, no name is better known than that of Mr. Andrew Brown. From small beginnings his business in reality-dealing has grown steadily until it has reached unlooked for possibilities. As a matter of fact, now that Peterborough seems in a fair way to realise the development that has for years been predicted for it, Mr. Brown has been in the midst of the field of action, and has fished and thinned over some of the best fields that have been made there. He has had the handling of some of the finest business properties that were put on the market. His long residence here gives him a particular knowledge of the natural trend of property values, and their development now and in the future. He is always ready to advise clients thoroughly before they go in buying or selling for whether the client successfully the prospects that will enhance most in value.

A. Brown & Co's. sales during the past month appear to have broken the records, being report that during these last eight or ten days they have made five separate sales, amounting in the aggregate to many thousand dollars. As an evidence of the productiveness of their methods it may be mentioned that a residential property which they sold on Tuesday of this week was given up on Thursday, and a deposit paid on it to bind the bargain.

SIGNOR CURTI

"The King of the Harp"

Big Attraction for Lyal Theatre To-night

The title "The King of the Harp" has been accorded Prof. Giovanni Curti by the entire press and world of music lovers. His experience extends over a period of forty years, thirty-five of which were devoted to concert and conservatory work in all parts of the world, having been around the globe nine times. He has made a life long study of technique, tone and expression and has eliminated entirely the buzzing sound and vibration so common in the work of other harpists and is to-day recognized as being the greatest solo harpist in the world and is the only one in vaudeville. His repertoire consists of over one hundred selections and has adapted his routine for vaudeville purposes using classical and popular numbers. Curti is to the harp what Paderewski is to the piano, and Kubelik to the violin. Vaudeville managers desiring a decided novelty of real merit would do well to investigate this.

Appearing under the exclusive management of the Royal Theatre.

INTERESTING WINDOW DISPLAY SHOWING HOW HATS ARE MADE

In This Case, However, It is the Famous Stetson Hat the Development of Which is Illustrated in Wm. Lech's Window

AN EDUCATIVE DISPLAY

The north window of Wm. Lech's store is devoted to an interesting and educative display of the materials used in the manufacture of Stetson hats, and a clear idea can be gained of their gradual development, from the raw material to the finished product.

The first step is illustrated by a number of hare, coney, nutria and beaver pelts, each of which is made up to show the course fur, and the finer, softer fur which alone is retained for the next step in the process of manufacture.

This selected fur is removed from the hide and the window display shows several samples of the material after it has been plucked and treated in a manner that gives it something of the appearance of carded wool before it goes to the spinning machines. The silky fur fibres cling together similar to wool and thus allows the next step in the development of a Stetson hat.

The material then undergoes a change transforming it into a felty form and a texture which prepares it for future handling. It is now ready for the first shaping, and is placed on a large metal cone to give it the general shape of the ordinary hat.

Then comes the shrinking, an important process by which a piece of the material is reduced to a particular size. The silky fur fibres knit closely together as the result of being repeatedly dipped in hot water. The material cut for one hat is reduced two-thirds of its initial size, and in this process undergoes a shrinkage although the softness produced by the use of the best fur is retained in full.

When this stage is reached the future hat is passing from the chrysalis, and after undergoing a blocking and other finishing treatments it is ready for the final touches. One of these is the application of fine emery paper that removes the little ends of fur that may show, and the exterior is given a beautiful smooth finish. The silk band and the sweat band are then attached, and the hat is practically complete. Mr. Lech has illustrated these stages of the manufacture very effectively, and cards are used to indicate the gradual development. When particular colours are required the finish dies are used.

The Head Size.

The above brief description refers to the making of the soft hat, and any one who has ever worn or touched a Stetson will have a clearer idea of how the splendid finish has been secured while retaining a softness that is a feature of the Stetson article.

The same initial processes are required for the manufacture of the hard hat, but in the shrinking or after it shellac is used to give the material the desired hardness. There is also the dyeing and blocking work and a different form of finishing. The hard hat is given an application of fine emery paper for the same purpose as mentioned above. Some of the stages in the making of a hard hat are also shown in the Lech display.

Located in Philadelphia.

The John B. Stetson Company, located in Philadelphia, has 5,500 employees, and manufactures only for order. None of their goods are kept in stock, and it is conceded that in the hat business they are practically without opposition. This is the result of the high quality and excellent finish of their product. To under-

CONTRACTS AWARDED

Board of Works Open Tenders for the Work of Watering Peterborough Streets This Season

A BUSY SESSION

At the Board of Works meeting, last night, the contracts for the street watering in every district, but the Southern one, were awarded. No tenders were received for watering the South, and the matter was left as usual, with the City Engineer and the Chairman of the Board of Works to secure a man for that section of the City. The contracts were awarded as follows:

Western District—J. McNeil, $900. No other tenders.

North Western — Justice Blodget, $980.10. No other tenders.

Northern District—Wesley Manley, $980. Other tenders by Alexander O'Brien at $980, Eastern Division — J. P. Francis, $930. Other tenders, Albert Valoice $980, and Adam Cox $980.

It was on the motion of Aldermen Johnson and Sanderson that the tenders above were accepted. Although the routes to be covered by the watering carts are anywhere from a mile to a mile and a half shorter than last year, the tender of $980 for the north is the only one that is below last year's figures. On the whole the street watering will prove considerably more expensive than it did last year, but it is the hope of the Board of Works that the service given will be a good deal better on account of the shortened routes.

City Not Liable.

A letter was received from the City Solicitor to the effect that in his opinion the City is not liable for the breaking of the gas mains in the south end, which had been ruptured by employees while making excavations for the City. There was an agreement between the City and the Peterborough Light and Power Co., that the latter should provide the city with a profile map of all the old gas mains relaid, or any new mains. This had not been complied with and the City was, therefore, not in a position to know where the mains were. That was the cause of the break in the gas mains, and the City was not liable. On the other hand, the City was liable for the break in the gas main near the Nicholls Hospital, where the men had piled large sections of frozen earth on the pipes.

Mayor Buller announced that the Peterborough Light and Power Company were willing to settle everything for $95, which was less than the original account for the break at Nicholls Hospital alone.

On the motion of Messrs. Stratton and Duffus it was decided to pay the Company the money in liquidation of all claims against the City.

Sidewalks Will Be Laid.

A report was received from the City Engineer, recommending that the following cement sidewalks be put in: On King Street, north side, from George to Water; on the south side, from Bridge to Reid; on Lock street, east side, from Wear to Gladstone Avenue; on Hunter street, both sides, from Belmore to Walker.

Alderman Saunders thought that Romaine Street should be included in the report and that was added to the list already recommended. On the motion of Aldermen Saunders and Anderson it was decided to build the above walks.

Poles to Go.

The Bell Telephone Company wrote asking for permission to lay their cable on George Street, between Brock and McDonnel Streets. That was granted. City Solicitor Gordon also reported that an agreement had been drafted between the Bell Telephone and the City in regard to having the Company's poles removed from Charlotte Street. Word would probably be received from the telephone people to-day as to whether or not they would enter into the agreement.

The matter of the diversion of Romaine Street was brought up and the City Engineer was instructed to inform the C. P. R. that they were desired to fill in that part of the street near their tracks so that sidewalks could be built, the road to be 66 feet wide.

It was brought out at the meeting that in building their new stores, on Charlotte Street, Messrs. R. C. and J. T. Braund had been informed by their surveyor that their property really extended nine inches out on to the sidewalk. It was decided last night to have the City Engineer arrange for another surveyor to go over the ground so that the City's interests may be safeguarded. In the meantime Mr. Braund will be asked not to encroach on the street line. That action was taken on the motion of Aldermen Stratton and Green.

On the motion of Mayor Buller and Ald. Green it was decided to give notice of the construction of sewers on all the streets recommended by the Board of Health (and which have

12 KILLED AND 50 ARE WOUNDED IN THE FIGHTING AT VERA CRUZ

United States Forces Hold the City—Have Thrown up Earth Works to Fortify Themselves—No Declaration of War by U. S. Unless Events Force It

HUERTA'S STATEMENT

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WILSON IGNORES THE APPEAL OF CARRANZA

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 23.—(2:30 p.m.)—Having given the appeal of General Carranza every consideration, President Wilson announced to-day that the United States will not abandon its campaign against Huerta despite the implied threat of Carranza to join forces with Huerta in repelling the United States.

"We are dealing with facts," said President Wilson in reply. "Wherever and whenever the dignity of the United States is flouted, its international rights or rights of its citizens insulted where it has right to attempt to exercise it, this government must deal with those actually in control."

MEXICO'S CONSUL DEPARTS TO-NIGHT

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 23.—(2:45 p.m.) — The only remaining thread of diplomatic relations between Mexico and the United States was severed early this afternoon when Senor Algara, representative of Mexico, asked for and received from the Secretary, his passports, guaranteeing him safe conveyance out of the United States. Senor Algara said he would leave Washington to-night. He had not decided whether it would be for Mexico or for Canada. Algara shook hands warmly with the U. S. State Department officials as he left the State offices to-day.

CASUALTIES AT VERA CRUZ SO FAR

WASHINGTON, April 23.—With Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy en route from the Mexican capital with his passports, the United States Government is expecting any moment to receive an open declaration of war by Mexico.

It is conceded here that with such ardent pacifists as President Wilson and Secretary Bryan in control, there will be no declaration from this end unless future events compel it.

Senor Algara, Mexican representative here, has not yet asked for his papers.

The United States Government is giving Huerta every latitude and putting him in a position of forcing hostilities.

Admiral Fletcher reports that the total casualties to date at Vera Cruz are twelve killed and fifty wounded.

The city is quiet to-day, but the United States forces have thrown up earthworks and fortifications, strongly entrenched with guns, in view of a possible Mexican attack.

HUERTA'S STATEMENT.

MEXICO CITY, April 23.—General Huerta has given out the following statement to the press:

"Mexico is defending not only her national sovereignty, but that of all Latin-America as well. This is not a war between the Mexican and the American peoples, but between Mexico and the Government of the United States, which is controlled by men who have forced the situation upon us in spite of our efforts to the contrary. We shall have 400,000 men in the field in twenty days."

General Huerta also assured Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy personally and in the friendliest tone, that he and all Americans here would be defended against all attack.

General Huerta also makes the following declaration in El Imparcial:

"In the port of Vera Cruz we are sustaining with arms the national honour against the outrage which the Yankee Government is committing against a free people, as is, and always will be, that of this republic. This action will pass on to history, which will put Mexico and the Government of the United States each in the place where it belongs.

(Signed) "HUERTA."

U. S. FORCES NOT YET MOBILIZED.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Not a single order, either tentative or definite, has been transmitted from the Secretary for War to Brigadier-General A. O. Miles, chief of the Bureau of Military Affairs, for the mobilization of the National Guard of any state of the Union.

This was the unqualified announcement made in the office of General Miles at the close of the official business day in that bureau.

The statement was predicated upon the continuous stream of ill-advised requests for information volleyed into Washington from every quarter of the United States.

WILLIAM SHAKSPERE

Born April 23, 1564 (St. George's Day)

Died, as to the body, April 23, 1616

"Shakspere is the most modern writer in our language. It would seem that in one fruitful moment the genius of England gave birth to a poet, who interpreted his ancestry to itself and to the world, once and for all time; his thought and language being the everlasting mind and utterance of his race at its highest."

BOY'S PRANKS ENDANGER LIVES OF PASSENGERS

Nine South End Youths Before Magistrate for Tampering With Signals and Bothering Conductors

WERE GIVEN WARNING

Nine youngsters from the South-end of the City came before Magistrate Dumble in Police Court this morning, charged with disorderly conduct on Lock Street.

It was alleged that the boys congregated at the intersection of the Grand Trunk Railway tracks at Lock Street, and not only constituted themselves a nuisance to the neighbourhood, but interfered with the street railway conductors when they left the street cars to set the levers for the signals and derails at that point.

It seems that there is a system of derails and signals at that crossing, making it necessary for the conductor in charge of a car to run ahead to the signal house, open the derails, and set the signals against any approaching G.T.R. train before the street car can cross the track. Then after the train has passed he must reverse the levers so that the signals will show the Grand Trunk trainmen that the line is open.

Detective Newhall was the first witness against the boys. He said that on different occasions they interfered with the street car conductors (particularly Conductor White) when they went to the signal house to change the levers. They had been known to sit on the wires that connected the levers with the signals, to put pieces of coal in the "derails," so that they could not be operated, and interfere with the mechanism of the levers. On Friday night last, he and P. C. Reid went to that point after receiving three complaints. They found the gang of boys there using filthy language, shouting and yelling, and when the conductor went into the signal house they beat the walls of it with stones, and called him all sorts of filthy names. They had on previous occasions thrown stones at Conductor White and filled up the keyhole of the lock on the door with gravel. Detective Newhall identified the boys as the ones that were making the disturbance on Friday night.

Conductor White said that on last Friday night he had heard that the boys "had it in for him," and so he got the motorman of the car to operate the levers. He saw a gang of boys there, who were shouting, yelling, and swearing.

Motorman McConnel, who operated the levers for Conductor White on Friday night, said that as he was going toward the signal box one of the boys ran over and kicked the door of it. He heard some boards fall inside.

"What have you here?" he said.

"Oh, it wasn't meant for you," the boys in Court were the same ones he signal house he found a board lying at the opening of the doorway. Several times Conductor White had reported to him that the boys were interfering with him and throwing stones at him as he went to and from the signal house.

P. C. Reid was asked if he saw the boys on Friday night.

"Yes," he said, "I saw the boys, Yelling and shouting and making a noise."

"He had no doubt but that the boys in Court ere the same ones he saw at the Grand Trunk crossing at Lock Street on Friday night."

Mr. G. N. Gordon, for the city, said that the conduct of the boys was shameless and continual. The people of that district have their rights interfered with by the vulgar language and profanity floating round. In interfering with the signals they were endangering the lives of the passengers on the street cars. He asked that a penalty consistent with the offence, and which would prevent a recurrence of it, be imposed.

The Magistrate reprimanded the boys for their conduct, but allowed them to go on their promise not to tamper with the railway signals or annoy the community with profanity in the future.

ONTARIO GOV'T MAY REGAIN THE TRENT WATERWAY

Hon. Adam Beck Hints at This Possibility Which May Have Hydro Interest Behind It

BORDEN DIDN'T KNOW

OTTAWA, April 23.—Directing the attention of the Government to the statement reported to have been made to the Ontario Provincial Legislature yesterday by Hon. Adam Beck to the effect that the Dominion had handed over to the Province all the waterpowers developed by the construction by the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, Hon. Mr. Graham, in Parliament this afternoon, asked for the facts.

"I am not able to give any definite information at the moment," replied Premier Borden. "So far as I am aware, no definite arrangement has been made, but I will look the matter up."

Hon. Mr. Graham said that he had understood that the matter was before the Exchequer Court.

"That is my understanding, that nothing can be done until the decision of the Exchequer Court comes down," replied Mr. Borden.

The situation is said to be an unusually interesting one. The Government of Sir James Whitney is reported to have voluntarily relinquished and given over to the Dominion the waterpowers in question, and subsequently Hon. Frank Cochrane, then a Provincial Minister, sought to secure them again. Hon. Mr. Graham who was then Dominion Minister of Railways and Canals, disputed the demand, and the matter was referred to the Exchequer Court. A year ago, replying to a question by Mr. Graham, Mr. Cochrane, who had become a Federal Minister, stated that no effort would be spared to hold the powers voluntarily given over by the Provincial Government.

THURSDAY, APRIL 23, 1914

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

This is St. George's Day — St. George, the patron saint of England. It is a day, dear, and deservedly dear to Englishmen and to the world, which owes infinitely much to the spirit, the Saint and his day typify. To the rallying cry of "St. George and Merrie England" have been won the victories that have made the name of England and Englishmen renowned in the annals of valour; and to this rallying cry have been made the wide conquests that have carried English law and order and right from the cradle land of these benefits to many other lands. It has planted there the highest forms of Christian civilization, and human enfranchisement, and moral uplift. When one thinks that the greatest influences for the betterment of human conditions, with England as their birthplace, have virtually circled the globe, and uplifted millions of the world's people and morally made their impress upon all the nations and peoples of the whole world; when one reflects that from the loins of the Mother Land, a tiny speck on the world's chart, set in the silver sea, have sprung the mightiest empire of history, and another land which together make the powers that speak the language of England, the mightiest forces in the world, Englishmen have warrant, we all have warrant, for rejoicing and being glad in the day that recalls all we and the world owe to England. We could only weakly realise the debt the world owes England, if we could picture the condition of the world, if the fruits of the influences that have, through the recent centuries, emanated from England, were withdrawn and their place made void.

FISHING.

Conservation and reproduction are the essentials of permanency of supply in almost everything, and they apply as much, if not more, to fishing, as to anything else. Time was when the Kawartha waters were literally alive with fish. It is not so now. Overfishing the waters, that is, illegally legitimate fishing, is one cause of the depletion; but a greater cause is the killing of spawning fish in their season, something like a farmer selling the most of his seed grain. Public-spirited persons are locally circulating, or have circulated petitions to the Ontario Government to provide a fish hatchery for the Kawartha waters. The Government should do this as much as a matter of reparation as in the interests of fish supply. It is the Government's fault; at least, it is responsible for the depletion of our waters. It is held by those who know that one great cause of fish depletion is the neglect of the Government inspectors to enforce the regulations in regard to fishing out of season. We have before us the letter of a gentleman long interested in the fishing of the lakes. After referring to the over-fishing by tourists as a cause of lack of fish supply, the writer says that the depletion does not arise so much from this

"as from the wicked, illegal killing of fish in the spring, when they come up the creeks to spawn. We have been advised that in the creeks emptying into ——— lake, and in the marshes adjoining the farms, waggon loads of female fish are taken out during this (the spawning) period. Quite recently some interested people in ——— secured the names of men who were engaged in this work, and it was found, upon investigation, that there were thousands of pounds of these fish salted down."

This cause of fish destruction is largely attributed to the failure of the fishing inspectors to keep vigilant enough watch. It is also suggested that the inspectors should be more alert in seeing that the legal limit of end fishing is not greatly exceeded which, it is claimed is almost constantly done by too enthusiastic tourists, aided and abetted by guides who know the best fishing grounds, and contribute to catches of illegal number. The causes of depleted fishing waters are controllable. There must be some efficient inspection of places known to be spawning grounds and a closer enforcement of the regulations limiting the catch. If the petitioners for a hatchery urge these points successfully upon the Government they will, if they secure a hatchery, have the knowledge that its benefits will not be neutralised by continued illicit and over-fishing, the two chief causes of the destruction of fish and fishing in our waters.

HIGH COST LIVING ALMOST UNIVERSAL

A Real Estate Firm Whose Methods and Dealings Attract Attention

That the "high cost" problem is of world-wide proportions is widely known. Prices have gone up everywhere, but they have risen faster and higher in the United States and Canada than in other lands on which statistical data have been collected.

Low wage countries invariably suffer the most from increases in the prices of necessaries. For example, in the last 12 years the price of food has gone up only 20 per cent. in Italy, while it rose some 50 per cent. in the United States, yet some authorities declare that Italy is "feeling the pinch" more to-day than any other country.

Statistical information gathered in various countries exhibits great diversity as to quantity and quality, but the available data have been reduced to a common basis by the statisticians so as to give it a certain amount of comparative value. The following summary indicates the changes in food prices since 1900, the table being copied from figures in Whitaker's Almanac:

If food prices in 1900 are fixed as 100, prices were in 1912:

United Kingdom	115
Austria	135
Hungary (1911)	137
France	115
Germany	130
Holland	123
Italy	120
Norway	119
Russia (1911)	121
Japan (1911)	138
Australia	116
New Zealand (1911)	116
Canada	151
United States	150

There are about 3,200,000 bicycles in use in France now as compared with 800,000 fourteen years ago, when the government began counting them for taxation.

ALL ALONG BROADWAY

By HERBERT COREY

Brigadier-General William C. Gorgas stopped to talk to a reporter on the pier.

"Every one," he said, with some indication of enthusiasm, "was good to me in South Africa and England. It seemed that those I met went out of their way to do me kindness. I moved in an atmosphere of consideration and courtesy."

One of the brass-edged porters of the steamship company bustled up.

"Yuh gotta git them bags outer here," he asserted. "An' be quick about it. See?"

The porter moved on. General Gorgas smiled. An open-mouthed bystander came to a point just then, and made a strikingly apposite remark.

"Gorgas," said the bystander, "is home again."

Some time ago Charles Francis Murphy, the head of Tammany, had occasion to discuss a political event with reporters.

"Oh, yes," said Mr. Murphy, smiling blandly and shimmering his eyeglasses at the questioners, "Oh, yes—I am for the uplift — if that is the word."

Somehow, that utterance has rested heavily on public curiosity. Every into executive session, trying to wonder out what Murphy meant by it. The other night they discussed the cryptic utterance at the National Democratic club.

"Wait," said Judge O'Dwyer, president of the club.

A moment later he came from the library adjoining bearing in his arms a dictionary. He turned to the word "uplift." His forefinger traced the definitions down the column. "Hah!" he said, contentedly. Then he read the definition under the Gothic numeral II.:

"Uplift: to collect money."

It occurs to me that the final chapter in the life history of Patrick Walker is about as gruesome as one may find even in a 98-centre. For years the city had absolutely ignored his existence. Not even the corner copper complimented him by a glance. Then what was left of him appeared in the morgue—and a danger to society became apparent.

He had managed to erase every loop and whorl from its fingertips. Ever since the police learned to classify these markings the criminals of the world have sought for a check mate. Detective Inspector Faurot saw before him a toilsome inquiry. Every bum and thief in the city, if need be, would be forced to parade before the dead man, until his identity had been torn from the very grave. Then his obscure and wretched life would have been traced back, day by day, until the police found that genius who had contrived to balk the law.

So that for two weeks Faurot and his men, by sunlight and under the glaring arcs, worked over the poor, broken, swollen hands. Until in the end a chemical was found which caused the obliterated lines to reappear. Patrick Walker, burglar and desperado, has been forgotten again. A danger to society has been defeated.

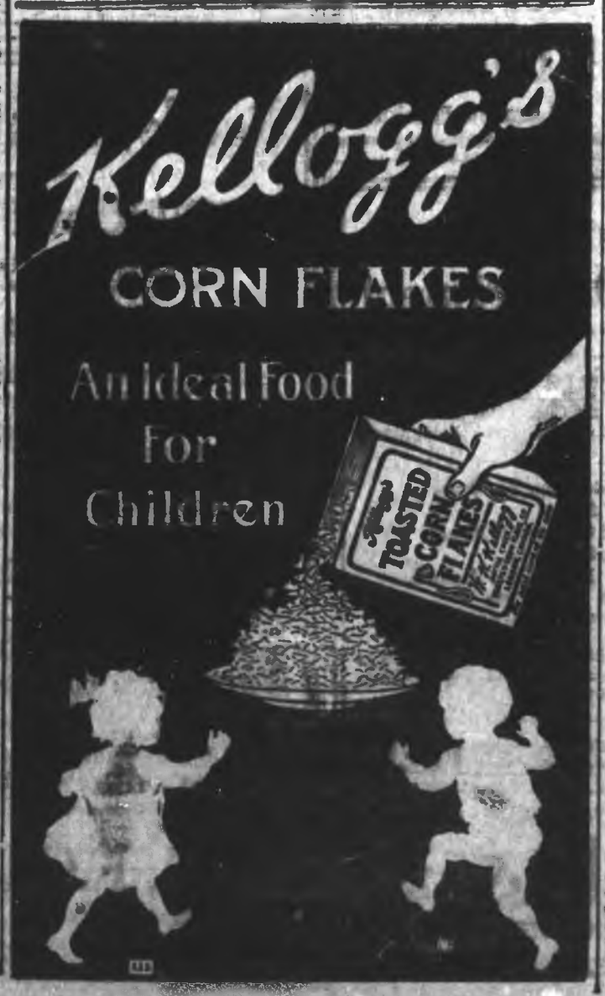
System is a grand thing. But—Stephen Cox, hospital helper, wrote to Mayor Mitchel that his food was not up to standard specifications and the latest dietary thought. So that the Bellevue hospital trustees investigated. Then General Medical Superintendent O'Hanlon investigated. Then statisticians, chefs, underlings, book-keepers, dietitians, architects, waiters, investigators from the Municipal Research Bureau, and volunteers investigated. Each read the reports of all the preceding investigators, including cross-references and supplementary statements, and added his typewritten conclusion to be indexed. In the end the Board of Estimate concluded that Cox was being fed as well as possible for 32 cents a meal, and that the city could afford no more.

Meanwhile Cox is still hungry. He thinks he'll write another letter.

REMOVING THE POLES

Bell Telephone Company is Placing More of the Wires Under Ground

The Bell Telephone Company has a gang of thirty men at work to-day removing the large poles of the Company between Brock and McDonnel Street and placing their cables under ground. When this work is completed the Company will have all its wires on George Street, from McDonnel Street to the Matthews-Blackwell factory under ground. The next step will be to remove the Company's poles on Charlotte Street, from George Street to Aylmer Street.



BABY TALK BREAKS SILENCE OF YEARS

Spo-Pe, Indian of Mystery Led to Converse by a Woman—Long a Prisoner in Insane Hospital

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Spo-Pe, the Indian man of mystery, an inmate of the criminal division of the Government Hospital for the Insane at Washington, has broken a silence of more than thirty-two years.

Spo-Pe's self-imposed duress of his talking apparatus has continued ever since the first day of his incarceration at Fort Wayne, near Detroit, in 1882. Adjudged of unsound mind at the fort, he was sent to the Government Hospital in 1882. His silence was accepted by the army examiners as a convincing symptom of melancholia.

The crime for which Spo-Pe was originally imprisoned was the murder of a fur-trader, an act of reprisal against the white race for the killing of his mother in one of the hostile interchanges between the United States troops and the Blackfoot Indians in 1879.

PREVIOUS ATTEMPTS FAILED.

It remained for Mrs. Malcolm Clark, one of a party of members of the Blackfoot tribe, herself a half-breed, to reawaken Spo-Pe's slumbering vocal organs.

Times without number during his incarceration efforts have been made to persuade Spo-Pe to talk. Not a syllable, not even a grunt, has the aged warrior volunteered.

But when Mr. and Mrs. Clark, in company with James Perrin and Charles W. Buck, paid a visit to the hospital this week, they explained to the superintendent that they had understood there was an Indian among the inmates.

Mrs. Clark had Spo-Pe pointed out to her. With her husband she addressed him in the stilted, but eloquent Indian tongue. Spo-Pe gave no indication that he understood. Then Mrs. Clark said to her friends, "Step back, let me whisper to him."

TOLD HER HIS NAME.

She sat down beside the solemn red man and began a musical form of baby talk, "the language of little people," as the Indians call it. She crooned and crooned to the grey headed man until finally the stolid heart seemed to melt.

"What is your name?" she said, still in the infant dialect.

"Spo-Pe," at length came from the lips of the stoic. And for the first time since he entered the hospital Spo-Pe had broken his silence.

Finding that his tongue would really perform its office Spo-Pe's first question was:

"Where is Three Bears?"

Three Bears was a brother of the Indian, who had died in 1908.

Since the breaking of the thirty-two year silence Spo-Pe has expressed a willingness to converse, but as the Blackfoot language is not universally known in the Government hospital he finds considerable difficulty in obtaining companionship.

Despite his solemn, stolid, silent mien Spo-Pe had endeared himself to the physicians and nurses at the hospital. He has always been tractable and has done what he has been told to do without objection or rebellion.

An effort is now being made to obtain a pardon for Spo-Pe. It will be pointed out to Commissioner Cato Sells of the Indian Office that the crime for which Spo-Pe was condemned has been expiated by a penal service of far greater length than the average term of a "lifer."

The extenuating circumstances of his mother having been killed by the troopers in a battle for which the commanding cavalry officer was severely reprimanded for initiating will also be urged as a reason for his release.

The silence broken, the hospital authorities are now willing to concede that there is no danger in releasing Spo-Pe and that he is not actually of unsound mind or in any wise dangerous.

Estimates Asked For.

City Engineer Parsons reported to the Committee that the bridge on Smith Street, near Jackson Park, was in a very dangerous condition. He was instructed to repair it for the present, but to prepare estimates as to the cost of having the present board platform replaced by concrete. The board were unanimously in favour of this and asked to have the estimates presented at the next meeting.

A communication was received from the C. P. R., saying that they were ready to remove their poles if the City would pay the cost, which it was estimated would be about $1000. No action was taken in this matter as it is hoped that the decision of the Railway Board, who've have been requested to deal with it, will settle it.

Andrew Brotherstone, East City, wrote asking to purchase a laneway of 7 feet from the City. This was left over until the annual tour of inspection of the Board.

A communication was received from the City Engineer, recommending that the Board walk, on Hunter Street, East, between Driscoll Terrace and Mark Street, be removed and replaced by a cement walk. So this was added to the schedule of cement walks already provided for.

A letter was received from J. W. Kelly, saying that the resolution passed in the Council was not in accordance with the agreement of the Townships in connection with the work to be done on the Boundary roads. It was found, however, that the conditions, as outlined in his letter, were identical with what the Council had provided for. The Council were willing to have the County go ahead with the work and the City pay half the cost. They wished also the Chairman of the Board of Works to meet representatives from the Townships at an early date to confer in regard to the matter. This was what Mr. Kelly requested in his letter.

The City Clerk was instructed to write Mr. Kelly and to repeat the willingness of the Council to enter into the above agreements.

There were present at the meeting last night Ald. Duncan, Chairman; Mayor Buller, and Alds. Saunders, Stratton, Johnson, McIntyre, Anderson, Duffus and Green.

FOUR HUNDRED DOGS MUST BE TAGGED AT ONCE

To date only 200 dog tags have been issued by Chief Thompson, and the owners of canines will do well to attend to the matter of procuring them during the next week and a half. Last year there were 600 tags issued and it is safe to assume that there are almost that many dogs in the City now. That leaves 400 dogs to be tagged before the 1st day of May is ushered in.

After that date the new by-law becomes law, and a dog catcher with an outfit consisting of a specially designed net and a waggon, will likely patrol the streets of the City. All wandering canines will be arrested and conveyed to the pound, where their lease of life will be a short one unless their owners appear to claim them. The pound will be constructed near the incinerator, and the funeral services of the executed dogs will be more brief than pathetic. Their bodies will be cremated in the incinerator.

It may be of interest to note here that 'Casey' Jones has proved a very efficient aid to the police in trapping dogs in the past. He has secured several animals which were looked upon with suspicion by the Police, and one dog, which a member of the force completely failed to catch, fell a prey to the enterprising Casey.'

They seem to follow him wherever he goes,' said Chief Thompson to-day while there is no thought of employing 'Casey' as dog catcher he may find employment in the service, in the position of dog-catcher's assistant.

dressing the board, stated that although they regarded Mr. Howard as a man who had kept the law and had no grievance against him personally they wanted the license cancelled as they claimed it effected their municipalities. A counter petition signed by 115 ratepayers from Hastings was presented by Mr. Howard, asking for a renewal, and stating that the people here had given their verdict by vote two years ago, but despite this the commissioners could not see their way to renew the license.—Hastings Star.

A fire which broke out in the pattern department of the Wm. Hamilton Co.'s foundry yesterday afternoon resulted in considerable damage to the building and patterns of the company. It is estimated that $700 worth of damage was done to patterns and the building.

The fire was started by sparks from the cupola of the foundry igniting the roof of the pattern department. Children on their way home from school noticed the blaze and ran into the office with the information that the building was burning.

The employees attacked the flames with a garden hose, and a call was sent in for the fire brigade. When the brigade arrived the roof was pretty much a mass of flames. Two lines of hose were laid and with considerable difficulty the fire was extinguished. The water heated by the fire until it was boiling hot, dropped through on to the patterns wetting them, and it is claimed that more damage was done this way than by fire. The loss was covered by insurance.

Chief Howard thinks that with a chemical engine yesterday he could have kept the damage down to $25 or $30.

NEW ORGAN FOR THE SACRED HEART CHURCH

The new organ for the Church of the Sacred Heart arrived in the city to-day and workmen commenced its erection. Mr. John Armstrong, organist of the south end church has been handicapped by the small organ which has been used since the opening of the church, but in spite of the limitations of the old instrument provided splendid music.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIETY RECEIVES GREETINGS

The St. George's Society of Peterborough received greeting to-day from the same societies in Hamilton and Ottawa. Mr. Walter Stocker, president of the local society also received the following message from St. George's Society of London, Eng.:

"England expects that every man this day will do his duty."

HOWARD RUFF,
Sec. Royal Society of St. George's Society, London, Eng.

STURGEON LAKE IS CLEAR OF ICE NOW

The ice went out of Sturgeon Lake yesterday and navigation is therefore open to Sturgeon Point. There was still a small field left in front of Sturgeon Point, but the main body had disappeared by half past two to-day. The lake is perfectly clear at Ball Point. The strong wind drove the huge sheet toward Bobcaygeon and piled it along the eastern shores of the lake. Whether or not there was any damage done is not known.

A good toilet water can be made from 1 drops of oil of lavender, 60 drops oil of bergamot, 60 drops oil of verbena and one pint of alcohol. Cork and shake well and it is ready for use.

WAVERLY INN A FINE HOTEL

"Waverly Inn," a beautiful and well equipped hostlery, situated in the Elliott Block, Millbrook, was duly opened to-day. Mr. J. C. Kells, who recently purchased the whole block, has converted it into one of the most up-to-date hotels in Eastern Ontario.

Mr. H. G. Dunford will look after the wants of the travelling public, in the capacity of manager. Mr. Kells has gone to a great deal of expense in painting, decorating, etc. This hostlery will now equal many of the hotels to be found in the larger towns. It will be conducted on strictly temperance lines, steam heated, and equipped with conveniences, also first-class bath and toilet rooms. The sample rooms are well lighted and spacious and there are first-class billiard and and ball rooms, also. A 'bus will also be run in connection with the hostlery. Mr. A. J. Larmer will take care of this department. The first guest to register was Mr. F. J. Doughty of Peterborough, travelling salesman for the Empire Cream Separator Co., Canada. Following him, on the register, were Mr. W. G. Stevens, Toronto; W. A. Keslick, Cannington, representing the Woodward Co., Cannington; also Mr. Warburton, Toronto.

Those who attended lunch were Reeve R. J. Doak, A. A. Smith, H. R. Armstrong, Dr. H. A. Turner, Rev. W. M. Johnston, Rev. H. K. Russell and wife; Cannon and Mrs. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Vance, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Given, Mr. Archibald Wood, Mrs. Lefroy, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Whyte, Aylmer Leamy, Mr. Nettleton, Miss Anna L. Kells, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kells.

Yesterday's Fire.

Mrs. H. C. Wilson, 103 Rubidge Street, called at the Examiner Office to-day in regard to the report of the fire in her home yesterday. She wished to make it clear that the fire was not started by her children, but in her opinion, was caused from outside, possibly from boys who have a practice of smoking in the alley, near the house.

DON'T DISCRIMINATE AGAINST BRITISH LABOURERS HERE

Messrs. Foley and Gleason Claim to be Pursuing a Diametrically Opposite Course

WORK PROGRESSING

There has been a great deal of talk among the unemployed and others in this city to the effect that Messrs. Foley and Gleason and the Street Railway Company are discriminating against British labour in the work now being done on George street. In connection with this an Examiner reporter was informed by a representative of the street paving company that no more Italians were being hired if Englishmen or Canadians were to be had for the vacant position. The Foley and Gleason Company brought a small number of Italians to this city with them, but these were experienced men who were kept in the employ of the company all the year round and were more or less expert in the actual grading and laying of the pavement. These men were indispensable for the work here, and were the only outside labour employed. And even if the Italians were local residents, the English-speaking applicants were always given the preference.

But in connection with this he had noticed that the Englishmen taken on did not usually stick to the job, claiming that the work was too hard for them.

"How many of them have left you after once being taken on?" he was asked.

"Well," he replied, after reviewing the small army of workmen. "There are only nine or ten of the original bunch we hired working this morning. But wait till we start laying the cement foundation for the pavement. There will be lots of the right kind of work for all who are willing to do it then. You see many of those who applied had not been doing anything all winter, and when they started at this heavy work their muscles stiffened up pretty badly."

At the Board of Works meeting last night Alderman Johnston referred to this very rumour, but Mayor Buller said he was satisfied that the English-speaking and local workers were being given every chance.

The new rails were linked to the old ones at the corner of McDonnel and George streets this afternoon and so far the workers are ahead of their schedule, which calls for them to be finished by the middle of June.

Interesting Address by Rev. J. R Webb at Annual Thank-offering of Mark St. Methodist Church

The annual thank-offering service of the Women's Missionary Society, of Mark St. Methodist Church, was held last evening when a very large number of people were in attendance. The pastor, Rev. C. E. Cragg, presided. The feature of the evening was an address by Rev. J. R. Webb, of Murray St. Baptist Church, on the life and work of Dan Crawford, the great Missionary in Central Africa. Mr. Webb's remarks were extremely interesting and were followed with rapt attention.

Misses M. Armstrong and L. Garbutt rendered a vocal duet entitled "Only Jesus," with telling effect. At the conclusion a dialogue setting forth the origin and purpose of thank-offerings was spendidly given by Mrs. J. Speer, and five girls, namely, Myrtle Soucci, Myrtle Mesley, Alva McIntyre, Hetty Record and May Cork.

The total offering amount to over sixty dollars, a very encouraging sum.

Veteran Actors Observe the Day

Examiner Special:

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 23.—Of the countless celebrations held throughout the English-speaking world to-day in honour of the 350th anniversary of Shakspere's birth, none perhaps was marked with more sincerity and enthusiasm than that held at the home for retired actors at Holmesburg, which was endowed by Edwin Forrest, who was one of the world's greatest Shaksperean performers. The celebration was participated in by the dozen or more veterans of the stage, who are now inmates of the home, and many of whom in their time were famous for their rendition of Shaksperean roles.

CAUSED HAVOC IN FLOWER GARDEN

Chickens Rooted Up Seeds and Owner Was Fined

Frank Elms, 73 Edinburgh avenue, has a fine collection of prize chickens. He allowed them to roam at large, although they generally managed to lay the eggs in the nests in his hen house. The feathered culprits got over to the garden of Mrs. Mary Sims and caused her considerable annoyance. They kept on digging like a miner digging for gold, and Mrs. Sims' garden seeds and other things did not have a chance to get their accustomed start in mother earth. Frank had to pay $4 for the liberty which his egg-producers have had and they must play in their own back yard in the future.

The above appears in yesterday's Hamilton Spectator; and now it's up to any Peterborough citizen, who feels himself aggrieved by the ravages of his neighbour's chickens to go and do likewise.

HASTINGS SHOP LICENSE MUST GO

The license commissioners at their meeting on Monday renewed the two local hotel licenses, but gave Mr. P. M. Howard three months to dispose of his liquor stock. Deputations from Havelock, Norwood, Seymour, Percy and Hastings presented petitions against renewing the license, and the various parties addressing the board, stated that although they regarded Mr. Howard as a man who had kept the law and had no grievance against him personally they wanted the license cancelled as they claimed it effected their municipalities. A counter petition signed by 115 ratepayers from Hastings was presented by Mr. Howard, asking for a renewal, and stating that the people here had given their verdict by vote two years ago, but despite this the commissioners could not see their way to renew the license.—Hastings Star.

WAS NOT FIRST KING GEORGE MEDAL

Statement in Military Column of Examiner Brings Out Letter

Peterborough, April 22, 1914.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—I have noticed in your night's issue under the heading of "Drill Night at the Armouries," the following:

The result of 21 years' service with the 57th Regiment was seen at the Armouries last evening, when Sergt. A. J. Warne was presented with a long service medal. He joined the regiment in 1893, and has since then been a member. Sergt. Warne is proud of his medal, and well might he be. It is undoubtedly the first King George medal that has been presented in Peterborough.

I beg leave to differ with your statement, as it is erroneous as to Sergt. A. J. Warne being the first man in Peterborough to be presented by the King Service Medal. The late Farrier Sergt. W. Batten, of the 24th Batt'y C.F.A., was the first one to be presented by the King George Medal and it was presented to Farrier Sergt. W. Batten by Sir Frederick Borden, the then Minister of Militia and Defence, whilst on a visit here nearly five years ago.

Thanking you for your space, I remain,

Yours very truly,
R. A. W. HAY,
Bgde. O.R.C., 10th Bgde. C.F.A.

At Shakspere's Birthplace

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., April 23. — The old-world town of Stratford-on-Avon, the birthplace and burial place of Shakspere, was gaily decorated to-day in celebration of the 350th anniversary of the birth of the immortal bard. Hundreds of pilgrims from all over the United Kingdom and from other countries as well visited the town to look upon Anne Hathaway's house and other places connected with the life of Shakspere. A throng of record-breaking proportions attended the literary exercises and also witnessed the charming ceremony of decorating the poet's grave.

TEMPERANCE MEN IN WEST ONTARIO ARE AROUSED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., April 23. — "If Hon. W. J. Hanna goes back on the agreement made last November to cut off every bar in Huron on May 1, provided that the Canada Temperance Act carried. A. H. Musgrove, of Wingham, and Harry Eilber, of Crediton, will never sit in Parliament again," declared Rev. E. G. Powell, Secretary of Temperance Forces of Huron to-day. The temperance men are up in arms over the efforts of the Government to evade its promises and the action of Centre and South Huron commissioners in extending licenses for three months and one year.

Strong deputations were present and urged the commissioners to stand by the promises made by Mr. Hanna. All Western Ontario is watching the situation with the keenest interest.

London Man Was Instantly Killed By a Buzz Saw

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., April 23.—Frank Robbins, aged 35, was instantly killed last night when a stave flew from a buzz saw in Haynes' mill and struck him in the temple. Besides his wife he leaves two small children. An inquest will be held.

MORE COMPLAINT ABOUT THE DUST

Peterborough, April 22, 1914.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I wish to call your attention regarding the dust nuisance. The dust of yesterday was something desperate. Is it going to continue all summer like this? Perhaps the Mayor is going to water the streets with a small watering can that the people use in their gardens. The city officials must be dreaming, or else our streets would not be neglected the way they are.

I don't blame Mr. Spence, the Sanitary Inspector, for making his visits at nights. You see, when a person has not got his life insured, he hates to venture out in such dust storms or hurricanes for fear of losing his eyesight.

The dust is as thick on the sidewalks now as the hair is on a young dog's back. You would actually think that this was some old forsaken country village.

Thanking you Mr. Editor, for your most valuable space in the paper, I am,

Yours truly,
"Lonelydale."

Children's Scalp Sores Are Healed By Zam-Buk

Mothers are well aware how frequently children contract scalp sores, ringworm, etc., at school. Some little sufferer is sent to school with a sore of this nature. At play the children change caps, and right there the infection is spread—the damage done.

Some children are particularly liable to scalp sores, etc., and often these break out with annoying frequency. Such a case was that of the daughter of Mrs. Albert Gaedike, of 485 Amherst St., Montreal. Mrs. Gaedike says: "My little three-year-old daughter suffered frequently from scalp disease, and try as we would, we would not rid the little one of this. We tried everything we could think of, but failed to effect a cure, until we were advised to try Zam-Buk. This balm seemed entirely different to anything we had ever tried before, and from first applying it there was a marked improvement. The sores became less inflamed and less irritable. After a few days, they ceased to trouble the child; and in less than a fortnight from first commencing with Zam-Buk they were completely healed. In view of these facts I feel it my duty to let mothers know how beneficial Zam-Buk is."

There is no doubt that for scalp sores, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, cold cracks, chapped hands, frost bite, and similar sores, Zam-Buk is absolutely without equal. It is just as good for piles, varicose sores, poisoned wounds, cuts, burns and scalds. Rubbed well in over the affected part, it cures rheumatism, sciatica, etc., etc., and rubbed into the chest it relieves the tightness and feeling of weight due to contracting a bad cold. All druggists and stores sell at 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse imitations.

BICKERS WAS A GREAT IDEALIST SAYS DR. SYMONDS

Eloquent Address on the Great English Writer by an Eminent Divine

AN AMERICAN AUDIENCE

At the meeting of the American Women's Club of Montreal held recently, Rev. Herbert Symonds gave a lecture on "Dickens".

On opening his address Dr. Symonds said that he knew that there was one incident in the life of Dickens which had to be touched on very lightly before an American audience, but in explantion of it he wished to state that Dickens was a great idealist, and that he had idealised the United States. He had always been severe on England, and when he went to the United States it was with the purpose of finding a remedy for England's mistakes, he therefore underwent a re-actionary disappointment when he finally found that the country of his dreams was not as ideal as he had pictured it.

Dickens deals with the present and not with the past, he said, Scott wrote of historical happenings, and Thackery dealt with aristocrats, whereas Dickens dealt with the common people. He believed in inate goodness as well as inborn sin. Dr. Symonds then spoke of heredity, he said, as neither his father nor his mother were in nay way unusual as far as can be ascertained, which, by the way, he said, is an unusua circumstance. Had he been the son of rich parents, he went on, he very probably would not have written 'Martin Chuzzlewit' and 'David Copperfield.'

'He was a very sensitive chid, and when he sat pasting labels onto blacking bottles, as a little lad, he very nearly gave up his hopes of becoming a great and learned man. In spite of this he became one of the foremost reporters of his day and at the age of twenty-two he was earning thirty-five dollars a week in that role on the Morning Chronicle. It was then that he published his first work, a short sketch, and, later 'Sketches by Boz,' and, in 1836, the 'Pickwick Papers,' published in monthly numbers, which were supposed, in the first place, to be merey short descriptions of the pictures by Mr. Seymour but which made him famous in a few short months. There were 400 copies issued of the first number, but after a few numbers had appeared the issue had increased to 40,000. Every class was attracted by them, even Thomas Carlyle became interested.

No man was ever truer to himself, he said, than Dickens. He was always a boy. When he wanted a little rest he took it in violent exercises. At the age of thirty he was famous over half the globe. Dickens never entered into descriptive writing unless he had some purpos in so doing. His descriptive scenes generally lead up to some humorous incident. He was intensely interested in the little details of the street and the house, such as most writers took no notice of, and here he was aided by his gift of observation and his wonderful imagination. All his characters are individualized and to be remembered. He bestows wonderful care on his characters. His characters really live for him.

A novel egg boiler for households is surmounted with a figure of a rooster, which crows automatically when its contents have been boiled a desired time.

Grain Trains Will Begin To Move From Midland Very Soon

LINDSAY, April 23.—There is a great demand for empty freight cars at Midland and all the available empty cars of the G.T.R. rolling stock are being shipped to that place with all possible despatch. The need for them is due to the efforts being made to clear the elevators of that town of grain before navigation and its accompanying rush begins.

Trainmaster MacMillan said yesterday that the grain would be moving from Midland just as soon as the ice disappears from the harbour and the elevators are ready to receive the western grain.

BURNLEY'S FINE DEFENCE.

One writer picks Burnley to win the cup this year on account of the fine defence that they have. The six defence men of the Burnley team are considered to be about the best in England, though their forwards are not as strong as they might be. Like Liverpool, Burnley have only lost four goals in their seven ties, and the Anfielders have scored 14, or 2 more than Burnley.

...ward, will ... of such and for Englishmen generally, be a day of special observance, it being St. George's Day. While April 23 is not definitely known to be the anniversary of the birth of the man whom the Englishmen have selected as their ideal and model, it is generally recognized as such and around numberless festive boards on that evening the memory of St George will be toasted, while in many places other forms of celebration will be held.

WHO WAS ST. GEORGE?

Who was St. George, who, for centuries has been honored by Englishmen and their descendants as the patron saint of old England? The stories told of his life and death vary greatly, and the historical facts, are very few. By most people he is known or remembered as the patron saint of England. Yet, England alone does not claim him, for Portugal, and Arragon, in years gone by, have also appealed to St. George in times of national stress.

THE FAMILIAR STORY.

The generally accepted story of the ... and death of St. George is very ...ferent from the above, though it ... not taken by all as truth. There ... possibly a small foundation for ... legend, and this gradually grew, ...en as the stories of King Arthur ...ew from the old myths into such ...mes that they fill many volumes.

BORN IN CAPPADOCIA.

According to the legend given by Metaphrastes and substantially repeated in the Roman acta martyrum, Saint George was born in Cappadocia, of noble Christian parents from whom he received a careful religious training. Having become a soldier, he rapidly rose under the Roman Emperor Diocletian to high military rank. He did excellent military work in Persian Armenia and visited Britain on an imperial mission. When the Emperor began to show pronounced hostility to the Christians, George sought a personal interview with him, deliberately professed his faith and resigned his commission after remonstrating against the prosecution of the Christians. He was shortly afterwards arrested, and, having suffered various tortures, was put to death in Nicomedia on April 23, 303. His body was later removed to Lydda.

BASIS IS UNSOUND.

The historical basis of the tradition is particularly unsound. The accounts of his life vary in important details such as the year of his death, the place of his death, and confuse him with others as well as draw on Pagan mythology. Calvin impugned the saint's existence, and in the Canon of Pope Gelasius (494) George is mentioned in a list of those "whose names are justly reverenced among men, but whose acts are known only to God,' a statement which implies that legends had already grown up around his name.

A THIRD VERSION.

The dragon typifies the evils which St. George is supposed to have successfully overcome. In the even more familiar story of 'St. George and the Dragon,' familiar to almost all children of English birth, St. George was travelling in Asia Minor as a free lance, ready to rescue any fair damsel. He came to a city which for many years had been giving up nine of its finest maidens as a yearly sacrifice, in the form of tribute to a fiery dragon, which resided in the rocks in the nearby desert. When St. George arrived the yearly tribute was about to be given and one of the nine was the King's daughter. St. George immediately ordered that the sacrifice be not made, and he mounted his horse and rode off. Though the dragon shot flames and smoke through his nostrils and viciously swept the ground with his tail, St. George thrust his sword—some writers say, his lance—through the scales and killed the beast.

A PAGAN DRAGON

The dragon has been associated with St. George ever since the Golden Legend of Jacques de Voragine, and is traced to the sixth century. At Arsuf or Joppa—neither of them far from Lydda—the Greek hero Perseus had slain the sea-monster that threatened the virgin Andromeda, and George, like many another Christian saint, entered into the inheritance of veneration previously enjoyed by a pagan hero. The exploit thus bears a close relation to the common Aryan myth of the sun god as the conqueror of the powers of darkness.

THE LESSONS TAUGHT.

Although historical criticism has torn the beautiful story into fragments in order to understand its truth, the real truth of the story still lives and has a worthy application to the people of this materialistic age The truth of the tradition is that a man having risen to high military rank in the armies of one great nation in the world, having excellent prospects for a successful career sacrificed his career and his life for the principles of his religious faith.

The beautiful example of sacrifice, the fine illustration of firmness, and integrity to conviction of a real hero, is worthy of emulation in the daily struggle to live wisely and rightly. The story has an application which should not be forgotten in the celebration of St. George's Day.

"The hero won his well-earned place,
Amid the saints, in death's dread hour;
And still the peasant seeks his grave
And next to God, reveres his power.

In many a Church his form is seen,
With sword, and shield, and helmet sheen,
Ye know him by his shield of pride,
And by the dragon at his side."

LENDRUM'S STUDIO IN CALGARY

The Calgary News-Telegram makes the following pleasing reference to the new photograph studio of Mr. Lendrum, formerly of this city, The write-up were the views of a clever actress writer who was visiting some of the leading places of business in Calgary:

"In my profession it is always a general topic among the artistes regarding the photograph galleries, where good poses can be got, and many of my fellow-artistes have told me of the Lendrum Studio here in Calgary. My curiosity was naturally up, so I had the Overland car stop there to have a look at the studio. The result was that I found such a fine lot of beautiful photos that I decided to have them pose me. They have taken a number of them, and from the artistic way they went about their work has led me to believe that I will get some of the best photos I have ever had taken. They have promised me proofs before I leave the city, so you can appreciate the fact that they have an excellently equipped studio to be able to get such quick results. I am sure a visit to the Lendrum Studio will convince you that I have good reasons to be so enthusiastic."

AN OLD SETTLER FINDS QUICK RELIEF

Chas. Marshall Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Marshall Tells How Her Husband Suffered, and of His Speedy Recovery When He Used the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Parkinson, Algoma, Ont., April 22. —(Special).Living far from towns and with doctors not within easy reach, many of the settlers have found Dodd's Kidney Pills an inestimable blessing. One of those is Mr. Charles Marshall, Sr., whose recovery from a severe case of kidney disease has recently been the cause of much satisfaction to his family and friends.

"My husband was suffering very much with his back and legs," Mrs. Marshall says, speaking of her husband's cure. "He went to see the doctor, and he told him he had urinary trouble, but he did not seem to get any better.

"Then I sent for some Dodd's Kidney Pills. Since taking them he has no more pain in his back and legs, and his other troubles are all gone.

"I am indeed thankful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for my husband, and I hope other sufferers from kidney disease will benefit by his experience, and use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Urinary troubles are caused by diseased kidneys. So are backache, rheumatism, lumbago and heart disease. The natural remedy is to cure the kidneys by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

MOUNTING RATE OF DOMINION MILITIA BILLS

Col. Hughes, Minister of Militia, has sent to members of the House of Commons a letter asking that they attend when his estimates are taken up for consideration. It is to be hoped that they will not only attend but make their views known to Canada's drillmaster. There is no man in public life to-day who needs talking to more than Col. Hughes. He is the most reckless spender of money in a Government that is "dashing away" at an amazing financial pace during what is admittedly a period of serious depression.

From Confederation until Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Government came into power the expenditure from the consolidated fund on current account for purposes of militia and defence only thrice exceeded a million and a half dollars—namely, in 1872, because of the Fenian raids, in 1885 because of the Northwest Rebellion, and in 1895. The cost of the defence service was held down firmly until the outbreak of the Boer War, and the taking over by Canada of the task of garrisoning Halifax and Esquimalt. The maintenance of a regiment of Canadian infantry and a force of garrison artillery at Halifax greatly increased the expenditure upon defence, but the burden was borne cheerfully, because Canada's assumption of it lightened to that extent the load upon the shoulders of the British taxpayer.

There was no abnormal increase during the later years of the Laurier Government, as will be seen from the following record taken from the public accounts of Consolidated Fund expenditures on militia and defence:

1908..	$5,498,188
1909..	5,292,646
1910..	4,679,966
1911..	6,868,651

The naval service figures swelled the total in the last year of the Laurier Administration. When Col. Hughes assumed office the floodgates were opened. The figures for 1912 were $7,200,600; and for 1913 $9,-114,588. The main estimates for the year which ended on March 31, 1914, called for the spending of $10,500,-000, and it is known that the supplements will be a very considerable sum.

But these figures, large as they are, give no indication of what the cost of defence will be when Col. Hughes' "plant" is in full operation. Millions of dollars are being spent upon capital account on armouries, drill halls, and barracks. From the Palace. However, they were appointed, and Liverpool takes the place in the final.

BURNLEY'S FINE DEFENCE.

One writer picks Burnley to win Cup this year on account of the defence that they have. The six defence men of the Burnley team considered to be about the best England, though their forwards are not as strong as they might be. Liverpool, Burnley have only four goals in their seven ties, and Anfielders have scored 14, or more than Burnley.

nipeg drill hall, $150,000; Regina drill hall, $100,000; Moose Jaw drill hall, $100,000; Calgary drill hall, $100,000; Edmonton drill hall, $100,-000; Vancouver drill hall, $75,000; Victoria drill hall, $100,000.

There are numerous other small drill halls in the list, but it is already long enough to show that Col. Hughes intends to become the warlord of Canada on a very ample scale. What do the people think of it all? Here is the opinion of an influential citizen of Hamilton. It is typical of that held by the great mass of the Canadian people: "I am opposed," he writes, "to militarism as it is now carried on by Col. Sam Hughes. But if we are bound to spend money on playing soldier, it should be done in the winter time when men are out of work. All the unemployed should be drilling in our drill sheds at a small fee per day. This would keep them out of mischief. The officers would learn their integrity and worth, and could recommend and place them in situations, and it would be a bureau for finding them work. The method employed now requires young men to leave their places in the summer time, although a great many have been out of work all winter and have just secured good positions. They are called upon to quit work and go to Niagara to play soldier. Last year in Hamilton here they had to resort to the use of the courts and Magistrates to make people go and drill who wanted to stay home and work. In Hamilton all winter very many young men have paraded the streets out of work and on the verge of starvation. They would welcome military training at that time."

If one may judge from the votes taken for drill sheds, Col. Hughes anticipates drill summer and winter, day and night, rain or shine. The country may think that it is playing soldier. He has decided that it is to be play no longer. The goal is a quarter of a million men ready to take the field and provided with ample war material. Are the members of Parliament who have received Col. Hughes' "whip" prepared to take responsibility for Col. Hughes' policy?—Globe.

Lindsay Has New Split Log Drag For Use On Streets

The new Standard split log drag ordered by the town a short time ago arrived last evening, and was put in commission at once this morning. Commissioner Williams with one man and a team put a very bad piece of roadbed, which was full of ruts and holes, in very good shape in not more than an hour. The drag will prove a great advantage to the roads in town, as several miles can be covered in a day with one team and a man. Alderman Irving and Commissioner Williams are very much pleased with the town's investment and expect to make a great improvement in a short time in the local roads.—Lindsay Post.

THERE'S SOMETHING IN THE BRITISH AFTER ALL.

St. George's Day, April 23, 1913.

I've been meditating lately, that, when everything is told,
There's something in the English after all;
They may be bent on conquest and too eager after gold,
But there's something in the English after all.
Though their sins and faults are many, and I won't exhaust my breath
By endeavouring to tell you of them all,
Yet they have a sense of duty and they'll face it to the death,
So there's something in the English after all.

If you're wounded by a savage foe and bugles sound "Retire,"
There's something in the English after all;
You may bet your life they'll carry you beyond the zone of fire,
For there's something in the English after all.
Yes, although their guns be empty and their blood be ebbing fast,
And to stay by wounded comrades be to fall,
Yet they'll set their teeth like bull dogs and protect you to the last,
Or they'll die like English soldiers, after all.

When a British ship is lost at sea, oh, then I know you'll find
That there's something in the English after all.
There's no panic rush for safety, where the weak are left behind,
For there's something in the English after all.
But the women and the children are the first to leave the wreck,
With the men in line as steady as a wall,
And the captain is the last to stand upon the reeling deck,
So there's something in the English after all.

Though half of Europe hates them and would joy in their decline,
Yet there's something in the English after all.
They may scorn the scanty number of the thin red British line,
Yet they fear its lean battalions after all.
For they know that, from the colonel to the drummer in the band,
There is not a single soldier in them all
But would go to blind destruction were their country to command,
And call it simple duty—after all.

stand the full significance of this fact a Stetson must be worn or at least handled.

Some Company Facts.

Last year the Stetson Company cut 11,500,000 animal skins for the fur used in the making of the hats produced. During the year 3,335,000 hats were turned out or an average of 11,000 a day. The quantity of fur used totalled 250,000 pounds.

The company makes its looms and spools in its own big machine shop. The silk required for the bands is imported from Italy and Japan, and last year 4,000 miles of silk ribbon for bands and binding were turned out.

A Stetson auditorium and stadium have been erected for the use of the employees, and a splendid esprit de corps among the workers has been won by the generosity of the company towards its hands, who may share in the profits and who are handsomely remembered every Christmas.

The cheapest Stetson retails at $5.00, and the next quality sells at $6.00, the prices being mentioned simply in support of the claim that the Stetson is practically unapproached and is without near competition.

Rain Spoiled The Petes Work-out Bob Sterling Is Expected Today

Wire From Big Curve Ball Pitcher Stated That He Will Be In Youngstown To-day--Outfielder Naw Was Released by Manager Blount Yesterday.

Special Wire to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 23.—For the first time in a week the Peterborough Canadian Leaguers were unable to get out for practice this afternoon, a shower of rain preventing the squad from going through the usual long drill. The enforced rest was gladly welcomed by the Petes who have had a strenuous grind for the past few days and who appreciated a lay-off. The afternoon was spent in a fanning game around the hotel and many a famous game was re-played by the Canadian Leaguers as they fanned in the Ted House.

The weather conditions permitted a workout in the morning, and Blount had his full squad at the Park, going through the usual morning routine of batting and fielding. The morning's doings were varied by a little gardening on the side. A number of the players seemed to be experts with the gardening tools, and the infield was given a thorough over-hauling, to put it in the best of shape for the exhibition games scheduled for the week-end.

The best thing about to-day's news was a wire from Pitcher Bob Stirling stating that he would report to-day. With the Mount Vernon boy in Manager Blount's pitching staff will be complete.

The can rattled again to-day when Outfielder Charlie Naw, of Jeanette, Pa., was allowed to go. Naw looked like a pretty fair performer, but he was troubled with a bad arm and could not get into shape. There is still a fight for outfield jobs, however, as Gaffney, Blount, Dawson, Swartz and possibly Fox and Conway, will be candidates.

GOLF

The golfer's load is lifted, with the coming of sweet spring
Forgetting all the past his heart is waking
To the future, and his aim, is to play the grand old game
And do the course, his last year's record breaking.
Oh! it's great to be alive—so "tee up" dear boys and drive
And start once more the gay golf ball a-flying;
For well we understand—the chance for all is grand,
The glory of the game is in the trying.

That hope springs eternal in the golfer's breast is a fact well established, otherwise many a disappointed and discouraged golfer, who threatened, vowed and swore to heaven above that he had played his last game and that he would break his clubs asunder, casting them to perdition or the nearest available spot, would soon be out of the game for good and all. But fortunately the new day brings new hope and once more he is out on the links with his faithful clubs, attempting once more to win out or die in the attempt. If he is the right sort and sticks to it long enough he will win out—or have a good excuse for not doing so.

Man goes through life very much as he goes round the links. So many separate holes to be won or lost, and the complete game lying in the balance, topping his drive, slicing, putting weakly, bunkers to avoid and the luck of the lie, but all to be overcome by a steady, consister game. There is luck for all, good and bad, but is shouldn't make much difference to the game as a whole. The strong, steady player, comes out all right and the weak player curses his luck, tears up his card, and very likely goes home in an awful mood and kicks the family cat out of the back door.

All of which brings us to the point that Brantford golfers are anticipating the joys and hopes of another new season.

Out on the links the greenmen under the genial guidance of the chairman of the grounds committee are busy clearing the courts for action and the house committee is looking into the vital matter of towels, nail brushes, etc. The golfer himself is carefully examining his clubs, checking over his old wearing apparel and appraising the value of last season's balls. Filled with the lust of battle he tests and swings his faithful old driver, longing once more to be in action and beat the mischief out of some unfortunate victim.

For the due encouragement of all the match committee have arranged a complete schedule of matches and competitions for the coming season. They are also rearranging the handicaps, giving the younger or weaker players a more generous opportunity of gaining fame and many a prize this new year. 5 10 or expert golfer.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Ottawa Free Press:

Chatham fans turned out in hundreds in the afternoon to see the practice. There were fifty or sixty scouts lined up at one end of the field and any time the ball came their way they let it hit them rather than get out of the way. The crowd saw a couple of swell pitchers in action, Sam Hall exercising his salary whip for the first time since he came here. He shows class in ever move and has a wonderful amount of stuff. He is finished in every particular.

Urban Shocker folowed Hall on the mound, and looked equally as good. He is a well built fellow with a corking delivery and the sweetest slow ball ever seen around these parts. He had the hitters ducking from the plate as the ball floated over the heart. He also has a fine jump and a fast one. Shaughnessy certainly has two very promising twirlers in this pair.

Peterson, who comes from Fort Wayne, has had a sore arm, but worked out for a quarter of an hour. He sapes up well. Frank Kuhat is looking pretty good this Spring, too.

Improvement in Petie Powers

Catcher Eddie Wagner wired from Fort Wayne he would report here Thursday. As Catcher Artie Lage does not join the club till Saturday, in Adrian, the backstopping has fallen wholly on the shoulders of Petie Powers and Petie is a much better looking ball player this season than last.

A young amateur from Montreal, rejoicing in the name of Ubald Rose, blew in yesterday morning. He is an outfielder and brought a bat along with him that hit .369 last year, he says. Spicer borrowed the stick and busted it, much to Rose's chagrin. Pitcher Kohl is still nursing a sore leg as the result of an injury received Monday, and has not yet been used on the mound.

TO RUBE WADDELL

When in praise to the stars of the present day
Your voices glad you raise,
Think of the one who has gone before,
The star of former days.

When Walter J. was still a youth,
And Russell was a boy,
The pitching deeds of Rube Waddell,
Thrilled many fans with joy.

They speak of Walter Johnson's speed,
Of Woods' "smoke" ball as well,
Think of the speed of the southpaw king,
The speed of Rube Waddell.

They talk of Bender's mighty curves,
Of Rucker's famous drop,
But Rube Waddell had everything
From a slow one to a "hop."

One hears much of the pitcher's skill
And of the hurler's spell,
Just ask the batters Rube has faced
Of the skill of Rube Waddell.

But time has claimed its victim,
And Rube has heard the call,
No more will Waddell toe the slab,
No more will he play ball.

No more will batters fear his skill,
For Rube Waddell is gone,
No more will he mow the batters down
As he has always done.

So when you talk of Johnson,
Wood, Bender and the rest,
Just speak one word for Rube Waddell,
When he was at his best.

ENGLISH SOCCER NEWS

Lancashire will carry off a good share of the soccer honours that the season of 1913-14 has to offer, for while Blackburn Rovers are the League champions, the Football Association Cup will find a twelve-months' resting place within the borders of the county alatine. Burnley are finalists for the first time, and Liverpool have never before advanced so far in the competition. Only once before, and that was just ten years ago, have two Lancashire clubs been left to settle the destination of the trophy, Manchester City and Bolton Wanderers supplying the opposition on that occasion.

Even the most sanguine of soccer experts would have been placed under restraint if he had hinted that Burnley and Liverpool would have reached the Cup final this year, and yet here we are waiting for the result of the game that is to be played on the famous Palace enclosure next Saturday. The treasurers of the two finalists must be happy men for some big gates have been taken, as will be seen by the appended figures:

BURNLEY.

1st round: v. South Shields	£ 598
2nd round: Derby County	1,092
3rd round: v. Bolton Wan.	2,152
4th round: v. Sunderland	2,196
Replay: v. Sunderland	2,892
Semi-final: v. Sheffield U.	3,777
Replay: v. Sheffield U.	1,831
	£14,418

LIVERPOOL.

1st round: v. Barnsley	£ 676
Replay: v. Barnsley	800
2nd round: v. Gillingham	1,317
3rd round: v. West Ham	892
Replay: v. West Ham	1,430
4th round: v. Queen's P.R.	1,900
Semi-final: v. Aston Villa	1,950
	£9,065

LIVERPOOL'S BOMBSHELL.

Aston Villa were regarded as certain winners of the trophy, and their downfall to Liverpool at Tottenham was a surprise to everyone. That the Liverpudians deserved to win by the margin of two goals may be accepted as the general view of the critics. The display and result was of course surprising and disappointing to the Villa supporters. There was a confident hope that the team unbeaten for nearly three months would easily qualify to appear at the Palace in the final, and create a new record. The Villas' defeat was principally due to over-confidence, and not until it was too late did they realize the strength of their opponents. They entered the arena full of confidence and sure of victory, and when the winning of the toss gave them the advantage of a slight wind they seemed to see a rose-strewn path to the Palace. However, they were disappointed, and Liverpool takes their place in the final.

BURNLEY'S FINE DEFENCE.

One writer picks Burnley to win the Cup this year on account of the fine defence that they have. The six defence men of the Burnley team are considered to be about the best in England, though their forwards are not as strong as they might be. Like Liverpool, Burnley have only lost four goals in their seven ties, and the Anfielders have scored 14, or 2 more than Burnley.

THE REFEREE.

H. S. Bamlett, of Gateshead, will handle the whistle at the big game, and R. O. Rodgers (London) and J. Talls (Lincoln) will act as linesmen. If the game ends in a tie on Saturday the replay will take place at Bolton on the following Wednesday.

Blount Needs a First Baseman Chapdelaine Goes

Special Wire to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, April 23.—Chapdelaine was let out by Manager Blount this morning for the reason that he has a wealth of catchers. Competition has been too keen and the going too hard for Chappy, who intends to look around for a berth with some other club.

The Weather Better.

Although the weather has been more or less unsettled since the training season opened, it cleared nicely this morning and the promises are now for the finest brand during the rest of the sojourn here.

Weak at First Base.

This morning's workout found the infield going fine with the only weakness apparent at first base. Flanagan and O'Hearn both lack the finish and experience for the corner and will hardly do. The other positions appear to be pretty well determined right now. Joe Byrne has been showing better form than at any time last season, and looks strong for his old corner. Price has no competition at short, and King looks very good at second.

Blount Pulls Wires.

Manager Blount is pulling lines for several new men, one of them a capable first-baseman. One new face is expected to arrive this afternoon. Miller, Kelly and Ryberg are doing the receiving which should be well handled this summer.

INCREASE IN CANADIAN CRIME

For many years comparisons of statistics of crime in the United State and Canada have been accompanied by comments unfavourable to this country. These comments have been justified, in large measure, by the facts. For one reason or another, criminal acts, especially serious crimes against persons or property, have been more frequent here than across the border. Various explanations have been offered, and the one most generally accepted is that while here the law's delay favours the acquittal of accused persons and new trials favour the escape of many who may been found guilty, in Canada justice is both sure and swift. To many observers familiar with conditions in both countries this explanation did not seem far wide of the mark. Delays which are so frequent here that they attract little or no attention would not be tolerated in Canada.

Apparently, however, there were other reasons for a situation that this country has found humiliating, for in recent years there has been a marked increase in crime in Canada. In 1912, according to statistics recently published, 208 out of every 100,000 Canadians were convicted of indictable offences, and the number of convictions for all offences was 146,227, as compared with 113,200 in 1911. Various explanations, none of them altogether satisfactory, are given by those who try to account for this increase of 29 per cent. in the total number of convictions.

SENATE APPROVES BILL FOR $500,000 TO SAVE AMERICANS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 23.—Senate Approval Committee reports bill which appropriates $500,000 to get Americans out of Mexico.

BILL TO LOWER THE GARNISHEE LIMIT WAS DEFEATED

Labour, represented by Controller James Simpson and Mr. Fred Bancroft, defeated the bill of Mr. J. R. Dargavel, of Leeds, before the Legal Committee of the Legislature on Tuesday and thereby forestalled the move of the merchants to open the pay envelopes of the labourers and collect debts via the garnishee rule.

The bill proposed to lower the $25 limit which a married man must earn before the creditor could step in and garnishee for unpaid bills, but strenuous opposition was raised by the labour representatives.

They contended that the merchant should sue through the ordinary courts, and should not be given any preference in collecting debts or any means which the labourer would not employ against the merchant. "We're trying to catch crooks who seek to defraud us," returned the Leeds member, but this suggestion of dishonesty on the part of labour was keenly resented.

In coming to the rescue of labour, Mr. W. D. McPherson declared there was no reason why the bill should be passed. In many cases, he added, the mere fact that a garnishee notice was served upon an employer resulted in the dismissal of the worker. Particularly was that the case with railways. "They are only trying to protect a merchant against his own carelessness," added Mr. James Simpson. "Why should credit be given before the storekeepers knows his man?" The bill was lost unanimously.

EXPLANATION BY A. BROWN & CO.

Peterborough, Ont., April 22, 1914.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—My name having been mentioned in connection with Mr. Gibbs and his trouble in regard to moving his house on Stewart Street, I wish to say that I had absolutely nothing to do with the matter except that I acted as agent for Dr. Amys in selling the house to Mr. Gibbs.

When I learned on Tuesday evening that the City Engineer would not issue the permit to move the house, I called on Mayor Butler, he being next door to my office, to see why the permit could not be granted. I certainly did not ask the Mayor to interfere with the City Engineer or his duties, as was intimated in your report of what Mayor Butler said at the meeting.

I wish to say that I am very sorry for Mr. Gibbs, as he will sustain considerable loss, but after going over the route that the house had to be taken, I think the City Engineer was perfectly right in refusing the permit.

Thanking you for your valuable space.

I remain, yours very truly,
A. BROWN & CO.

ENGLISH WARNED TO LEAVE MEXICO

Special Wire to The Examiner:

EL PASO, Texas, April 23.—H. C. Miles, the British Consul in El Paso, to-day received word from Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the English Ambassador at Washington warning all British subjects to leave Mexico at once.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 23.—Nothing directly has been received from O'Shaughnessy, but he is expected to leave Mexico for the United States within 24 hours.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 23.—The President told cabinet to-day that breaking off of diplomatic relations between two countries does not necessarily mean war.

Market Sold Off Under Afternoon Mexican News

NEW YORK, April 23, 3 p.m.—In the late afternoon the market sold off on the report that the Government intended to call for volunteers to the extent of 200,000, and that Villa intended to assume the aggressive by making a dash across the border into El Paso.

Southern Pacific showed some strength and was helped by the announcement that fully 90 per cent. of the 55 million convertibles was subscribed by stockholders and purchasers of "rights." Although the company has large property interests in Mexico, that fact did not seem to affect its market.

Money, 2 per cent.

Sales, $308,500.

O.P.R. struck a new low line for the year when it dropped to 165¾ this afternoon after holding up well until the lunch recess.

Reading was strong during the day, but at the close had dropped back to the opening price.

Southern Pacific and Mexican Oil were fairly strong, considering the unsettled condition of the market.

Smelters opened at 65, dropped to 62 at noon, and closed at 60¾. It shared the weak feature with C.P.R.

Mrs. Margaret Little Huston, relict of William Huston, of North Monaghan, died at her residence, 340 Charlotte Street, on Wednesday, April 22nd, at the age of 75 years.

If the pillow is removed gently from under the head of a person who is snoring, it will not disturb his repose, but give greater freedom for breathing, and the snoring will cease.

Ask your grocer for a box about 12 by 12 by 6 inches, or one that baby can comfortably sit in. The sides and ends must be made of single boards. Take out one end board, 12 by 12 inches, then saw the sides down to resemble the sides of a sled. Cut a strip two inches wide from the board you took out and nail flat across the bottom. Pad the inside with cotton, tack it with small tacks, cover the whole thing with some pretty denim or cretonne, finish ends with braid and brass-headed tacks. Lay it on the floor and tie baby in. He can't fall, and yet he can pick up most of his playthings as he wants them.

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The stock market continues to reflect irregularity, but it has acted well under war news, and technical considerations may force rallies any time. The composite view of the best sources in the street as to the immediate course of the market is that it will develop into a trading market in which the best stocks should be bought on all weakness after reactions and weak positioned issues sold on rallies when they look strong. Responsible interests are recommending the purchase on declines of Union Pacific, Great Northern preferred, Illinois Central, Southern Pacific, Atchinson and Reading, and Lehigh Valley.

Foreign interests are said to be willing to buy the standard rails on weakness.

Canadian Pacific broke to 194, and that too is a purchase at this level.

The long is the winning side now.

ISSUE IS DEFINED

Liberal Amendment to Budget is Presented in House

SIR WILFRID STATES CASE

OTTAWA, April 24. — After over two weeks of debate in the Commons the tariff issue between the two parties in Canada was summed up and defined yesterday in the amendment proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and voted down at a late hour last night by the Government majority. This amendment declared for free wheat, free wheat products, and free agricultural implements, with tariff revision designed to relieve the consumers from unnecessary custom taxation without doing injustice to any class.

Although the amendment dealt specifically only with the wiping out of tariff restrictions and tariff taxation on wheat, on flour and on the instruments of agricultural production, the speech of the Liberal leader, together with the speeches of the two concluding Liberal speakers of the debate, Dr. Michael Clark and Mr. Geo. H. Boivin, laid down the general principles of Liberal fiscal policy.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in opening, said the duty on agricultural implements was lowered so little that it was simply adding insult to injury. The Government certainly wasn't offering the farming class much encouragement. It had refused to give the farmer free implements and free wheat. The two main causes of the desertion of farming as an occupation were, in the opinion of the leader of the Opposition: (1) The high cost of production, and (2) the insufficiency of markets. The cure said Sir Wilfrid was to put agricultural implements on the free list. The argument advanced by the Government was that the western farmer must pioneer the same as did our forefathers in Ontario.

"If we cannot aid the dead," said Sir Wilfrid, "let us at least help the living."

Putting wheat and implements on the free list no more meant free trade than did the Conservatives declare themselves for free trade when they put lumber on the free list in 1894.

"The policy of my party," declared Sir Wilfrid, amid applause, "is not a policy of protection, but one which has as its principle a customs tax for revenue purposes only."

In support of the Liberal free wheat policy Sir Wilfrid pointed out that although Canada produced over 226,000,000 bushels of wheat, she only used 50,000,000 herself and exported another 50,000,000 to Britain, thus leaving on her hands 100,000,000 bushels. Did not the country immediately to the south of us offer the best possible market for the over-production? We could also sell our flour there, he contended, as it was his belief that in many of the states, particularly in the east, Canadian millers could successfully compete with American producers.

In replying, Hon. George E. Foster ridiculed Sir Wilfrid's statement that agriculture was on the decline. There was not a farmer who would agree with that statement. Both Provincial Governments and the Federal Government were aiding the farmer in every way possible. The free food policy of the Opposition certainly didn't encourage the "back to the land" movement. Evidently the ex-Premier's advisers had reconsidered this fact, because Sir Wilfrid had right-about-faced on that issue, and, to the surprise of the House, did not embody it in his amendment.

"Now the hon. gentleman advises us," said Mr. Foster, "that if we can't get free coal he will put us free bran for our breakfast table."

Continuing, Mr. Foster declared that Sir Wilfrid was prone to change his views on the tariff. From 1876 to 1896 he had opposed the national policy, but upon assuming the reins of office he had immediately formulated a protective tariff. "In the present issue," said Mr. Foster, "my hon. friend is not searching for a policy for Canada; he is looking in vain for a political policy which will put him back in power again, and unfortunately for him, he can't find such a policy." (Laughter.)

Not only this but Sir Wilfrid had framed a policy which made its appeal to a particular class and only a section of that class. While the granting of the demand for free wheat would undoubtedly be injurious to the millers and other considerable industries it would also intensify the present trouble in the west by encouraging the farmers there to specialize in wheat. The crying need of the west was for mixed farming, and refusal of the extension of the wheat market at the present time would certainly have the tendency of bringing about a greater variety of crops in the west.

Canada's problem did not lie in the finding of new markets. The high cost of living demonstrated that the need of the country was to encourage selling on the Canadian market.

Dr. Clarke (Red Deer) expressed himself optimistically as to the future of the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific, but intimated that he had no faith in the Hudson Bay Railway project.

H. H. Stevens (Con., Vancouver) and G. H. Boivin (Lib., W. Shefford) also spoke.

The Laurier amendments was defeated on the following vote. Yeas, 48; nays, 88; Government majority, 43.

OBJECTS TO BILL

Mr. Rowell Denounces Redistribution as a Gerrymander

OBSTRUCTION IS PROMISED

TORONTO, April 24.—In the final draft of the redistribution bill to be submitted to the House only two new changes have been made. Strathroy will remain in North Essex and will not be shifted to West Essex as first proposed, and the Town of Port Dalhousie will go into East Lincoln instead of into West Lincoln.

At the last meeting of the committee yesterday Mr. Rowell and his colleagues objected to the new plans of the Bruce ridings. They said that the Liberals were being hived and that no necessity for any change existed. The proposed changes, they said, figured on Conservative majorities. "Simply penalizing the county because at the last election it committed the crime of returning three Liberals," said Mr. Rowell.

In reply, Hon. Mr. Lucas said that the same could be said of the treatment to Conservatives in Kent and Lambton.

Mr. Rowell, in opposing the "A" and "B" seating system in Toronto, read extracts from papers, and said that the Liberals were not getting a chance. Each member should have a seat of his own.

He pointed to the Grege as a further example of where the Government was unfairly strengthening its position. In the Victorias the Liberal candidates also were having their chances imperilled.

With all of these objections the Opposition submitted resolutions of amendment, which were voted down by the committee. Mr. Rowell said he would obstruct the passage of the bill in the House.

Hon. Adam Beck in the Legislature last evening expanded further on the proposals regarding the Hydro-radial systems.

Mr. Beck began his remarks by stating that the Liberals, although they much desired to claim credit in furthering the cause of publicly-owned power, had stood aside when they were needed most. The demand for radials had followed the remarkable success of the power system. In the new arrangement the promoter and his kind would be avoided, and the commission bond guarantees would finance the municipalities to the last dollar invested. The latter would pass bylaws asking the commission to submit estimates as to construction, revenue and other matters and the people would vote before anything was done.

Messrs. Rowell and Proudfoot expressed cordial support of the bill, but said the Opposition was entitled to considerable credit for it. They could see that Sir. Beck had converted some backward colleagues before he was allowed to bring in his bill.

The second reading of the radial bill then passed.

Hon. Mr. Hanna brought in the Ottawa water bill for first reading. He explained the two systems to be tried and that immediate action had been requested.

Interim Privileges Are Given to "The Canadian Menace."

TORONTO, April 24.—The Canadian Menace, published at Aurora, Ont., has been granted interim mailing privileges by the Postmaster-General at Ottawa. Since then, Mr. Pelletier stated, in the House of Commons, that this Protestant publication had been refused mailing privileges, the Postoffice Department has received many indignant letters, petitions from all sorts of Protestant associations. Members of Parliament have been actively engaged during the past few weeks in the interests of The Menace, and its being refused privileges, enjoyed by others, has proved a lively topic for debate in the corridors at Ottawa. Roman Catholic opposition to the paper has also been strong.

"The Postoffice Department had no legal grounds for refusing us mailing privileges. Its opposition was unreasonable and unwarranted from the first," said the editor, Mr. H. M. Wedsen. "Our paper will maintain a high standard of journalism, and will breathe a vigorous Protestantism. We are a purely Canadian concern, in no way connected with the paper bearing the same name across the line."

Passing of an Old Line.

OTTAWA, April 24. — The Commons Railway Committee yesterday passed the bill to amalgamate the old Canada Atlantic with the Grand Trunk. The Canada Atlantic Railway was constructed as a lumbering road by J. R. Booth, Ottawa, lumber king, many years ago, and purchased later by the Grand Trunk.

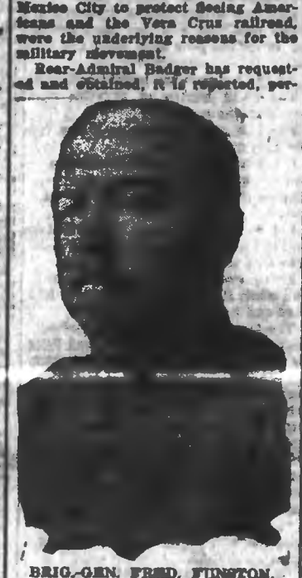
U. S. Land Forces Will Assist Navy at Vera Cruz

ARMS EMBARGO RESUMED

WASHINGTON, April 24.—United States troops moved last night to reinforce the American navy at Vera Cruz; the embargo on arms into Mexico was formally restored, and troops were ordered to the Mexican border primarily to relieve uneasiness among border residents, but also as a precaution against hostile military operations along the international lines. Secretary Garrison announced that a brigade of infantry and some artillery under Brig.-Gen. Frederick Funston, who made a reputation in the war in the Philippines, had been ordered to embark on the four army transports at Galveston for Vera Cruz to support the expeditionary forces of marines and blue-jackets there. The chance that Gen. Rosa, the Federal general, might make a return attack on Vera Cruz with reinforcements, and the possible necessity of a forward movement toward Mexico City to protect fleeing Americans and the Vera Cruz railroad, were the underlying reasons for the military movement.

Rear-Admiral Badger has requested and obtained, it is reported, permission to capture all Mexican gunboats and vessels carrying troops or ammunition for the aid of the Mexicans around Vera Cruz.



BRIG.-GEN. FRED. FUNSTON.

The restoration of the embargo on arms was officially announced after the pronouncement of Gen. Carranza, the Constitutionalist chief, that he regarded the seizure of Vera Cruz as a violation of Mexican sovereignty, had been considered by the Administration. While Mexican Constitutionalists here protested that Carranza's real attitude was friendly, the American Government decided to take no chances, and abruptly stopped the shipment of all arms into Mexico.

President Wilson early in the day had issued a statement warning Gen. Carranza, the Constitutionalist chief, that the United States was dealing now and would continue to deal with those whom Huerta commands, and "those who come to his support." Both Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American Charge d'Affaires, and Senor Algara, the Charge d'Affaires of the Mexican Embassy here, have been given their passports, thus severing diplomatic relations between the Government and Mexico. This is not regarded by the Washington Government as promoting war, but a declaration of war by Huerta would not be unexpected.

During the day a special reserve fleet, ranging from Dreadnoughts to tiny gunboats, was ordered to the Atlantic coast of Mexico. No fighting of any consequence was reported from Vera Cruz. The American land forces pushed their way three miles inland to some important treasworks to make their position secure. Rear Admiral Fletcher and American Consul Canada were occupied most of the day in Vera Cruz handling hundreds of American refugees. British and German vessels took off more than 1,200 refugees at Tampico, and a general exodus of Americans from Mexican cities was reported.

"FELLOW-WORKERS FROM MARS."

U. S. Officials Are Ridiculed by London Newspapers.

LONDON, April 24. — The London morning papers comment in an ironical vein on the dealings of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan with Mexico.

The Standard compares them to philosophers from Mars.

The Post says:

"They ought carefully to have considered what sort and size of war they wanted before they allowed shots to be fired. President Wilson is now at war with both halves of the Mexican people. How by that war he can give the Mexicans the self-government that seems to him desirable we cannot imagine."

The Daily News says:

"If the Washington Government was really surprised at Carranza's ultimatum, its surprise is not very creditable to its [illegible]

VILLA BREAKS AWAY.

Rebel Leader Says He Will Not Go To War With U. S.

EL PASO, Texas, April 24. — Gen. Francisco Villa, head of the rebel military forces, informed George C. Carothers, special agent of the State Department, that he will decline to be dragged into a war with the United States by anybody.

"Why," he smiled, "all Europe would laugh at us if we went to war with you. They would say that little drummer, Huerta, has drawn them into a tangle at last".

Villa said he was not consulted in the drafting of the Carranza note transmitted to Secretary Bryan Wednesday night, and which was regarded as somewhat hostile in tone.

Carothers took supper with Villa and canvassed the situation thoroughly.

"Honest," said the rebel general, "I hope the Americans battle up Vera Cruz so tight they can't ever get water into it. Your admiral is doing something it would have taken us a long time to accomplish, if we could have accomplished it at all."

Has Broken With Carranza?

JUAREZ, April 24.—Gen. Pancho Villa's presence here, his statements, which have been issued without qualification and with absolute frankness, and his contradiction of Gen. Carranza's position, have caused the well-founded report to originate here that he and Carranza have at last broken over matters of policy, and Villa has taken the destiny of his revolution in his own hands and has come to the border to learn the facts, to talk with his American friends, and to let the American people know just how he feels without the unshrouding fog of diplomatic words.

He was walking along the tracks when he was struck by a train.

BUYING OFF A REBEL

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

John Noyes, farmer, had lived to be forty-five years old without finding much to kick at. He had a good wife, good health, and he made a profit every year.

Sometimes when election came around he drove to the polls and voted, and sometimes he didn't. He had no interest in politics. He belonged to a certain party because his father and grandfather had. If his party won out all right; if it lost all right. It was nothing to the farmer's gain either way.

Take it all in all, John Noyes was as content as any man in America, and when he happened to think of it he said to his wife:

"I guess it's a purty good country to live in."

And they went right along believing that and wondering why other folks kicked until one fatal night when a tin peddler was taken in as a guest. The peddler was a man of gab outside of the gab he had to use in his business. He was also a politician, or thought he was. He likewise boasted that he was a Socialist of the deepest dye, and he carried with him and handed out to whoever would take them a stock of pamphlets entitled:

"Are You a Slave?" "Is Freedom a Myth?" "Did Our Grandsires Die In Vain?" "Will You Tamely Submit to the Yoke?"

That evening the peddler told John Noyes and his wife some things to make them gasp, and he had the documents to back up what he said.

This was a government composed of a few rich men, and they were sworn not to let the poor man get a fair living.

All the judges were bought and sold.

The great burden of taxation was borne by the poor.

The rich were entirely to blame for the high cost of living.

Let a rich man steal $100,000 and the judge let him off with a mild reprimand and divided the plunder with him.

Let a poor man steal a frostbitten potato for his starving children and he was sent to prison for thirty years.

There was much more of the stuff, and when the farmer and his wife had read and heard they were aghast.

The farmer had been placid and content for long years. He had had little to worry him, and no one could remember when he had been seen to lose his temper. Such a man goes all to pieces when the change comes. He slept very little that night, and next morning he did not go to work. He sat down to read those pamphlets through and through. He got worked up as he read. He exclaimed; he swore; he felt bloodthirsty; he pounded with his fist.

"I wouldn't get all het up over it," said the wife as he finally got up and stamped around.

"But them durned rich men, Martha!"

"I know, but mebbe they can't help it."

"And them blamed tyrants!"

"They haven't tried to boss us any."

"And them judges!"

"But we don't have any lawsuits."

"I tell you, Martha, the people are being driven to desperation, and the cry for blood will soon be heard all over the land!"

"Well, we'll stay home and mind our business."

Once started on the wrongs of the people, John Noyes was a fanatic. He could talk of nothing else. He began planning how to right those wrongs. He finally sent a communication to the county paper reciting the wrongs of the people and offering himself as a leader in the movement to redress them. He defied the powers of the United States and went so far as to dare the government to arrest him. The spark needed to fire the country would be struck when a minion of the tyrant at Washington laid hands on him.

After his duty John Noyes loaded his shotgun and retired to a straw stack to wait for recruits and the army of the United States. Neither the recruits nor the army came.

"Better give it up, John, and go back to the cornfield," advised his wife.

"But I'm here to help redress the wrongs."

"But it looks as if the people didn't want them redressed, and that corn needs hoeing mighty bad."

The farmer held out for another day and might have made it a day and a half had not Deacon Travis, who lived a mile away, come over to say:

"Hey, John, I don't want this country all mussed up just now."

"But the tyrants must be wiped out," was the reply.

"I know, but don't wipe 'em just now. Put it off another year."

"I don't see how I can."

"John, you have a bull calf you wanted to trade me for a hog. The hog is worth two of the calf, but if you are a mind to give this thing up we'll call it an even trade."

"I might do it," was the doubtful reply.

"Of course you will," said the wife. "I hate to, deacon, but seeing it's you, and seeing the people have not rallied to throw off their chains, and since the United States dasn't attack me, and since that durned tin peddler"—

And the trade was made and the revolution put down.

China's Peerless Iron Mine.

China's famous iron mine, the Tayeh, the foremost in the far east, is especially notable for the ease with which it is worked. It stands peerless in the world in this respect, excavation requiring no machine power. The work is done by hand by the Chinese coolies. The mine is reputed to be inexhaustible in its ore. In the days of the "three kingdoms" the locality formed a theater of bloody fighting, and the vicinity abounds in relics of that memorable period in Chinese history. It is about 3,630 Chinese miles from Peking overland and about 4,980 Chinese miles by water. Tayehhsien is traversed by ranges of hills and mountains, the valleys of which abound in innumerable lakes of all sizes, with water course facilities. Consequently the locality is rich in scenery of great beauty, and the Chinese poets from olden times have never tired of singing of the "eight views" of Tayeh. In the neighborhood of the Tayeh iron mine are found the ruins of ancient iron foundries, probably 1,000 years old. Millions of tons of slag lie in heaps.

Settled the Question.

In Regensburg, in the middle ages, the headsman died and three applicants presented themselves for the post. A test of their skill would settle the matter. Accordingly three criminals were brought forth for slaughter.

The first headsman made with his sword a tiny nick in the first criminal's neck. "I'll lop him off just there," he said, and, swinging his sword round with a great swishing sound, lo! he did as he had said he would.

The second headsman tied a string round his criminal's neck. "I'll cut off his head and bisect the string," he said, and he did as he had promised.

Then the first headsmen now began to study and ponder the neck of the third criminal, asking what proof of skill the third headsman should undertake, when the latter with one vast and splendid sword sweep cut off all three heads, thus finishing the criminal and his rivals together and winning the headsmanship of Regensburg amid the applause of all.

Noncommittal.

A certain chap named James was never known to take a decided stand on any question. With a view to trapping him into committing himself two friends went into James' office one day and started to talk about a buffalo eating grapes.

"Some people may think that a buffalo doesn't eat grapes," remarked one of the friends, "but when I was in the west a few years ago I saw one of them climb twenty feet into a tree to pluck off a bunch of the luscious fruit."

"A buffalo climb a tree!" incredulously exclaimed the other. "Who ever heard of such a thing? Say, Jim," he continued, turning to the noncommittal one, "what do you think of a preposterous statement like this?"

"Why, I hardly know," was the calm rejoinder of James, "but there's no telling what a buffalo might do when he wants grapes."—Exchange.

He Was a Bit Fussy.

The following letter was recently addressed to the general manager of an English railway:

"Please send me one tourist ticket for Penzance return (six months) for train leaving Paddington next Tuesday at 10:30 a. m. (arriving Penzance 5:05 p. m.). Please reserve corner seat facing engine as near center of train as possible—lavatory carriage—(no children), quiet company. Also luncheon (chicken) basket with glass hot milk and water (mixed) at 12 o'clock. Also tea basket China weak tea at 3 o'clock. Also 1 shilling for guard to see that the driver does not race or rush the train, especially around curves and at inclines, and watch the signals well and machinery well oiled and not overheated."—London Express.

Not Practising It.

"Here is a letter from John. He says he is studying political economy."

"Isn't that fine?"

"I don't know. It doesn't seem to be doing any good. At the bottom of his letter he says he's out of funds and wants $25 more."—Detroit Free Press.

How the Czar Travels.

The czar of Russia has one of the most luxurious railway trains in the world. It is a veritable palace on wheels, replete with every comfort and luxury. But owing to the absence of railways it cannot be used in certain parts of the empire, and the czar has lately ordered some motorcars of exceptional dimensions for use in these districts. One car is for his personal use and the second for his suit, while the third is completely equipped as a kitchen, with an alcohol stove, hot water reservoir, ice storage accommodation, a silver service for a dozen people, a folding table and twelve chairs. The interior of the czar's personal car can be converted into a comfortable bedroom.

The Illiterate Vote.

In the United States 5,516,163 persons over ten years old do not know how to read or write; 2,273,893 of these are men of voting age, and 617,733 are native born whites. In many states the illiterate vote holds the balance of power in any closely contested election. The total illiterate vote in the country is equal to the entire vote of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Delaware.—New York Post.

Fighting the Gypsy Moth.

The calosoma beetle, an imported natural enemy of the gypsy moth, is found to be multiplying very fast in the moth infested territory of Massachusetts and seems likely to do much toward keeping this pest in check. This is only one of a dozen or more species of insects that are being used in the moth campaign, so that the outlook is decidedly encouraging for its suppression.

PARALYZED LIMBS

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hounsburger, 18 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work, and now feel better than I did for 20 years."

A tourist found himself in a German village far out of the beaten track of his kind. There was, however, a linden tree in the village square. The tree was plastered over with advertisements like this: "Get Your House Furnishings at Ober's," "Engagement Rings — a Marvelous Selection — at Liebling's, the Watchmaker and Jeweler," "Kitchen Utensils at Muller's," "Just the Place For Your Wedding Breakfast—the Little Dining Room In the Post Hotel," and so forth. The stranger read the advertisements attentively.

"And why," asked he, turning to a villager who stood by, "why is this linden used as a billboard?"

"Simplest thing in the world," replied the villager. "All the courting couples come here and cut their names in the bark of this tree. There right before them are the addresses of the very people they'll need to set 'em up in housekeeping once they decide to get married."—New York Post.

THE COCOANUT PALM.

Almost the Life of the People in Many Tropical Countries.

The cocoanut palm is a native of the torrid zone and thrives best on the seacoast of the tropics. But in the United States it is not generally known that the trees of the palm (Cocos nucifera) are as numerous as the days of the year.

Found nearly everywhere within the tropics, almost the sole dependence for food of the palmiverous inhabitants of many countries this king of low tropical countries furnishes man with food, drink, medicines, domestic utensils, materials for boat and house building, oil for cooking, lighting, lubricating and innumerable other purposes, and is of all the palmaceae the one that yields the greatest variety of products.

It has been truly said by Tennant, the historian, that "of the cocoanut palm a ship can be built and laden too."

The cocoanut palm comes into bearing between the fifth and sixth year of its life, earlier if near the ocean front, later if inland any great distance, and will bear for 80 to 100 years thereafter. It is still in its full vigor at twenty-five to forty-five years of age and even up to seventy years may be found in fairly good bearing.

So highly valued in the cocoanut is the priest that Tennant mentions a claim in court in the island of Ceylon for the two thousand five hundred and twentieth part of a "plantation" containing only ten cocoanut palms.—"Below the Rio Grande."

An Arab View of New York.

An Arab who visited New York city is said to have sent this letter home: "People in America travel like rats under the ground [meaning the subway], and like squirrels in the air [meaning the elevated railways], and the buildings are so high that people have to be put in square boxes and pulled to the top by heavy ropes [meaning the elevator]. In the day the sun furnishes the light the same as in Morocco. At night the light is as strong as the day, but people here do not seem to have much use for sleep, as the streets are just as crowded at night as in the day."—Outlook.

DINING WITH FRIENDS.

An Incident of Boarding House Life in a Great City.

Not until boarding houses cease to exist will all their romances be written. Shabby romances most of them are, like that of the young woman who got so tired of being called "poor thing" because she received no invitations and had to eat all her meals at the boarding house table that she took to eating alone once in awhile at a cheap restaurant and then brazenly lying about the friends who had invited her to dinner.

There was a young man in that house who never went anywhere either. The first night the girl stayed out Mrs's desolation nearly overpowered him.

"Even that poor little white throat soul has made friends who want her," he said. "Nobody wants me. I'm no good on earth."

Then on rare occasions his place at the table was vacant.

"New friends?" asked the landlady.

"Yes," the young man lied.

One night the man and the girl met at a twenty-five cent restaurant. They blushed, they fenced, they finally confessed.

"We're a pair of fraods," said the girl. "It is awful to think that tonight when we go home we will have to swear that we have been dining with friends."

"Well," said the young man softly, "ain't we?"—New York Times.

The Mullahs of India.

A mullah, or, as it is more properly written, molish, is a title given in India and throughout the east generally to a religious leader of any description. Thus the sultan of Turkey is a molish, because he is the supreme head of the moslem world. And there are hundreds of others. To most of the more conspicuous among them is prefixed the adjective "mad." This, however, must not be taken to mean that they are insane, the word being used rather in its oriental significance of "inspired." The person of the molish is sacred. Not even the mighty Mahbubjah himself would care to lay a sacrilegious finger on one of these saintly personages. If he were to venture, such an unheard of thing vengeance would surely overtake him. For it is the cardinal principle of the Ulima—as the mollahs are collectively termed—that an injury purposely caused to one of their number can only be atoned for by the death of the individual inflicting it.

Trap of the Fourmilion.

"In the Sahara," said an explorer, "there is a little insect that throws sand and its volleys slay. They call it the fourmilion. The fourmilion digs itself a funnel shaped hole of the circumference of a silver dollar. It lies hidden and watchful in the bottom of this hole, and when a spider or ant or beetle comes cautiously prospecting down the steep and slippery sides the inhospitable fourmilion launches upon its guest volley after volley of sand—a hail of stinging sand so abundant, so suffocating, so blinding that the visitor loses its head. He rolls unconscious for the nonce to the bottom of the hole, and the fourmilion calmly dismembers him before he has time to come to himself again and puts him in the larder for the next meal."

Repaid.

An Irishman knocked at a door one day and asked the lady of the house, who was very ugly, if she could help him, as he was hard up and on the road.

"Indeed I'll not," she replied. "And if you don't clear off out of this I'll call my husband, who is a policeman, and he'll come and take you."

"I quite believe ye, missis," retorted Pat. "He'd take anything when he took you."—Argonaut.

Seeking Harmony.

"This song is not suited to my voice," said the prima donna.

"Well," said the discouraged manager, "I suppose I'll have to get you another song. There's no use of trying to have your voice rewritten."—Washington Star.

Patience Rewarded.

A man had been convicted for stealing and was brought before Judge Perkins. The judge was noted for his kind heart and his light sentences.

"Have you ever been sentenced to imprisonment before?" asked the judge not unkindly.

"No, never!" exclaimed the man, suddenly and dramatically bursting into tears. "Never!"

"Well, well, don't cry, my man," said the judge. "It needn't trouble you. You're going to be."—Lippincott's.

Times Have Changed.

"It used to be that when we met a man who could wash and mend his own clothes and who could wash dishes and cook we took him to be a sailor."

"And now?"

"Now we don't know whether he is a sailor or the husband of a suffragette."—Chicago News.

Sing Sing.

"How is this for gallantry? Send mand never addresses me without beginning 'Fair sales' or something like that."

"Force of habit, my dear. He acquired it when he used to be a streetcar conductor."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Creative Impulse.

The creative impulse does not itself know the next step it will take or the next form that will arise any more than the creative artist determines beforehand all the thoughts and forms his inventive genius will bring forth. He has the impulse or the inspiration to do a certain thing, to let himself go in a certain direction, but just the precise form his creation will take is as unknown to him as to you and me. Some stubbornness or obduracy in his material, or some accident of time or place, may make it quite different from what he had hoped or vaguely planned. He does not know what thought or incident or character he is looking for till he has found it, till he has risen above his mental horizon. So far as he is conscious, so far as he is spontaneous, just so far is the world with which he deals plastic and fluid and indeterminate and ready to take any form his instinct of expression—words, colors, tones—affords him. He may surprise himself, excel himself; he has surrendered himself to a power beyond the control of his will or knowledge.—John Burroughs in the Atlantic.

Devilled Mushrooms

Butter the inside of little paper cases and put a thin slice of lemon in the bottom of each. Nearly fill them with minced mushrooms, seasoned with lemon juice, pepper, paprika and salt. Spread a thin layer of devilled chicken mixed with the yolk of egg over the top of each case and bake for fifteen minutes. Put a teaspoonful of thick mayonnaise on the top of each and serve at once.

Terrible Dizzy Spells Would Come Over Me

The Nerves Were on Edge--Noises Excited and Irritated System Restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Overworking and under-eating—these words describe the cause of many a woman's physical breakdown. The body is a delicately-constructed machine, calculated to perform only a certain number of hours without rest. If overworked there is no time allowed for the reconstruction of the wasted cells, and breakdown is inevitable.

Rest is absolutely necessary to every woman who allows herself to become run down from overwork. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will help wonderfully in bringing back health and strength of mind and body. Women are particularly enthusiastic in praise of this great food cure because no treatment was ever discovered that will so thoroughly restore vigour, energy and vitality to the tired, overworked and run-down nervous system.

Mrs. T. P. Callen, Fairview Farm, Shepard, Alta., writes: "My nervous system was so run down and exhausted that terrible dizzy spells would come over me, and I would have most peculiar feelings. Everything appeared as if it was falling on me, and caused me to jump after taking a few steps. While in this frightfully nervous condition I heard of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and began using it. This treatment built up my nervous system and completely cured me, and for this reason I am always glad to recommend it for the sake of those who suffer as I did."

No ailments cause greater suffering than diseases of the nerves, for they affect mind as well as body. You can get the nerves right by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

What Is the Proper Form of Physical Exercise for Our Girls?

Newcomb, a Game Which Was Originated in the South, Is Favored by Many Athletic Authorities

One of the great questions for the parents, guardians and teachers of the growing girl to solve is that of the proper exercise which she shall take for the best development of her body.

Authorities differ as to the good effects of certain forms of athletics which are popular enough with the girls themselves. For this reason those who are interested in training girls so that they will make strong and sound women are always looking around for some new method of answering the demand for forms of exercise in which girls can achieve physical development without taking the risks which are thought to exist for girls in many kinds of athletics which are practised with benefit by their sturdier brothers.

A game which has recently sprung into favor in many parts of the country, although it has been known for some years in the South, where it originated, is Newcomb, which takes its name from the fact that it was played originally at Newcomb College, of Tulane University, of Louisiana.

Miss Clara G. Baer, the director of physical education at Newcomb College, originated Newcomb with the object of placing before students a game that could be easily arranged, could include any reasonable number of students, could be played in any designated time and in any available place. The game met with approval immediately after the Newcomb students had begun to play it, and gradually it has been taken up by schools throughout the country, so that it is now played from New England to New Orleans and from the Eastern seaboard to far Oklahoma. Boys as well as girls play the game, which is suitable for players in their early teens and for those grown to adulthood.

The players number ten each on the sides, and these may be anywhere from ten to twenty on a side.

According to Miss Baer's description of the game, it calls for an equal number of players on the sides.

The paraphernalia for the game is very simple, consisting only of two upright posts of galvanized iron with a fifty foot rope stretched between, and a large medicine ball. A court, which may be thirty-two feet, is marked out on each side of the rope, and separating these courts there is neutral ground which is six feet on either side of the rope.

The game has some of the elements of football, but the ball is thrown and batted with the hands instead of being kicked. The object of the game is to send the ball into the enemy's court. If the ball falls on neutral ground it counts against the side of the player. To avoid being scored against the players must watch the coming ball, catch it or bat it back.

Quick action is necessary in the game, for players are penalized for delays. Miss Mary Ida Mann, instructor at the University of Chicago, says of Newcomb:—

"It meets the first test—it is interesting. Children so pronounce it while adolescent, and adults bear the same testimony."

Not only the physical culture trainers of schools and colleges, but beauty culturists, as well are interested in any game or exercise which is possible for the average girl or woman. Exercise is as important to the development of beauty as the great trinity of good food, fresh air and plenty of sleep, according to these experts. The question always is, What is the entirely satisfactory exercise for a girl, which will develop her in the best way without being so violent that it is also dangerous? There are experts who declare against track and field athletics and there are many others who defend these forms of exercise.

All are agreed, however, that the ideal exercises for the normal development of young women in a manner which is free from all possible elements of danger is a moderate but continuous devotion to outdoor sports which are more in the realm of games than in that of strict athletics, coupled with daily exercises which may be taken at home and which are extremely mild but unremitting in their correction of the faults of the figure and their development of general muscular strength and efficiency.

"If I could make my patients take exercise every day, just a few minutes exercise regularly," said an eminent physician recently, "I would be able to dismiss about two-thirds of them as cured and a much larger percentage as materially improved after six months or a year of this treatment without any medicine at all. But the trouble is that most persons will take daily exercise only when they have some pronounced difficulty which sends them to a physician. Then as soon as they are a little improved they drop the exercise."

It is the constant dropping that wears away a stone in the matter of training the human figure as elsewhere, and it is the girl who never foregoes her daily exercise, mild as it may be, rather than the girl who does a great deal of exercising one day and none at all the next, who is likely to develop into the woman of lithe and symmetrical figure whose carriage, muscular development and general poise are all that the most ambitious could desire.

Many observant persons declare that the more strenuous forms of athletics develop every muscle in a way that is not at all advantageous from the point of view of beauty.

"A girl shouldn't have bunches of muscle, like a man athlete," declared a beauty specialist whose system is based on natural methods. "She should possess an all around symmetry, generally good development and sound health. It isn't necessary for her to be able to defeat her sisters in a wrestling match."

One of the forms of exercise which are most highly recommended by beauty experts and health culturists as well is fencing. According to those who have observed the woman fencers in relation to their physical development there is no exercise in the world which is better for women both from the point of view of beauty and that of general health.

The fencer gains alertness, litheness, adroitness, grace, muscular control and poise. Her muscles are gradually developed, but not in unsightly bunches. The most accomplished athlete may well envy the expertness of the woman fencer, but the person who admires only the daintiest and most graceful examples of feminine beauty will not be offended by her appearance, as there is nothing of the Amazon about her.

Two summers ago tennis returned to favor as the most attractive outdoor sport for women as well as men. Playing tennis, like playing the piano, means, first, technique and then abandonment to the moment's joy. Lightness, quickness, alertness and grace are developed by regular tennis playing. Here again it is a question of regular every day play and a moderate amount of it rather than a great deal of play one day and none the next if the tennis playing is to be of the greatest benefit.

Self-consciousness disappears on the tennis court after a girl has become accustomed to play regularly. It is very interesting to observe the change which takes place in a girl's bearing on the court after she has played every day for a few weeks.

At first she is likely to be a little too ladylike in her manner and way of standing on the court. Then she may become so interested in the game that she goes after results regardless of grace, and while she may be developing strength and adroitness her gestures are far from beautiful. This, however, is a much better way of proceeding than for her to remain self-conscious and restrained. The ideal method is that in which grace and skill develop side by side. While it is perhaps not so very reprehensible when a man places skill so far ahead of style in golf that the latter is scarcely present at all in his performance, it always remains a fly in the ointment when a girl's performance is awkward and unbeautiful, even if she plays well from the competitive standpoint.

The use of the punching bag every morning for ten minutes is a bright and enjoyable method of obtaining exercise which is possible for almost any girl.

Not every house, of course, has ceiling or walls sufficiently strong to support a punching bag, but the gymnasium apparatus which can be used to support the bag is perfectly satisfactory and has the great advantage of calling forth fewer reproaches from landlords or fellow tenants.

The punching bag will develop the arm, back and shoulder muscles and have an effect also on the development of the chest, so that its daily use will be pretty effective in the way of all around athletics, except as to the muscles of the lower part of the body, which can be kept pretty well hardened by sufficient daily walking and a few bending exercises which every girl should take.

The simplest form of exercise without any apparatus whatever does just as well for the development of the figure as elaborate movements accompanied by the use of expensive apparatus. But as a matter of fact the use of apparatus sometimes helps to keep a person interested in taking daily exercise.

The great thing necessary to proper development is to select the sets of exercises that are suitable to the individual and then to keep them up day after day.

There is a bending exercise which is very useful to some girls and which is one of the most widely known which has been found not at all good for others. This is the simple bending exercise whereby the fingers is extended forward until the tips of the fingers touch the floor. After practice it is possible to place the palms of the hand on the floor.

AUCTION BRIDGE---By Prospero

TO-DAY two factors mainly enter into the bidding, and the highest combination-value decides the issue.

One is contained in the rule:—Declare your choice up to the number of tricks your hand seems safe to take. Count and weigh your cards; calculate the chances; freely express your estimate, in conjunction (if feasible), with partner's. From the lowest, spades, the bidding advances on a rising scale, according to rank—Ace, diamond, (nullo), heart, point, no trump. Two clubs have the preference over one no trump. Five beats five odd to five royals, to be in turn collated by five no trumps. All in uniformity agreement with rank of trump bid for.

The second factor introduces the trick value of the trumps. Hence the number of tricks multiplied by their count given this product that finally is to carry the play.

Besides, there is in evidence the fundamental principle that a contract more difficult outweighs one less difficult, as three clubs (18) preponderate over three royals (18), five hearts (40) over four no trumps (40).

The twofold figuring, tricks with count, tends to manifest anomalies. While a bid of three clubs or nullo over two royals, both counting 18; four clubs, obviously harder, valued at 24, have to give way to three royals, 27. Of six diamonds, 42, cede to five royals, 45. That is, the easier contract obtains the preference. A singularly grave departure from the primary principle; illogical in itself, frequently confusing. Who has not made a bid of three clubs (18) after opponent's two no trumps (20) and thus been forced to play at [illegible] to his discomfiture? Or, five diamonds (35) on four royals (30), with fatal consequences? Who does not remember hearing the silvery "four diamonds (28) at one time or another to have followed [illegible] no trumps, when three no trumps (30) would have covered at much less risk? Again, on occasion, you had to jump to six clubs to make the play from four royals?

With tricks and trumps computed, as they are to-day, too often occur, or become necessary, such erratic excursions, which I am tempted to call retrograde, over-count bids.

Is there an escape—a way to permit the sway of "the rule of reason?"

For such purpose, to avoid these defections, it would be necessary to adopt an entirely new scale of values, a reformed count. It would have to begin with 24 for clubs (the spade 2 signifies nothing but a mouthful to start with), 25 for diamonds; (nullos and) hearts at 26, royals 27, no trumps 28. Then there would be no possibility of conflict with rules—all trick considerations would stand in normal, progressive order. Were this a debatable question, who has a super-compound multiplication table in his head? Is there anybody to advocate this count? Who is ready to accept it? [illegible] many readers and their votes. The writer, for one, although its [illegible] seems incontrovertible. [illegible] escaping those controversial bids, [illegible] count high because of facility; moreover, not conforming to the principle that the heavier count predominate. The whole course of bids can be radically simplified by dropping the consideration of the numerical count, by bidding according to rank only. Retain the first factor, omit the second. Declare the trump in the accepted order or succession. Lowest grade belongs to spades; follow clubs, diamonds (nullos) hearts, royals, no trumps. One no trump is succeeded by two clubs, and so on—no confusion, no backward steps, no jumps forward.

What is the opinion of players in general? Prospero will be happy to hear from many, to receive suggestions.

To-day a word about the proper way to make use and profit by the test hands. The four hands are laid open before you; bet bid them as if but one were seen at a time and you know nothing of the others. It is best to treat them in the same manner as actual games. Let them be dealt, their face turned down, and players incognizant invited to try the hands as dealt. It to be supposed the dealer and in dealer's seat.

TWO HOME WOMEN TALKED ABOUT HAIR

Two women met in our store the other day, when one of them said:

"My, how pretty your hair looks! What have you been doing to it?"

"Why, I have been using Harmony Hair Beautifier for the past two weeks," was the reply.

"Why, indeed!" replied the first woman, "that is just what I am using. Isn't it great, and don't you think my hair shows a lot of improvement?"

Harmony Hair Beautifier is becoming all the rage among both men and women who are particular in the care of their hair. It is just what it is named—a hair beautifier. It seems to polish and burnish the hair, making it glossy, soft, and more easy to put up in graceful, glossy folds that "stay put." Contains no oil, and will not change colored hair nor darken it. Simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it.

To keep your hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This liquid shampoo gives an instantaneous rich, creamy lather that immediately penetrates to every part of the hair and scalp, insuring a quick and thorough cleansing. It is rinsed off just as quickly, the entire operation taking only a few moments. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. —McDermid & Jury, E. L. Payne, Peterborough, Ont.

A Goat in a Studio.

Among other stories in the "Reminiscences of Augustus Saint Gaudens" by father and son is a confession by the son. When he was a boy in Cincinnati he had a pet goat which he had trained to play a butting game. The goat would butt, Homer would dodge, and then, to his great glee, the goat would butt the wrong thing or the air. One day at dinner time when the studio barn was deserted Homer was playing this game. Beyond the open barn door stood the wax model of the Logan horse "waiting to be cast in plaster. This time when Homer dodged the goat butted the back of the horse; but, since it did not fall or break, the relieved child thought it wasn't hurt and didn't tell. Before any one noticed that "the rear of the animal was strangely askew" the horse had been cast in plaster and the enlargement begun. This meant the loss of a whole summer's work—just one more of the accidents and errors that increased the "toughness of the sculptor's life." — Ariadne Gilbert in St. Nicholas.

Early Day Railroad Travel.

On Nov. 26, 1833, a car made the first trip over the Portage railroad. This was the most remarkable engineering undertaking of the time. The railroad was thirty-six miles long, extending across the Allegheny mountains from Hollidaysburg to Johnstown. There were ten inclined planes, five on each side of the mountains. Engines at the top of each plane pulled up four cars at a time. The ascent on the east side measured 1,398 feet. Then there was a tunnel of 870 feet and a descent of 1,172 feet on the western side. Passengers on canal boats entered the cars at Hollidaysburg and were carried over the mountains, embarking in other boats on the western side and thus continuing their journey to Pittsburgh. Later boats were built so that they could be taken apart into three or four sections and placed on a car for the trip over the mountains. The construction of the Portage railroad cost $1,500,000.—Philadelphia Record.

Sorting Bottles by Touch.

One of London's queer trades is that of empty bottle sorting at the London bottle exchange, off Blackfriars road. These bottles have been salvaged from dust bins, cellars, the holds of ships and wherever bottles go astray. Every year at least 2,000,000 bottles, after many wanderings, find their way to the bottle exchange. They are sorted and returned to their rightful owners, who pay an annual subscription as well as a few shillings a gross for returned bottles. Reared on the bottle, as it were, a sorter at the exchange must be a man of keen eye and delicate touch. All that he has to guide him in thousands of cases is the embossed name on the glass, and swiftly, unerringly and with almost uncanny deftness he picks out a bottle which has wandered from Glasgow and puts it in the case bound for the north.—New York Sun.

THREE FIRES REPORTED.

Bryson, Que., Kingsville, Ont., and Haileybury, Ont., Visited.

OTTAWA, April 24.—The business section of Bryson, Que., the county seat for Pontiac, was wiped out last night by a conflagration, which, starting in Goddard's hotel at the end of Main street, early yesterday morning, swept the entire street, destroying twenty-eight stores and dwellings and entailing a loss of $65,000.

Owing to the absence of any fire fighting apparatus the residents were unable to stop the progress of the flames, which swept the whole street, with the exception of the courthouse and a couple of other buildings.

Over thirty families have been rendered homeless, and tents and provisions are being rushed from Portage Du Fort, Campbell's Bay, Shawville to the stricken town. All telegraph and telephone wires were burned down and communication was completely cut off.

Blaze at Kingsville.

KINGSVILLE, Ont., April 24. — A serious fire which broke out in the business district of Kingsville did much damage to half a dozen business places and for a time threatened to become general. The flames were first discovered by the night watchman in the Hart Block, on the south side of Main street, and he promptly gave the alarm. Hard work by the volunteer fire department confined the flames to the one block, but the loss will, it is estimated, amount to between $20,000 and $30,000, most of which is covered by insurance.

The principal losers are: Herman Ulch, harness shop; Pearsall's photograph studio; Sherman's restaurant, and Hart estate. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A Haileybury Fire.

HAILEYBURY, Ont., April 24.—The Wright Block, in Main street, the temporary quarters of the Judicial offices of the district of Timiskaming, caught fire, causing a loss of several thousand dollars, and gutting the building. In this building were situated the offices of Sheriff Caldbick and Registrar T. J. Meagher, on the ground floor, and of Judge Hartman, Crown Attorney F. L. Smiley, Magistrate S. Atkinson, and other offices on the second storey. The basement is used as a bonded room by Hamilton & Co., liquor dealers. The Wright Block is of concrete block construction and was built after the fire of August, 1906.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally if you eat meat regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorde come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache the kidneys or your back hurts, or the urine is cloudy, offensive, full sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts fro any reliable pharmacy and take tablespoonful in a glass of water be fore breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescens lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys ele and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Scottish and Smart.

John Clark, Lord Eldon, was of a very convivial disposition. Once the author of "Law and Laughter," after a Bannatyne club dinner, "where wit and wine contended for the mastery," tumbled heavily downstairs on the way to his carriage and broke his nose. When he reappeared in public, looking somewhat odd about the face, some one asked how the accident happened. He said it was the effect of his studies. "Studies!" ejaculated the inquirer. "Yes," growled the judge; "you've heard, nae doot, about 'Coke Upon Littleton,' but I suppose you never before heard of 'Clerk Upon Stairs!'"

After he had fallen upon his knees and kissed her hand she said:

"Before I answer 'Yes' or 'No,' there are some things I would like to ask you. Do you ever drink or gamble?"

"No," he eagerly replied, "I do not know what the taste of liquor is. I have never defiled my lips with tobacco. I have never uttered a profane word in my life. I have never even played bridge where a prize was at stake."

She looked at him thoughtfully for a moment, drew a long sigh and then asked:

"Have you ever broken a woman's heart?"

"Ah, how can you ask me that?" he almost reproachfully answered. "If I had ever spoken words of love to another I would not deem myself worthy to touch the hem of your garment. I have never cared for anyone but you. I have never kissed any woman except my mother. I have never given any girl cause to utter one solemn, full sigh. Yours is the first dear, soft, little hand that I have ever held in my own. Never before to-night have I looked into any girl's eyes as I am looking into your deep, soulful eyes. Never——"

"Oh, dear," she impatiently interrupted, drawing her hand away from him, "it's after 8 o'clock, and you shouldn't be so far away from home at this time of night. Wait a minute, please, and I'll see if I can't get my brother, Tom, to go with you. Your mamma must be terribly worried."

These symptoms indicate that Nature needs help. Overwork, wrong dressing, lack of exercise, and other blunders have been too much for nature—and nature must be called upon to restore health and strength.

Two Sides of Matrimony

By F. A. MITCHEL

"Seems to me nowadays all de gals instead o' wakin', are sittin' roun' waitin' fo' to git married. I don't hab no 'casion fo' to git married. I got two strong arms fo' to rub on a washboa'd an' fo to do ironin'. What I want to get married fo'?"

"Oh, pshaw, Aunt Chloe! You'd like to get married well enough if you had somebody to marry you. How about Nat Taylor, who was courting you, that Pinkey Jones took from you?"

"Yo' nebber was mo' mistaken in yo' life 'bout dat. Nat he come to me one day, an', he say, says he, 'Chloe, yo' don't know any gal dat would like to take care ob my house, do yo'?'

"I was fryin' bacon when he said dat, an' I jest stood with a fo'k in one hand an' looked up at de ceilin', thoughtful-like."

"Why, Aunt Chloe, didn't you understand that was a proposal?"

"Proposal to me! 'Twan't no such thing. Nat knew well 'nuf I kin mak' my own libin', an' he wouldn't insult me by askin' me to come in an' mak' de bed an' cook de victles an' set roun' an' look pretty de rest ob de time. He wanted a lazy gal fo' dat."

"Well, go on with your story."

"Bimeby I think ob Pinkey Jones as de mos' wo'thless gal I knowed, consekently de mos' likely gal fo' to get married. So I tole Nat 'bout her, an' he axsted a lot ob questions. I wa'n't goin' to mix myself 'sponsible fo' her, so I just said she war a fine-lookin' gal when she war dressed up. I knowed dat would please him better'n if I said she war a good cook an' washer an' ironer, an' it did. He axsked me where she war, an' I tole him, an' he went right off an' begun de co'tin'."

"Aunt Chloe, you're very smart. You know you are. You know well enough he wanted you, but you didn't want the job yourself, and you turned him aside on purpose."

"Yah, yah!" laughed Chloe knowingly. "Reckon I didn't want de job myself. Nat war bery good man too. But what I want to git married fo', anywhy? My husban' 'ud pay fo' de marryin', but who gwine to pay fo' de divo'ce, I like to know? Do yo' a'pose I can affo'd to travel way out to some o' dem west'n towns an' lib dar a yea' or mo' fo' to git separated from some wo'thless nigger dat couldn't whitewash a stone wall?"

"Well, how did Nat come out with his suit?"

"How Nat come out? Why, he come out wid a flatiron follerin' him. It hit him aqua' on de back ob de head. Mighty lucky dat. Ef it hit him in de back it might 'a' broke it. Ef it hit him in de side it might 'a' stopped de heart a-beatin'. De safes' place fo' Nat to git hit war in de skull. You couldn't break it wid no trickin' thing like a flatiron, an' dere hain't no brains in it to joggle."

"I thought you said Nat was a good man."

"So he is; so he is good man, but I didn't say he war a smart man. Ef he'd been a smart man he wouldn't 'a' married Pinkey Jones."

"But didn't you recommend her?"

"Dat's jist what Nat said. He come to me wid his head all bandaged up, an' he say, 'Chloe, who' yo' recommend dat dibbil to me fo'?'

"'I didn't recommend her,' I said, 'I tole yo' she war a fine lookin' gal when she war dressed up.'"

"What was the trouble between Nat and Pinkey?"

"Nat tole me 'bout dat. He said he went home to supper an' dere wa'n't no supper—de butcher didn't send home de po'k chops. Nat axsked Pinkey why she didn't go get de po'k chops. Pinkey said she didn't git married fo' to carry home provisions. Nat said dat ef he worked all day cuttin' people's grass an' beatin' rugs he didn't know why his wife couldn't be able to hab de supper ready. Pinkey said she couldn't cook de supper when de supper wasn't sent home in de delibery wagon.

"Den Nat axked Pinkey of when she war a Georgia nigger de delibery wagon stopped at de do' ob her residence wid de provisions. Dat made Pinkey mad, an' she war reachin' fo' de flatiron. Nat saw blood in her eye, an' he started out to git his supper somewhar else, but de flatiron tuk him in de back ob de head an' putty nigh knocked him down. He turned to Pinkey an' tole her of she did dat ag'in he'd hab her arrested.

"Dat war de end ob de misunderstandin'. Nat he boa'd'd at a low down boa'din' house, an' Pinkey she libin' in Nat's rooms mighty comfalum."

"'Twas all your fault, Aunt Chloe Nat came to you to ask you to be his wife, but you turned him over to the most worthless woman you knew."

"Wo'thless! Yah, yah! Don't yo' believe it. Pinkey's considerin' wedder she gwine to study fo' to be a teacher or to write fo' de magazines. She hain't got no eddication, an' she cain't do teachin', so she's gwine into de literary business, I reckon."

"If you had married him he would have been all right."

"Reckon he would 'a' been all right but whar 'ud I 'a' been? I been gibin' you de man's side ob de question. If I'd 'a' married Nat I'd 'a' been gibin' you de woman's side. De woman when she gits a wo'thless husban' or don't agree with him, gits it 'bout trubble with the alamonia an' all dat. I rather fry hideous an' do washin'."

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

Are The Greatest Pill For The Cure of Backache, Lame Back, Weak Back, Or Any Other Kidney Trouble.

The fact that Doan's Kidney Pills are the original Kidney Pills has not prevented the placing of other preparations in pill form upon the market under the name Kidney Pills. It is necessary, therefore, that all wishing to secure the curative effects which have made Doan's Kidney Pills so popular everywhere, should see that the trade mark, the Maple Leaf, appears on the wrapper. Without this trade mark you are not getting the genuine Kidney Pills as originally placed before the people by Mr. James Doan, as shown by the following declaration.

DOMINION OF CANADA, PROVINCE OF ONTARIO, To Wit:
In the matter of Doan's Kidney Pills.

I, James Doan, of Kingsville, in the County of Essex, Druggist, do solemnly declare that Doan's Kidney Pills were first manufactured and sold by me on the 14th day of February, A.D., 1888.

And I make this solemn declaration conscientiously believing the same to be true, and knowing it is of the same force and effect as if made under oath and by virtue of "The Canada Evidence Act, 1893."

Declared before me at Kingsville, in the County of Essex, this 27th day of July, A.D., 1899. James Doan.

Newspapers and Gillygraphy.

A correspondent, writing on the subject of a daily paper as a geography, states: "I have carefully gone over twenty-four pages, with their 168 columns, noting the places named. The list numbers 1,447, of which England claims 622, Scotland 64, Ireland 29, Europe 262, Asia and Australasia 103, Africa 10, North America 159, South America 37. In point of space, they [illegible], of course, not only from China to Peru, but from pole to pole."—London Chronicle.

Knew Them at Once.

The vicar appointed to a living in an old English village was anxious to restore his chancel. On either side of the porch were grotesque, not to say hideous, faces that had become almost hidden. The vicar had these ancient faces worked up until their features were made distinct. Then he took a very old lady of the parish to see them and jokingly asked if she could tell him who they were. "Why, bless my heart, sir," said she, peering at the old ornaments, "it's you and your good lady!"

Expert Tattooers.

The inhabitants of the Marquesas islands are among the most expert tattooers on earth, and not even the crown of the head, the fingers and the toes are exempt from the needle. The hands are ornamented with utmost care, all the fingers having their own pattern, so the hand would look as though incased in a tight fitting glove were it not for the finger nails of enormous length which complete the hand-adornment of the wealthier natives.—London Telegraph.

The Innocent Bystander.

Mother (to little boy)—Oh, don't be tiresome and keep on asking impossible questions, Percy!

Old Gentleman (slightly hard of hearing)—Don't scold him, madam. I think, if I may say so, that it is a duty to help children when they are trying to acquire knowledge. What is it you want to know, my little man?

Boy—Why do dogs have tails?—London Opinion.

Foolhardy.

Folks marry an actor, an aviator and trains,
On biplanes with motors awhirr,
But rather than any of these are the stumps
Who marry on ten dollars per.

—Boston Transcript.

The girl who will marry on ten dollars per
And live on dry bread for her fare
May be rather rash, but she's 'head of the game,
Who marries a man on "fast air."

—Yonkers Statesman.

A Tiresome Person.

Landlord (at Tinkletown Hotel)—That feller who just swaggered past? Oh, that's Lem Tinkerly, an he's a terror to autymobilists, I tell you!

Guest — Ahal The village constable, eh?

Landlord—Worse; he's the only auty repair man within ten miles.—Cry-ward.

Mighty Pickups.

She dropped her handkerchief; he stooped
And picked it up for her.
She dropped her purse; he picked it up,
And likewise with her fur.

So gentlemanly was he that
She put him to the test.
She dropped a subtle hint, and then—
Well, you may guess the rest.

—Lawrence American.

Her Habit.

"Did you hear how the telephone operator broke off her engagement?"

"No. How did she do it?"

"Just held out her head to her fiance and coldly remarked, 'Ring off.'"—Baltimore American.

Proper Way to Walk.

In walking, your feet should point straight ahead and come down flat, heel first. Writers who advise that the ball of the foot should touch the ground first, in common with the calisthenics instructor at school who likely as not advises the same thing do not know anything about the practical side of walking. The former doubtless have in mind the ballroom, and the latter the gymnasium. On a long walk you will naturally fall into the proper way of handling your feet. Let your arms swing naturally also, and for their benefit carry a stout stick—not a stout staff, which is too long and awkward. Keep this stick moving, in one hand or the other, and it will exercise your arms better than the mere act of swinging them will. Keep the shoulders down, the chest up and the body erect. The right posture of the body is as important a factor while walking as it is in the schoolroom.—From "The Boy Scout's Hike Book."

He Explained.

There was in Broadminster, says the "Lighter Side of English Life," a resourceful parson who invented plausible answers to questions when he did not know the right ones. He had been talking to a lady about a "Breeches" Bible picked up by a brother parson for sixpence, when she asked what a "Breeches" Bible was:

"A 'Breeches' Bible?" he cried. "Oh, a 'Breeches' Bible is the one that was carried by Cromwell's troopers in their pockets. It was made specially for carrying about—small, you know, and compact. I remember reading that several of the soldiers had their lives saved owing to the bullets having lodged in the volume in their breeches pocket."

"Not really?" said the lady. "How very interesting! I do believe that I heard something like that having happened, I forget where."

A Tip to the Poets.

His (Richard Hovey's) voice was admirable, sonorous and colorful, and he used it excellently whether to read or recite. It was a novelty to editors, when they asked him to submit a poem, to have him say: "Perhaps you'd like this?" Forthwith he would recite the poem he had to offer, not faltering in a line and bringing out the thought and feeling of it all magically, as we read the first poets gave their soul to rapt listeners. In case the poem happened to be unsuitable for the purpose Hovey would smile unperturbed and proceed to recite his second choice. If the poem were accepted on his recital he would go back to his apartment to write out a copy of it and send it to the editor. — Richard Duffy in Bookman.

JAP-A-LAC—the Health-Preserver

MODERN methods of sanitation dictate the adoption of polished floors and rugs in place of the old-fashioned plain wood floors covered with dust-laden disease-breeding carpets.

Floors finished with JAP-A-LAC are healthful, beautiful and easily kept clean. Simply wiping occasionally with a damp cloth will keep them free from dust and germs.

Hard wood or soft—it's all the same to JAP-A-LAC. It stains and varnishes in one operation, producing a brilliant, elastic and durable finish which will not mar white, and is unaffected by moisture.

Bathroom woodwork, when given a coating of JAP-A-LAC, may be washed with soap and water. Easily applied by anyone—no experience required.

Made in 21 beautiful colors. Put up in Green Tins bearing the name "GLIDDEN."

WORTH REMEMBERING

Tar stains may be removed from cold water. Hot water sets them.

Rub the tops of pies with a little milk and they will brown beautifully.

Stoned olives, sliced and mixed with salmon, make a nice salad.

The onion smell may be removed from a knife by drawing it through a raw carrot two or three times.

If the nap of suede shoes looks matted and flat, rub them gently with a bit of emery paper.

Oil of cloves on a piece of absorbent cotton will usually stop a toothache.

One pint lime, one pint salt, and two and one-half gallons of water will keep eggs for winter use.

The Bar Wins

It costs money to put soap into cakes and it doesn't improve the soap. See this: One bar of N.P. SOAP at 15 cents weighs more than four 5¢ cakes of soap—more than 5 cakes of some. And ask any woman if N.P. isn't the best soap.

What clothing is to man, paint is to property. Unprotected houses and barns, wagons and machinery cannot resist exposure to sun, wind, frost and rain. Rust and decay cost more than paint and varnish—that's why the use of Good Paint is wise economy.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A BOILED DINNER

"Well, Mrs. Briggs, I thought I'd drop in on you and tell you 'bout my visit to the city.

"I haven't had a real bang-up vacation for so long. Ruby being in school, that Sam says, 'G'long, Jane, and have a real good time.' He gimme ten dollars—yes, he did! And I had a fine time, and I haven't spent a cent of it. No, not a penny!

"I thought I'd call on Mamie Dee, she that was a Swanhetickler; you know she married and lives there.

"You know how sweet are them airy ways she had after she went to college, and her born and brought up right here in this town. She never done a stitch of work at home.

"I don't know what good it all did her, anyhow, for she had to learn stenography and typewriting 'fore she could earn. She certainly couldn't teach a country school. Mercy me, no! Well, anyhow, I thought I'd call. She lives in a flat—'apartments' she called it.

"I had to tell my name 'fore she'd let me in. 'Suppose they have to be so careful for fear of burglars. She didn't seem terrible glad to see me at first, but after an hour or so she asked me to take my things off and seemed real sociable. She does her own work; but land! I thought she must be awful smart a-eatin' around with a silk dress on, and so tight she couldn't hardly move.

"Well, I set and set and she didn't ask me to stay to tea. Land! Think of dozens of times she'd been to my home and welcome! So I set and set, and finally I got up to go, and she asked me if I would stay to dinner. I told her 'twouldn't 'cause I'd go home next day.'

"She says, 'I mean dinner to-night. Mr. De will be to home,' says she very pretty, 'and will be pleased to see you.' Just like speaking a little piece!

"My land! A pretty time to think about dinner. It was most my tea time at home then.

"So we rode in a trolley car and I stood up and swung around a strap and bumped into lots of people. They didn't seem to mind; got used to it, I guess. So we got to a market and she selected the dinner herself and had it sent; and would you believe it, the dinner got there before we did.

"Now, what do you suppose she brought for dinner? For me, who ain't been to the city for years?

"'A boiled dinner!

"'I thought you would relish a real old-fashioned boiled dinner,' says she.

"Me! With my cellar full of cabbages and more garden truck than that butcher ever seen.

"Well, it was most dark when we got home, and I asked her if she'd let me help her get the dinner, and she says, 'No, you run in the library and set down. We have gas you know,' says she. I asked her if she ever took pepsin tablets, but she didn't answer.

"I was most starved then and fidgetted and fretted. My fingers just itched to get hold of those vegetables and I couldn't smell nothing cooking. Her husband was real nice. He came home and I liked him, and we sat down to dinner, and my land! She had the smallest piece of corned beef I ever hoped to see—and all fat. Instead of putting the vegetables all on one platter, same as I do, she has each kind in a different dish—kind of pretty, but lots of work, and cut up in the ittiest pieces I ever see.

"I see the meat ya'nt done, so I told him he needn't give me more. He couldn't cut it anyway, so he sharpened his knife fit to kill and have some slices. I see that she didn't take much neither.

"He gave me some parsnip and carrot and asked me if I'd have some turnip. I looked at it. Pale yaller, the funniest looking turnip I ever see. I says, 'Is that turnip?' Didn't want to hurt her feelings, of course. Then he scowled at it and she looked with all her eyes.

"'P'r'aps its frostbitten,' says she.

"'Guess it would look different from that if 'twas,' says I.

"Her husband laughed and I see mischief in his eye.

"'I don't dare taste it, Mame. Do you?' says he. She looked all worked up over it.

"'Where'd you buy it?' says he. 'Let's send it back.'

"He winked at me, but she took it so serious I says, 'Let me taste it.' I guess I know what 'tis; and, sure enough, it was a sweet potato boiled and cut into small pieces. We had a good laugh over that.

"I selected the largest one they had,' says she. 'It was round, just like a turnip.

"'I'll have this one.' I said, and he looked surprised, and I thought it looked queer; he only charged me two cents for it.'

"She forgot the cabbage entirely. Do you wonder I didn't smell boiled dinner?

"For the last thing she brought on a pie. The crust looked nice and the inside was bright yellow. 'My! something new,' says I, trying to be polite and cheerful. 'What kind of pie is this?'

"'Only squash,' says she.

"'Heavens to Betsy! Baked with two crusts?' says I.

"'Why!' says she, slow and thoughtful, 'I thought they always made them that way!'

"Now, Mrs. Briggs, what do you think of that for a boiled dinner?"

I was gone four nights and three whole days; quite a vacation for me.

"Well, I got up the finest boiled dinner you ever see when I got home. Waited on Sam by inches. I did, as 't he says, 'Hold on there, man! Guess I can eat myself.'

"'You'd have to if you was poor Mamie Dee's husband,' says I.

"'I ain't going to send Ruby away to school,' says I. 'I'm going to teach her "domestic science" right to home.'

"'When you going to begin?' says Sam.

"'Tomorrow,' says I."

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled, a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles, and the doctor told me I was in a bad condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was pretty well run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My troubles soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

Generous Amanda.

"Of course you have made some promises you didn't keep."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "But I never yet broke a promise to a man without giving him a better one in its stead."—Washington Star.

Disgust.

Mr. Brown-Jones tells the story differently—Modern improvements in cab all very well (nic), but moving stairways in the ltd.—London Opinion.

The Secret.

Old maids, according to life insurance records, are better risks than married women, while bachelors are not such a desirable risk as married men. Looks like a lack of teamwork somewhere—Duluth News-Tribune.

Talent.

"Why do you bill her as America's greatest actress?" asked the critic.

"She has shot two husbands and divorced three others," replied the producer. "What more do you want?"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

FUN TO THE AUDIENCE.

But to the Actors Such Mistakes as These Spell Tragedy.

Among the amusing misadventures of the stage—that is amusing to the people "in front"—is that which concerns a very promising but exceedingly nervous young actor who since has become one of the brightest ornaments of the stage. He was playing the first actor in Hamlet and proceeded quite bravely until he reached these lines:

"Anon he finds him
Striking too short at Greeks."

Here, for the first time, his nerve or memory failed him; and, to the great amusement of the house, he delivered himself thus:

"Anon he finds them Striking at two short Greeks."

with the result that, instead of speaking at least another 20 lines he incontinently stopped short, quite unable to utter a word. His companions tried to prompt him, but to no purpose whatever; and when "Polonius"—after giving him a full two minutes to pull himself together—was compelled to go on with his next line:

"This is too long,"

the audience shrieked and held its sides with laughter.

Such a very seasoned actor as the late Thomas Mead, one of the leading members of Sir Henry Irving's company, was often a victim to verbal lapses, as when, in Macbeth, instead of saying, "Cool it with a baboon's blood," he convulsed the audience by saying, "Cool it with a dungeon's blood," and one of our greatest actresses once converted an idyllic love scene into farce by changing, "Let us seek some cosy nook," into "Let us seek some nosey cook."

Even dead men on the stage have their embarrassing moments, as a certain actor who recently played the role of a poacher in a melodrama discovered. The poacher had been shot by a rival at the end of the second act, and the curtain should have fallen as he dropped dead. As ill-luck would have it, however, it stopped short when a few feet from the stage, and opposed all efforts to lower it further. The audience began to titter; the situation became tense and painful, when the dead man saved it. Rising wearily, he said, in a sepulchral voice: "Alas! there is no rest even in the grave," and glided spectrally off the stage.

At a performance of Julius Caesar, some time ago, "Marc Antony" made a ludicrous mistake when "Caesar's" dead body was brought in. Apostrophising the fallen hero in passionate eloquence, while the onlooking citizens were overwhelmed with grief, he grasped, as he thought, the face cloth and began slowly to draw it back. At this moment a sepulchral whisper came from the other end of the corpse. "This end, you fool!" But "Antony" was too grief-stricken to pay any heed. He pulled away at the cloth and disclosed, to the startled audience, "Julius Caesar's" boots.

Foggy.

"James, I understand the fogs are thick in London."

"I remember one, sir, that held for three months. I was working on a tunnel, sir, and we cut a ninety foot channel through a sixty foot hill."—Washington Herald.

KEPHALDOL

"IS ABSOLUTELY MARVELLOUS AS A PAIN KILLER."

Mrs. Beatrice Cassey, of Swaleclift, England, knows what it means to be bed-ridden with pain. She also knows now how easily the tortures of Rheumatism and Lumbago may be overcome. She says, "My experience with KEPHALDOL as a pain-killer is absolutely marvellous. I had a fearfully acute attack last year of Neuritis, Sciatica and Lumbago, and suffered in bed for many days. Finally, I heard of KEPHALDOL, which did wonders for me. I shall always feel most grateful for what it has done, and I am most happy to let others know of its wonderful effects as a pain destroyer."

KEPHALDOL is the only pain reliever that does not affect the heart. It acts directly on the nerve centres, easing and quieting the pain. KEPHALDOL is the favourite combination of nerve stimulents and tonics prescribed by the famous Doctor Stohr, of Vienna, the great nerve specialist.

KEPHALDOL is now sold in Canada by druggists in 50c. tubes or may be had by sending 50c. direct to Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

HAMILTON CONVENTED.

After Australian Visit He Is For Compulsory Training.

LONDON, April 24.—Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, as a result of his inspection of the Australian forces, has become a convert to the principle of compulsory training. "I now think," he said yesterday, "that the system is good for a nation, whether from a moral or a physical aspect. I have inspected fifty thousand senior cadets and it has been beyond my previous imagination."

It will be recalled that Sir Ian in 1911 published the now famous book entitled "Compulsory Service," in which he defended the territorial force. Lord Kitchener, who drew up the Australian defence scheme, is also an advocate of national service.

Grandma Used Sage Tea To Darken Hair

She Mixed Sulphur With It to Restore, Colour, Gloss, Thickness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, grey or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While grappy, grey, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

NOSE AND HEAD STOPPED UP FROM COLD OR CATARRH, OPEN AT ONCE

My Cleansing, Healing Balm Instantly Clears Nose, Head a Throat—Stops Nasty Catarrhal Discharges. Dull Headache Goes.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils, penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lay awake to-night struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous droping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh—will surely disappear.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER, JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

If the infallible man exists, I have never heard of him, and I am acquainted with no one who owns his names and address.

Infallibility is impossible in business or out of it. Every one makes mistakes and will continue to make them. Success depends, not upon the lack of error, but upon counteracting it, upon overcoming mistakes, and upon being right oftener than wrong.

Comparatively few men of mark have a clear record of accomplishment. Most of them have failed, but the best of them have used their failures as stepping stones to success.

Recently two friends of mine lost their positions with a large corporation through no fault of theirs. One of these men used the disaster as the foundation for better accomplishments, and won. The other, with equal opportunity, hung his trouble around his neck and sank with it.

Mistakes are disasters only when they are not used advantageously. If you are in error, if you have done something which has injured you and your employer, don't make excuses for your shortcomings. Walk up to headquarters with your head erect and your chest thrown out. Admit your blunders. Don't try to belittle them or to excuse them. Any attempt on your part to excuse yourself, to place the blame upon others or upon conditions, will react against you.

Let us suppose, for example, that you are a bookkeeper and that you have made an inexcusable error. Go to your superior and acknowledge your mistake. This frank admission on your part will disarm criticism and tend to create confidence in you in the mind of the one above you; while, if you attempt to excuse yourself, you will suffer a penalty greater than you deserve.

The mistake admitted is not half as great a blunder as the one covered up or acknowledged with excuses.

Be as frank about your mistakes as about your successes. Don't try to deceive or to quibble about anything. It doesn't pay in the long run. Every mistake will be discovered, and a discovered error reacts mightily against you.

Under no circumstances throw the responsibilities of your shortcomings upon others, even though they should share the blame with you. Like a hero walk up to the judgment seat, and acknowledge your error in a manly, frank, and fearless way. The mere acknowledgement is prima facie evidence that you will do better in the future.

Every business man knows that mistakes are a part of business action and that all of them cannot be avoided. He despises the deceitful clerk, one who shifts the responsibility of his errors upon others, and he will almost invariably hold out a helping hand to the honest man who acknowledges that he has done wrong, has made a mistake, and proposes to use his shortcomings as an aid to his future betterment.

GRIPPE PREVALENT

How to Regain Strength After a Severe Attack.

With so much grippe prevalent this winter a few words of advice regarding its cause and treatment will not be out of place.

Grippe is an infectious disease easily taken when the system is in a tired or run-down condition.

The best means of prevention are to keep the blood in good healthy condition, and if the system gets into a weak, run-down condition, take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic.

A lady from Long Branch, N. J., says: "Grippe left me in a nervous, weakened, run-down condition. After taking three bottles of Vinol I feel better and stronger than I have been for years, and I cheerfully recommend Vinol to all who have suffered from the grippe and need strength." (Name furnished on request.)

We have never sold in our store such a valuable strength creator and health restorer for the convalescent, the weak and run-down as Vinol, and your money will be returned if it does not do all we claim for it. NO MORE CONCESSIONS.

Major Leonard Insists on Equal Board at Queen's.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 24.—It is reported that Major R. W. Leonard will not make any further concessions in regard to his military training offer to Queen's University. He insists upon the board being composed of six members, three military and three academic. Queen's has been holding out for a majority of academic members on the board. It is said that Major Leonard wants to have some control of the scheme for two or three years in order to get it on a good basis.

At a meeting of the University trustees on the 29th, it is expected that the offer will be accepted.

Two or three of the professors of the university became hot over the military proposition that they actually threatened to resign if it was accepted.

Austrian Emperor's Condition.

VIENNA, April 24.—The condition of Emperor Francis Joseph was not so satisfactory yesterday as had been indicated in preceding bulletins. GUNBOAT SLIPPED AWAY.

Mexican Commander Didn't Know U. S. HELD VERA CRUZ.

VERA CRUZ, April 24. — The Mexican gunboat Progreso, with more than five hundred soldiers in heavy marching order aboard, steamed to the harbor mouth last evening, but no further. The commander of the Progreso had not heard that the Americans were in possession of the city.

The Progreso was hailed by the flagship and boarded by Lieut. Byron McCandless, of Admiral Badger's staff, who informed the commander that he had the choice of remaining under the guns and searchlights of the flagship or putting out to sea. It was explained to him that the United States was not at war with Mexico, but for the present the presence of Mexican gunboats and soldiers at Vera Cruz was not desirable. The interview was brief and ended with the Progreso putting to sea.

AUTO ASSOCIATION ADVERTISES THE CITY

100-Foot Signs on Main Road of Province Stating Distance to Peterborough—Directions Signs Nearer Home.

CONVENIENCE TO AUTOISTS

Alive to the fact that spring is here and that it brings with it the season for motorists to take the fullest advantage of their cars the local Automobile Association have entered upon a scheme to advertise Peterborough throughout the Province during the summer. On all the main roads throughout Ontario there will be posted a large number of conspicuous signs, bearing the inscription "This way to Peterborough," and other reminders to passing motorists that the City of Peterborough is not only on the map, but prepared to welcome tourists or others who have a chance to visit the City.

It is thought that by this means all the tourists who wish to motor to this City will find it easier to reach it, and that possibly the signs will have the effect of bringing motorists who otherwise would not have included Peterborough in their list of stopping places. The enterprise is certainly a promising one and shows that the Association is willing to exert themselves in the interest of the City as well as for its own members.

Other Signs will be Posted.

Besides these two or three hundred other signs will be posted at once in the district surrounding this City. A meeting of the Committee in charge of the work is to be held soon to decide on definite steps, but the general plan will be to arrange finger posts in this district so that autoists can find their way without the least difficulty, not only along the main highways, but to all the Towns, Villages and summer resorts. The district that will be attended to by the local Association is bounded on the north by Bobcaygeon, on the south by Newcastle, on the east by Colbourne, and on the west by Marmora. It is hoped, too, that the knowledge that this part of the country is well provided with signs will be another inducement to motorists to turn their cars this way. The signs will be of particular convenience to local auto owners and those within the district mentioned.

CYRIL MAUDE IS 52 YEARS OLD TO-DAY

Cyril Maude, the eminent English actor whose appearances in the United States and Canada during the present season have met with marked success, was born in London, April 24, 1862. His education was received in the famous Charterhouse school in the British metropolis. While still in, his teens his roving instincts took him from home. A few months later he found himself in the United States and without funds. Having recourse to a talent he had used hitherto as an amateur he sought employment as an actor. For several years he continued on the American stage. Then he went back to England and before long had gained a foothold in London. Thereafter his rise in the profession was rapid. For a number of years he was a leading player and one of the managers at the Haymarket Theatre in London. Later he acquired his own theatre in London, and of late years he has been looked upon as one of the leading actor-managers of England.

Peterborough theatre-goers had the privilege of seeing Cyril Maude during the early part of the present season. Shortly afterwards he went to New York where he has enjoyed one of the greatest successes of the theatrical year.

[illegible] ON EARTH ARE NOT GARBAGE

A garbage collector's job is no sinecure and citizens are asked to be reasonable in making use of their service. It has been noticed that in many cases stones and earth have been put out for collection. This is obviously not garbage and cannot be taken. Further it is unfair to expect the collectors to take an unreasonable quantity of refuse. One resident this morning had half a load for collection, evidently the result of the winter's accumulation. When it is remembered that the service is only costing the ratepayers half a cent a day, the quantity might be evened up a little more reasonably.

FRANCE AGAINST UNITED STATES

Leading French Paper is Strongly Antagonistic—Says Uncle Sam Lacks Scruples

CALLS IT ASSASSINATION

Examiner Special:

PARIS, France, April 24.—With the departure for home of the King and Queen of England after one of the most magnificent receptions on record here, the papers of Paris are turning their attention to the Mexican trouble. Pres Midi is especially antagonistic to the United States. It says Uncle Sam's lack is of scruples is only redeemed by rare hypocrisy. "Wilson is morally responsible for the flood of blood in the civil war in Mexico. Europe naturally disapproves. We will watch the assassination and robbery of these poor people with mutual horror."

COMPLAINT THAT BOYS WERE PLAYING ABSENT POLICE

While play-grounds are being discussed by various citizens a little incident that occurred last night illuminates one side of some natures. The police were called to the Wolfe street lot where Mr. Geo. Robertson's embryo lacrosse players were enjoying the fun. The police stated that a resident of the vicinity complained of the noise of the game or some such alleged nuisance. Several neighbours seeing the police, gave voluntary statements that the boys were not creating any disturbance and were well behaved. No reasonable objection could be made to their playing, it was stated. The police, of course, cautioned the boys not to give any cause for complaint, but the advice was scarcely necessary. The moral is self-evident.

NAME PRIVATE WARD IN HONOUR OF MRS. REV. JAS. ROLLINS

In addition to the regular offerings of the Peterborough Presbyterial H.M.S. the activities of the Presbyterial executive have resulted in raising a sum of money sufficient to present life memberships in the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society of Canada to Mesdames M. J. Braden and E. M. Waddell; to name a private ward in the Hugh Waddell Memorial Hospital at Canora in honour of Mrs. James Rollins and to have the names of Hugh Rutherford Waddell and Jessie Kathleen Rollins included among the names inscribed upon the wall tablets in the new hospital. At the last executive meeting the names of Mrs. H. Waddell Presbyterial President, Mrs. Chisholm, Corresponding Secretary, and Mrs. Ridpath, of Lakefield Auxiliary were forwarded to Toronto as eligible for membership on the Provincial Board of the newly amalgamated society; and Mesdames Waddell, McPherson, Turner, Chisholm and Rollins were appointed a committee of five to confer with a similar committee from the W.F.M.S. Presbyterial to arrange for officers, etc., for the new society to be formed in May.

Mrs. H. Waddell and Mrs. Chisholm are also ex-officio delegates to the general annual meetings in Toronto beginning May 19th.

Knew Questions He Would Ask

COLUMBUS, O., April 23—Caught by a reporter after her concert here and just prior to starting for Montreal, Madame Clara Butt, with only a few minutes to spare, exclaimed:

Now, I'll save your time and mine by answering your questions before you put them. Yes, I like America very much and find your audiences appreciative. I enjoyed my stay here and was very gratified at the great hospitality and kindness of your citizens. I think the great qualifications for a great singer are voice and intelligence and hard work. I always like singing 'Abide With Me' and 'The Last Chord' and I am devoted to my husband and my children!"

Having fired these sentiments at the bewildered writer, the corpulent prima donna arose in all the dignity of her six feet and two inches, of weight and swept out to take the train.

ADVISED THE BOYS TO PETITION COUNCIL

For Adequate Playgrounds—With Advent of Spring Youths Are Beginning to Annoy Citizens.

CHARGE WAS DISMISSED

Yesterday nine boys came before Magistrate Dumble charged with being disorderly, and this morning six others appeared on the same charge. They were summoned to appear on the complaints of residents near the corner of Park and Romaine streets, where it was charged the boys created a disturbance last Thursday night. Several residents near that corner testified that the only complaint was that the boys were making too much noise. One of them said that they had run across his lawn and verandah but when he had asked them to keep off they had stopped the practice. None of the witnesses had heard the boys swearing or using bad language.

One of the young fellows was put in the witness box and said that they were playing a game called "Run Sheep Run," and that the noise they made was just the shouting of the necessary signals for the game. They were defended by Mr. V. J. McElderry.

The Magistrate dismissed the charge, but warned the boys that in future they must not interfere with the rights of property owners. It all came of the lack of play-grounds. The Council had been importuned for fifty years to secure play-grounds for the boys, but they had been economical. He advised the boys to prepare a petition signed by 1,000 of the young people of this city, and present it to the Council asking for more play-grounds. This he thought might be of more avail than the efforts of the older citizens who had worked in vain to secure play-grounds for the boys.

WHY MAPLE SYRUP IS SUGARY

In Tuesday's Examiner was the report of a dissatisfied Lakefield man bringing some maple syrup to the Sanitary Inspector to discover whether it was genuine. He had purchased it on the market in Peterborough. It appeared that there was a maple flavour, but at the bottom of the vessel was a "white sugary sediment."

A gentleman who had large experience called on the Examiner to say that the syrup was probably genuine, and would have been all right if it had been strained a second time. This would have removed the sand-like sugary sediment and the syrup would probably have been satisfactory.

The gentleman also explained that two samples of syrup might be perfectly genuine, and one be very light and one very dark in colour. He says the syrup made for sap drawn from a maple tree with a red heart or from a hollow trees would be very dark in colour, but perfectly pure and sweet, and as good in flavour and quality as the lighter coloured syrup.

Return Rolls By First Of May

City Tax Collector Will Be Asked to Do So by That Date

Tax Collector Green, it is understood, will be asked to return the rolls by May the first. Those who have not paid their taxes by this date will be called upon to pay additional costs after the first of May. There are a number of delinquents who have not paid, but it will be to their advantage to do so at once.

PLAN FRATERNAL DEMONSTRATION

Representatives of Fraternal Societies Are Requested to Attend a Public Meeting to Discuss a Proposed Gathering.

MANY FAVOUR IT

A number of the fraternal societies of the city have been discussing in a general way a proposal to hold a fraternal demonstration in the near future, and have arranged for a meeting to be held on Saturday evening at eight o'clock at which the matter will be discussed. Lansdowne Lodge of the S.O.E. have kindly given the use of their rooms on Hunter street for the meeting which will be entirely informal. All the fraternal societies in the city are requested to send representatives.

Up to the present nothing of a definite character has been undertaken except the preparation for this meeting. The project has simply been broached by a number of members of several lodges who have expressed their approval of the idea and are willing to enlist the support of other societies. Already members of nine different fraternal societies have signified their interest in the matter, and the press has been asked to outline the proposal. It is hoped that at the Saturday night meeting all the fraternal societies of the city will be represented.

Might Hold Parade.

One of the suggestions mentions a parade from the market square or some central place, up George street to Central Park, where several addresses might be given by local clergymen. Another, inclines to a parade some Sunday evening after which the various societies might proceed to various churches where special sermons would be preached.

It will be understood that nothing has as yet been done, and that it remains for the assembly on Saturday night to say whether the proposal shall be carried out or not.

The Reason for It.

The men who have mooted this idea are prompted by a desire to create a strong fraternal feeling between the societies of the city. It is not intimated that there has been any other spirit among these organizations, but rather that nothing has been attempted to bring them more closely together. All suggestions will be welcomed at the meeting to-morrow night when the proposal will then be gone into for the first time.

STRANGE LIGHTS IN MORNING SKY DID YOU SEE THEM?

A remarkable collection of solar phenomena was witnessed this morning about 7 o'clock. Two sundogs were in evidence, but instead of being coloured as usual were simply a ball of colourless luminosity intense in brilliance. These later developed into a brilliant circle of light around the sun. At the same time, almost in Zenith, was a very vivid segment of a circle of the colours of the rainbow, with the convex side turned towards the sun. In fact it was an inverted rainbow, and produced a startling effect from its unusual position. Weather wise prophets predict a change in the weather from the present spring-like conditions.

BIG SNAKE KILLED ON MORROW STREET

A Morrow Street resident killed a green snake several mornings ago that measured six feet, four inches in length. He noticed it in his garden and, picking up a long staff, made a pass at it, but fanned on the first attempt. Mr. Snake had his head high in the air and looked vicious, but a swinging clout on the head sent him off into slumber land. His remains were hung over a fence, the Morrow Street man intending to exhibit the reptile up town, but the hens in the neighbourhood helped themselves to portions of his length, spoiling his general appearance. The hen-raising residents of East City might take a tip from this experience snake meat, apparently, being a tidbit after existing for years on scraps and garbage.

HON. ADAM BECK ASKED FOR DAMS ON OTONABEE

"I do not refer to any water powers saving any connection whatever with the matter in the Exchequer Court," said Hon. Adam Beck last night. What I intended to convey to the House was that the Government of to-day at Ottawa was in sympathy with the Hydro-Electric movement. When application was received for power from municipalities in the Trent district—from Peterborough and Lakefield—the commission applied to the Dominion Government for the right to develop power for these municipalities on the Trent. We thought there were several not alienated from the commission and not in control of the company already there. We made a formal application for dams 4 and 8. We asked the government to lease them to us on the same terms as they would grant them to any corporation. The Government notified us that when the commission was prepared to undertake the development of these dams the lease would be issued.

BRITISH RESIDENTS ASK PROTECTION

Call For Sailors From the British Warships on the Atlantic Coast For Mexico City—Two Americans Stabbed to Death.

150 BODIES BURNED

Special Wire to A. H. Stratton & Co.:

WASHINGTON, April 24.—President Wilson in a private talk with visitors to-day reiterated his declaration that the administration should be unhampered in its efforts to avoid actual conflict. It is stated in administration circles that no further aggressive steps have been taken against Mexico for a few days in order to give Americans in the interior of Mexico time to get out of the country and to let the United States military that was ordered to Vera Vera Cruz and the border have ample time to reach their destination.

150 MEXICAN BODIES BURNED ON BIG PYRE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

VERA CRUEZ, Mexico, April 24. — Fatigue parties of the United States marines had a gruesome duty this morning. The bodies of a hundred and fifty Mexican killed in action were taken to the outskirts of the city and placed in a great pyre and burned, while the outposts were peppering away at the Mexican guerillas sniping from under brush.

200 FOREIGNERS REACH VERA CRUEZ IN SAFETY

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, April 24. — After a thrilling trip from Mexico City during which they were repeatedly held up by Federal troops and insulted and insulted, nearly two hundred United States, British and German refugees from Mexico City arrived here to-day. The last part of the trip was made under an escort of blue jackets from H. M. S. Essex, who were sent ashore at the request of the United States Admiral, who feared that his men would draw the fire of the Mexican snipers on the refugees' train. Eight hundred foreigners, mostly Americans and Britishers, are still in Mexico. Their situation is very dangerous. There have been several anti-foreign demonstrations lately.

BELIEVE THERE IS NO CHANCE OF PEACE

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 24. — Mexico City next" was the slogan of the army and navy. The heads of both branches of the service believe there is now no chance of peace. They are expecting and are ready for formal declaration between the United States and Mexico. It is admitted that the task of taking the capital will be a serious one, but military experts figure out that three months will do it at the most. The pacification of people and restoration of order and submission to the United States through the provinces is another question. The Cabinet is holding another emergency meeting this morning.

LONDON, Eng., April 24—According to a cipher message received today by a big firm, two Americans were stabbed to death on the streets of Mexico City and there is a general rioting this afternoon. British residents there ask that sailors from the British warships on the Atlantic Coast be sent to the Mexican Capital to protect them.

UNTIL JUNE FIRST TO PAY HIS FINE

Charge Against Albert Smoke of Assaulting Constable Montgomery is Withdrawn

RESISTED ARREST

Albert Smoke, an Alderville Indian who, a week ago, was fined twenty dollars and costs, amounting to $27.33, for being drunk at Buckhorn, a local option district, came up again before Magistrate Edmison this morning. The charge against Smoke of assaulting Constable David Montgomery was withdrawn, Mr. Montgomery making a statement to the effect that Smoke had not assaulted him, but had resisted arrest.

The costs of to-day's action were added to those of last week, making added to those of last week, making Court $30.43. Magistrate Edmison gave Smoke until June 1st to pay his fine, and if it is not paid in that time he will have to go goal for three months. Smoke intends to work for the McDonald Lumber Co., on the drive.

Decisions Of Magistrates Do Not Concur

Magistrate Masson dismissed the charge of breach of the transient traders' by-law against Mr. A. E. Peake, who was in the city last week taking orders for clothes for a Toronto firm. This judgment is important to the clothing merchants and tailors of Belleville, some of whom, it is understood, have urged the police to take action against clothing agents. Peake had a perfect right to sell by sample.

He produced his certificate from his employer in due form.

Mr. Carscow, counsel for Mr. Peake, had handed into court a memo of authorities. In it he said: "The occupation of premises in the municipality though only for a temporary period is the essential note of difference."—Belleville Ontario.

A case parallel to the one mentioned above came before Magistrate Dumble here some time ago. In that case the young men were fined and ordered to stop selling until they procured a license which would cost $100.

SAYS WAR IS ONLY WITH GEN. HUERTA

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 24—After an extended cabinet meeting to-day President Wilson again emphasized the fact that the quarrel of the United States is not against Mexico but against Huerta alone. He declined to discuss the foreign newspapers' comment and declared he was acting solely for the upholding of the dignity of the United States, and the peace of the world. He did not think Huerta would get the support of Carranza. So far as reported here there have been no further developments in Mexico.

It is stated that the present low water in the Otonabee is playing havoc with wild fowl and fish. The bass and maskinonge are debarred from going to their usual spawning places. Trappers along the river set traps for muskrats and hundreds of wild ducks are being caught in the traps.

TREASON IN TEMPERANCE.

The rock that will fling back the advancing temperance wave more than anything else, will be the embodiment of the party spirit in the elector. Temperance people might have had the bar and the economic moral, domestic and personal evils it creates, abolished long ago if the party spirit had not achieved ascendancy over principle. At temperance conventions we have fervid orators expressing grim determination to fight the evil of intemperance to the last ditch, and the same people who make speeches and vote for resolutions of a similar tenor of the speecher, go straightway and vote for the party candidate whom they know will support a party pledged more powerfully than by words—by acts—to oppose abolition of the bar, in the interests of the traffic, as far as the province has power; they go straightway and vote against the candidate of the party pledged by word and act to wipe out the traffic. This is why temperance doesn't advance any faster. Temperance people bring out a candidate and pledge their support to a candidate pledged to advance temperance legislation, and the candidate, when it comes to a contest, is allowed to plough the lone furrow so far as the support of those who would have to vote against the party candidate in supporting the pledged temperance candidate is concerned. Of course, such electors will find excuses for their conscience betraying their moral professions—they have no moral principles. Of course an excuse will be found to cover the expansive stretch of their conscience—the wolf of the fable found an excuse for eating the lamb. It wasn't a very good excuse, but it did the lamb's business. So the excuses of the weak-kneed temperance pharisees and hypocrites, serve the purposes of the wolf. Such bogus friends of temperance reform, who preach temperance reform, who preach temperance and vote whisky are meet from the denunciation of Tom Moore—

O, for a tongue to curse the slave,
Whose treason like a deadly blight
Comes o'er the councils of the brave
To blast them in the hour of might.

AFRAID OF THE LIGHT.

The Ontario government is a compound of dark-lantern brigade and party tyrant. It shuns the light, fights shy of investigation of its acts, done in the name of the people, who have a right to know what is being done and how it is done. G. Howard Ferguson, M.P., who forfeited his seat by breaking the law, was pardoned and whitewashed in thirty minutes, while it took the government seven years to revise the statutes and five or six years to bring in a working man's compensation bill. Mr. Ferguson was needed to stifle investigation in the Public Accounts committee. He shut off investigation into the relation of a minister of the Crown to party corruption funds, placed in his hands by a contractor who was seekin favours from the government. This is only one sample of Mr. Ferguson's party usefulness. The government sent out a license inspector to canvass against the Canada Temperance Act in three counties, and investigation of his movements and the responsibility of the acting premier, Mr. Hanna, in connection with them, is refused. The "News" says this demand is peanut politics. The Whitney government promised removal of the licenses from political influences. Was that peanut politics? Or is the most flagrant outrage of non-partizan administration day after day and year after year all over the province a peanut matter? Or is refusal to investigate the circumstances of a government official a license official—to wit, Snider—playing the political party game in the party interests and in the interests of his traffic allies, a matter of peanut politics? Mr. Evanturel was ferguesoned out of the House, because he exposed the political trafficing in liquor licenses in Prescott, and he was ony trying to do what the government is doing every day, and has been doing for seven or eight years—making itself solid with the liquor party. It is mighty easy—and wise—of a hidebound defender of the government to cry "peanut politics" when there is an attempt to lift the lid. Its not peanut politics; it's big politics to try to expose the prostitution of power to party purposes, to expose the employment of the license law in party interests. Snider is not the only sinner; there are others; not only license inspectors, but license commissioners seem to be used in party interests. How otherwise can an inspector extort contributions from hotel keepers to serve private purposes, for ultimate political ends? How is it that commissioners, against overwhelming public sentiment, can and do grant licenses to friends of the government, that would not be granted to opponents of the government under similar circumstances? It is no wonder that the government is reluctant to lift the lid on license administration by granting an investigation of Inspector Snider's partizan activities.

As to another manifestation of party tyranny take the government gerrymander of constituencies—loading the dice against their Liberal opponents. The government not only commits an iniquitous gerrymander, but attempts to force it through the Legislature without discussion, by virtue of their large majority. We might expect magnanity from a government with a three to one majority, if its record were not so damning that it would be condemned, unless there was the help represented by disfranchising its opponents.

TORY JOURNAL'S CONDEMNATION OF FERGUSONISM

The Toronto Telegram, Conservative, does not like the way in which attempts at investigating the public expenditures are throttled in the public accounts committee of the Legislature. It says:

Loyalty to party requires G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P., to officiate as a traitor to himself. The ability of Mr. Ferguson should not be frittered away in the manufacture of rulings that deprive the Ontario opposition of its right to a wide-open enquiry. The Proudfoot enquiry was throttled by the strong-handed chairmanship of G. Howard Ferguson, M.P.P. The same authority is being operated as a curb on the activity of the public accounts committee. The rulings of Chairman Ferguson may be justified according to the strict letter of the law, but the multiplicity of these rulings tends to impair the glory of the Whitney government, and to lessen the possibilities of Mr. Ferguson's own future usefulness. There will be fewer blunders in public life when representatives of the people refuse to put themselves on the road to the scrap-heap in the process of attempting to prevent enquiry into the performance of bunglers and blunderers.

A government which has nothing to fear will always court, rather than thwart, a full enquiry into its every act.

BOARD OF TRADE RESERVES SPACE AT THE CONVENTION

One of the biggest and greatest business men's conferences ever held in Canada will centre in Toronto for five days commencing Sunday, Jan. 31, 1914. The Associated Advertising Clubs of America will invade Toronto. The Queen City has for the past five years fought hard, earnestly and consistently to bring a monster convention to Canada, so large is the gathering of brainy business men that it is absolutely imperative to hold the daily sessions in the various exhibition buildings in Exhibition park. Fifteen thousand delegates in all are expected.

In bringing this Ad. Club convention to Canada it is Toronto's idea to sell them first Toronto, then Canada, because the men connected with this association represent the money spending people of the capitalistaton of the American continent. In reserving space in the large Exhibition building it's the sole intention purpose of the local Board to sell to these men "Peterborough."

Already at this early date the Board has reserved a 50 ft. space for display purposes. On this space will be erected a booth and Peterborough at heart workers will be in charge.

Peterborough's possibilities, advantages and opportunities will be pumped into the heart of every man attending the big convention. It is also proposed to round up a big deputation and bring them down by special train, entertaining them by a motor drive around the City and boat trip over the Lift-Lock. Arrangements for this will be announced at a later date.

This booth as arranged for, will be boxed in with big signs, bearing the wording, "Peterborough, the Electric City of Canada" and the general scheme of decoration will be very artistic. Samples of everything manufactured within the limits of our City will be represented, and from this booth will issue, answers to all questions regarding the unsurpassed advantages as well as well written literature telling all about the wonderful waterways, lift lock, railroad facilities, ideal manufacturers' sites, etc.

Letters from local manufacturers telling the "whys" of locating here, and the prosperous after results will be open for inspection.

Peterborough will be well represented at this monster convention in such a remarkable way that every citizen connected with the local Ad. Club, and nursing an anticipation of attending will be justly proud of the showing and with the way the new Board of Trade is conducting its efforts to advertise and bring prospective manufacturers into closer touch with the desirable opportunities of this great City.

The Board's slogan is, "Advertise Peterborough, first, last, always," and advertise Peterborough it will.

Two Presentations To Mr. Thompson Last Evening

The esteem in which Physical Director Thompson of the Y.M.C.A. is held by the many members of that institution was amply demonstrated last night when he was honoured by two presentations.

Last evening he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. Galley, George street, and during his visit there a number of young men, representing the senior members of the Association, invaded the home of the Boys' Secretary. They presented Mr. Thompson with a handsome solid leather club bag, and Mrs. Thompson with a club bag equally as handsome. The presentation was made on behalf of the senior members by Messrs. Leslie Jewell and Harry Hastie, and Mr. Frank Pidgeon spoke, expressing the regret the boys felt at the approaching departure of Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Thompson said a few words in reply expressing his deep gratitude to the boys for the gift and offering them a few words of advice. He thanked them very heartily for their support during the several years he has been Physical Director of the local "Y." Mr. Galley also spoke of the sorrow of all that Mr. Thompson was leaving soon.

On behalf of the Life Problem Club which Mr. Thompson has fathered since coming to this city, Allan Sharpe spoke, expressing the feeling of the members of the club that they were losing a firm friend and teacher in Mr. Thompson, and wishing he and Mrs. Thompson happiness in their new home.

Later in the evening a genuine surprise was carried out by the Employed Boys' gymnasium class. They lined up for their usual Thursday drill and Mr. Thompson repaired to the gymnasium to take the class. It was then that the members of the class took occasion to present him with a beautiful gold watch fob. The presentation was made by George Nelson and Howard Copp read the address, as follows:

Dear Mr. Thompson:

We, the members of the Employed Boys' class of the Y.M.C.A., learning of your prospective departure from our midst, feel that we could not allow such to happen without placing on record our sincere regret and also assuring you of our fullest sympathy and highest appreciation of you and your work for our class.

You have stood before us as a comrade and friend, always interested in our highest and best welfare, and while it may have often appeared that we were not as thoughtful and attentive towards you for the instruction given, nevertheless allow us to assure you that we are simply boys and when be become men it will then be seen that your fine Christian spirit and manliness will have influenced us greatly for good.

In leaving us, please accept this slight token and rest assured that we wish you "bon voyage" to the State of Maine.

Yours sincerely,

THE EMPLOYED BOYS' CLASS.

Mr. Thompson leaves a tthe end of this month or early in May, and the fact that he has decided to sever his connections with the local "Y" has made the boys realize that it will not seem like the same place without him. His co-partner in the work, Mr. A. A. Hainsworth, is also popular.

THE RESORT IS A GERRYMANDER, SIGN OF COWARDICE

Whether or not the Ontario Government is bold enough to be honest is a matter on which the public are quite uncertain, but many believed the Government strong enough to be honest in the matter of redistribution. In spite of the abnormal strength of Governmental representation in the House, however, a deliberate gerrymander is to be forced through by the subservient majority, so as to use what the Government presumes to be an equally subservient electorate. A gerrymander puts the people on trial. The Government condemns itself by such an offence against political decency, but puts the electorate on trial. The people are confronted with the necessity of condemning themselves of exonerating themselves. Are they helpless pawns on a board to be moved by a finger of the politician to where they can serve to win his game or are they men of free will, capable and willing to decide political issues for themselves? This is the question forced on the electorate by a gerrymander. They must answer it to their own honour or shame.

The gerrymander, as presented, shows evidences of a year's unscrupulous planning, yet the Government's majority wanted the committee to report it the day it was revealed. Bruce, for example, formerly divided, naturally into three ridings, North, Centre, and South, is so divided as to "give the Grits," a phrase of scandalous memory, in the new riding of West Bruce, the worst possible geographical division being aggravated by including Southampton, thus making a Liberal majority of over one thousand. This hiving will make two safe Conservative constituencies, provided the electors allow themselves to be moved, helpless on the political checker-board. In Grey county there is the same disregard for geography and decency. From the large Conservative majority in Centre Grey, Sullivan with 113 and Chatsworth with 26 are transferred to North Grey. St. Vincent and Meaford are transferred from North to Centre, thus making North Grey, if voters are subservient, safely Conservative. South Grey has a Conservative majority of 301, but as temperance sentiment is strong, Artemesia with a Conservative majority of 140, is transferred from the Centre to make the South riding sure for the Government.

In Middlesex the North riding has a narrow Conservative majority. To make it stronger Strathroy, ordinarily Liberal, is put into the West, a hive with 582 majority. Thus the whole nefarious list of changes could be reviewed. In Toronto it was not enough to disregard municipal and ward boundaries, and to set 87,000 against 55,000 population, but the thimble-rigging division of the double ridings has been continued so as to use the complacency of unthinking party support. It will be indeed a misfortune if the people of the Province do not show resentment at this attempt, to use them as helpless pieces on a political checker-board. The situation calls for personal volition and political dignity.

Gospel Hall Meeting.

With the weather permitting the Gospel Hall will hold a meeting at the corner of Brock and George at 3.30 tomorrow (Saturday) night.

A NEEDY FAMILY

Help, If Not Delayed Will Save Suffering

The family living in the front half of the house at No. 288 Wolfe Street are in urgent need of help. They have no relatives or friends in the City and both husband and wife have been hard working and industrious as long as work was to be had. The husband has been out of work for ten weeks, he being one of the first men who were thrown out of employment in the C. G.E. In the meantime he has tramped the City and country looking for work, but so far has been unable to find any. The ladies can be of special help in this case, as the wife is sickly and is soon to become a mother, with very little preparation for the event. Neighbours have been kind, and yet they cannot be expected to bear all the burden. This appeal, surely, will not be without good results.

Having sold our Bowell Business all accounts must be paid at the old address, 370 George street, before May 1st, to save collection charges.

JUDGE HAYES HAS TAKEN THE OATH OF OFFICE

GUELPH, April 23—Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., of Peterborough, and Anson Spotton, of Harriston, were sworn in as senior and junior judges, respectively, of the County of Wellington on Tuesday afternoon. They took the oath of office in the Court House, before Judges Chadwick and Jamieson, in the presence of practically every member of the bar, and other interested spectators. Immediately following the taking of the oaths of office both of the new judges were warmly congratulated by Judge Chadwick and Judge Jamieson.

Shortly after three o'clock Judge Chadwick and Judge Jamieson took seats on the bench. They were followed by Judge Hayes and Judge Spotton. Mr. D. Kirwin read the warrants and commission, and the two newly appointed judges took the oath of office and swore allegiance to the King.

Extended Congratulations.

Donald Guthrie, K. C., in a brief address on behalf of the bar, extended congratulations to the new judges. He stated that the occasion was entirely unique in the history of the bench in the province of Ontario, in that two new judges were sworn in on the same day by their predecessors. In congratulating Judge Hayes, he stated that he was well known by reputation, and came to Guelph with judicial qualifications which would ensure the successful performance of his duties of office.

In reply Judge Hayes stated that he appreciated to some extent the burden of responsibility he must assume. He promised to use his best endeavour to perform his duties and give the people the best that was in him. He intended to take up his residence in Guelph, bring his family here and settle down, probably for the rest of his life. In conclusion, he spoke feelingly of the retirement of Judge Chadwick and Judge Jamieson, whom he referred to as two most able jurists.

WHERE ARE THE WILD FLOWERS?

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I am glad to see from the letter of "Nature Lover," in the issue of 21st inst., that there is someone else in this fair City other than myself, who loves wild flowers. So far as I have been able to find out, from practical experience, I do not consider that wild flowers may be described as "plentiful" in our neighbourhood. For 'Nature Lover's' benefit permit me to say that I have found most in the neighbourhood of Jackson Park and along the railway track running north from thence. Some two miles beyond the park I have found quantities, although not in great variety, yet sufficient to repay me for an early morning walk or an evening stroll. In the words of the immortal hymn, "I have been there and still will go."

This neighbourhood is by no means so bountifully supplied by Nature as other places I have been in, notably, "beautiful' Barrie and its surrounding district, where wild flowers of many kinds grow in lavish profusion.

Yours faithfully,

F. R.

Narrow Escape From Death

LINDSAY, April 24—Confined to his home on Adelaide street with his hip and collar bone broken, John Downey, a Lindsay carpenter, lies in a precarious condition under the care of his medical adviser. The injured man had a narrow escape from death yesterday afternoon and it is astonishing to think that he was not killed from the fall which he received.

Mr. Downey was employed laying shingles on the roof of Mr. A. L. Campbell's residence working for Contractor Jas. Bryson, when a toe lath by which he was supported became loose permitting the workman to slip and fall to the hard earth beneath.

Mr. Wm. Lehand, Robt. Ayres, and other men similarly employed on the building hurried to assist the injured man and 'phoned to Dr. Blanchard, who on arrival, had the patient conveyed to his house. An examination of the patient disclosed the above sad facts.

G. T. R. EMPLOYEES MUST BE COURTEOUS

President of the Company Demands From Employees Kindness and Attention Towards Patrons

The large corporations dealing with the public realize that the incivility of their employees toward the great mass of patrons must give place to a new idea of service. The old expression "the public be d—d" is seldom heard now. For one reason, the public will not tolerate careless and thoughtless treatment, and secondly, competition has aroused the Managers of these companies to investigate the actions of their employees.

The following circular has been sent by President E. J. Chamberlin of the G.T.R. to every employee on the system, and illustrates the changed attitude toward public patronage:

"The ticket rates are alike for all,' says the circular, "and any person buying a ticket, no matter what the style his clothes are, how much money he displays or what his position in society is, is entitled to proper and courteous treatment.

"The railroad man has a great opportunity for passing out kindness and goodwill. He comes in contact with every kind and condition of individual; the old, the young; the rich, the poor; the illiterate, the learned; the happy, the prosperous, and those in defeat. He sees them all and through intuition, knows to which class they belong. A smile, a kind word, or a kindness done to any of these cannot fail to leave its impression for good and this good cannot help but expand. Try it.'

There is also a word as to freight shippers, saying that their needs and wishes should be anticipated as much as possible.

The President's message to the freight men says:

"The needs and wishes of shippers and consignees should be anticipated as much as possible. When cars are ordered the matter should receive close attention and in case it is not possible to furnish as ordered, shipper should be notified, so he may arrange his plans accordingly; he should be made to feel you are interested in his welfare, and that his business is worthy of consideration. Do not discommode a shipper because of some omission of his own, but try to help him most. Railroads are the servants of the public and it is their duty to serve well."

SUES TESREAU FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, April 24.—Charles Monroe Tesreau, the Giants' pitcher from the Ozark country, is being sued for $25,000 for alleged breach of promise of marriage. The plaintiff is Miss Clara Young, of Perryville, Mo., who says "Big Jeff" was engaged to her when he married Miss Helen E. Blake of this city shortly before the Giants started on their world tour.

The summons and complaint were served on Tesreau when he was at practice on the Brooklyn ball field. The case will be tried in the Supreme Court here, and from the many burning love letters in the possession of Miss Young's attorney, James B. Mackie, of No. 5 Wall street, the indications are that the baseball world will have much to talk about.

"Big Jeff's" thoughts on "our dear manager," John McGraw, and many other interesting sidelights on the Giants in particular and baseball in general are contained in the love missives.

BARN RAISING AT DOWNEYVILLE

Yesterday afternoon and evening two very successful functions were given by the local chapter of the Daughters of the Empire. The purpose of the entertainments was to replenish the treasury of the local Chapter so that it can carry on more vigorously than ever, the work that it has been doing in the past.

In the afternoon a very enjoyable "bridge" was held in the recreation room of the Armouries. One hundred and fifty guests took advantage of the invitation to attend and a very pleasant afternoon was spent by all at the 37 tables. The afternoon party was in charge of Mrs. (Dr.) Eastwood, who with the ladies who assisted her are to be complimented on the splendid arrangements that were made for the afternoon entertainment. Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. Mills received. The prize winners were: Auction Bridge — Mrs. Sanderson, Mrs. Young, Miss Helen Donovan, Mrs. Paul Trebilcock, Mrs. Campbell and Miss Jessie Spence; Five Hundred—Miss Hurley; Bridge — Mrs. Morris.

The Evening.

In the evening a Military Euchre was held, both the recreation room and the band room being called into requisition for the affair. There were in the neighbourhood of two hundred and fifty guests present, and the euchre was an exceedingly enjoyable and successful one. The arrangements were in charge of Mrs. D. Walker, and had been splendidly thought out. Col. and Mrs. E. B. Clegg received the guests.

Must Pasteurize Milk In Toronto

Dr. Hastings Submits Sweeping Recommendation to the City's Board of Health

"Inasmuch as unpasteurized milk or cream is or may be prejudicial to public health, it is hereby ordained that on and after the first day of June, 1914, it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to sell, hold for sale or offer for sale for human consumption any milk or cream that has not been scientifically pasteurized to the satisfaction of the Medical Officer of Health or any product of milk or cream, such as ice cream, butter, etc., that has been scientifically pasteurized.

"Provided, however, that this does not apply to certified milk as defined in our milk by-law, and in the Milk Bill of the Provincial Legislature."

One Exception.

The above recommendation was submitted to the Local Board of Health recently by Dr. Hastings, M. O. H., and it is practically certain that it will become law in Toronto. The passing of the clause means that Toronto's milk supply is to be still better guarded, as the milk or cream must be pasteurized with the exception of certified milk. In the latter instance Government inspectors inspect the animals and premises of milk producers twice a month, thus insuring the cleanest of milk and cream, and pasteurizing is thus rendered unnecessary.

At present 80 per cent. of the milk used in the city is pasteurized so the change is not so radical as one might imagine. It was not so long ago, however, that there was comparatively little pasteurized milk.

Can't Reduce Supply

Dr. Hastings stated that it was impracticable to kill off the cows suffering from tuberculosis, as this would mean a reduction of from one-quarter to one-half of the milk supply. His veterinaries claim that from 25 to 30 per cent. of all the dairy cattle in this country are suffering from tuberculosis.

Some Still Opposed.

"I regret to say that there are yet a few fossils who oppose pasteurization, but thank heaven, in the interests of public health and the interests of humanity, they are dying fast and we will soon see the last gasp.

"It must be apparent to this board, from the foregoing facts that unpasteurized milk, not taken from tuberculin tested cattle, and not procured under the sanitary conditions and precautions necessary for the production of a certified milk, is not an unfrequent source of the transmission of the various communicable diseases, in addition to the great danger of the transmission of bovine tuberculosis.

ACT APPRECIATED

The title "Empress" as applied to an Ocean Liner was the happy notion of a Canadian Pacific official when the Pacific Service of that company was initiated between Canada and the Far East twenty-five years ago. In the case of the naming of the "Empress of Russia" particular reference was made to the most remarkable of all Empresses, Catherine the Great, whose activities for the benefit of her country are paralleled only by the "spacious days of Queen Elizabeth." In appreciation of this courtesy on the part of the Canadian Pacific Railway, M. Malewsky, the Russian Ambassador at Tokio, has just presented a magnificent portrait of the great Catherine to be hung in the Lounge of the "Empress of Russia."

Such little friendly acts do more to promote friendly relations between two countries than anything else. Canada and Russia have many similarities, in their wheat-growing areas of prairie land, in their mineral wealth, in their mountain ranges, in their great lakes, and in their gigantic waterways. Russia has had longer time in which to develop her resources—indeed it is doubtful whether the Empress Catherine ever heard of the country of Canada. But she recognizes the spirit and enterprise of her younger sister, and with imperial courtesy offers the glad hand.

NAILS DROPPED ON THE ROADWAY

Automobile Association Complained to Police Department

It is stated that in tearing down the old Cox building, at the end of Simcoe Street, the carters in removing the material, which has been taken to the River Road, includes laths with nails in them. These were being dropped along the road indiscriminately and were a decided menace to the tires of passing cars. The Secretary of the Automobile Association notified Chief Thompson of what was going on and steps were taken to remedy the matter and prevent its recurrence. The result will be that in future the carters concerned must use care as to what material they fill up the roads with and that the motorists of the City will be safe from any tire damage from this source.

MISTAKEN IN THE MATTER OF MEDALS

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir.—I was much amused at reading a letter which appeared in last evening's Examiner by R. A. W. Hay, in which he differs with the statement made by the officers who presented me with a King George medal for long service, in which they stated that I was the first to receive one in Peterborough. Mr. Hay states that "late Farrier, W. Batten was the first one to be presented with the King George medal and it was presented by Sir Frederick Borden while on his visit here nearly five years ago." I had the privilege to-day of seeing the medal which was presented to the late W. Batten and it bore the image of King Edward VII, and not that of King George. Besides, King George was crowned only three years this coming June. I trust Mr. Hay will readily see the error of his statement, but should he still have any doubts in respect to the late Sergt. Batten's medal, I can assure you that the present owners will be only too pleased to have him inspect it.

Thanking you for your valuable space, I remain,

Yours truly,
Sergt. A. J. Warne.

Peterborough, April 23.

Note.—Sergeant Warne accompanies the above with a view of the two medals mentioned and they bear out in every particular the statement made in his communication.

TURNBULL'S

MR. CARLISLE CRITICIZES A SECOND ADVENT SERMON

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I want to thank you for publishing my letter in your widely-circulated paper, last Monday evening. I consider it a privilege to address eighteen or twenty thousand readers on a matter so important as "After Death, What?" In that letter I tried to show that "the faith once for all delivered to the saints" was not a belief in soul sleeping, or the spirit and body lying unconscious in death or the grave until the resurrection. I do not believe, Mr. Editor, that any one is called upon to defend the Bible. That Book can defend itself. But we are called upon to defend the faith, and to "contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints." Jude. Spurgeon was once asked if he could defend the Bible. "Defend it? I would as soon defend a lion. Let it out; it can defend itself; it is still quick and powerful"—Heb. 4:12.

Mr. Editor, my object in writing is to "let the Word of God out"; it can defend itself. The good seed is the Word of God. If people hear and believe that word rightly dividing it will save them from having their faith overthrown by unscriptural theories.

In your issue of April 20th you report a lecture on the second coming of Christ, delivered in our City in the Royal Theatre, by one Jos. Frappy of Stirling. In that address you report him as saying "referring to Christ's second coming." Following this, Adam and all his race, both the just and the unjust, will be awakened from the sleep of death, and be fully liberated from the curse," and he goes on to say that "Christ's second coming then is for the purpose of delivering mankind from death and the grave . . . and all who have died shall be restored to life again. What a grand reunion that will be. During the thousand-year Judgment Day of Christ's presence on the earth," etc. And to prove the truth of this universal resurrection for a second chance, Mr. Frappy quotes Scripture from Rev. 20:13. Now, Sir, Editor, I want to draw this gentleman's attention to the fact that he quoted a Scripture that records an event that took place after the thousand years had expired. Read Rev. 20-7:13, "And when the thousand years are expired, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison and shall go out to deceive the nations which were in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog . . . . and the devil which deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast and false prophet are — (Yes, and they had been there for one thousand years—Rev. 19:11) and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever. And I saw a great white throne and Him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God . . . . and the sea gave up the dead which were in it." Then comes the verse Mr. Frappy quoted: "and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them." Now, as this last sentence occurs nowhere else in the Scriptures, I want to ask Mr. Frappy does he consider that a fair way to handle the Word of God, to quote a Scripture to prove something that takes place at the beginning of the Millenium, that is written to tell us what occurs after the thousand years of millenium are expired?

In all courtesy I would ask Mr. Frappy is that "rightly dividing the Word of Truth?" Another Scripture our lecturer quotes to prove a general resurrection from the curse to blessedness, viz.: "All that are in their graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth." John 5:28. Let me ask Mr. Frappy, why did he stop there? Why not quote the full sentence which reads "And they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." My readers can guess why the balance of that Scripture was not quoted, and Mr. Frappy knew that if he had quoted the whole verse instead of a fraction of it that it would have knocked the bottom out of his theory of a blessed resurrection of the just and of the unjust at the beginning of the millenium. Those words of Christ, John 5:28, just quoted, prove the truth of another Scripture in Dan. 12:2, "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Solemn word, "some to shame and everlasting contempt," some to "the resurrection of damnation." Not much hope for Christ rejectors, who do evil and die in their sins. Not much hope of escape for those who neglect God's great salvation now. It is only those who are called "blessed and holy" who are raised before the Millenium. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with Him a thousand years." Rev. 20:6. "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished." Rev. 20:5. The gospel of the "second chance" for Christ's rejectors is a rope of sand. There is a way to keep out of Hell or Hades, but there is no way out for those who neglect salvation now and die in their sins. The only way of escape is Christ. He says "I am the way." Seek Him now.

The inspired apostle exclaims "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation." Heb. 2:3.

If he could not tell of any way of escape for those who neglect salvation and die in their sins. I am persuaded that neither Pastor Russell nor any of his followers have found a way of escape. "Behold now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation."—2 Cor. 6, 2.

Listen reader, this is what is going to happen when Christ comes the second time.

"Behold I come quickly, blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this Book . . . . and he said, seal not the prophecy of the sayings of this book; for the time is at hand. He that is unjust let him be unjust still; and he which is filthy let him be filthy still, and he that is holy, let him be holy still. And behold I come quickly and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22 7-12. And Christ says to every sinner to-day. "Behold I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door I will come in." Rev. 4:20.

It is well for those who are rejecting Christ to-day to remember that the latch is on their side of the door, and "if they still His call refuse and all his wondrous love abuse soon will He sadly from them turn. Their bitter prayer for pardon spurn." He says: ("Because I have called and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand and no man regarded. But ye have set at nought all my counsel and would none of my reproof; I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh; when your fear cometh as desolation and your destruction cometh as a whirlwind; when distress and anguish cometh upon you; then shall they call upon Me, but I will not answer; they shall seek me early, but they shall not find me. For that they hated knowledge—and did not choose the fear of the Lord. They would none of my counsel: they despised all my reproof. Therefore shall they eat of the fruit of their own way and be filled with their own devices. . . . But who so hearkeneth unto Me shall dwell safely and shall be quiet from fear of evil." — Pro. 1, 24, 33.

Yours truly,
John Carlisle.

P.S.—It is written of the Christ rejectors when He comes, they shall cry to the mountains and rocks saying "fall on us and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb."—Rev. 6:16. J. C.

MORE KILLED IN STRIKE AT LUDLOW

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LUDLOW, Col., April 24. — Fresh troops have been ordered out to the mines where fighting has been going on between the strikers and the police for many days. It is stated there were several more killed to-day. The situation is desperate and the entire National Guard of Colorado may be under arms to-morrow.

A CASE WHERE BLOOD COUNTS

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Could you let me know if a person's nationality depends upon the nationality of their parents, or their birth place. I became involved in an argument on the subject, and I should like very much to know the facts of the case. The argument was that if a child were born in China of English parents, would that child be English or Chinese.

Yours sincerely,
Wm. Stewart,
547 Sherbrooke Street.

Note.—Mr. Stewart's question does not seem to be properly put. Very evidently a "person's" nationality is an impossibility, since nationality is to be defined, as "the qualities that distinguish a nation; . . . . separate existence as a nation, national unity and integrity, etc." If the question is meant to be "of" what nationality a "person" born under the conditions stated would be there seems to be little ground for discussion. A child, however born, would be of the nationality to which its parents belonged. A child born of English, Irish, or Scotch parents would be, as to his physical and constitutional character, of the same blood, of the same race, of the same nationality as his parents. An English mother giving birth in China to a child by a Chinese father, would have borne a child as English as its parents. The fact of its being born in China would not make it a Chinese—except perhaps in the matter of citizenship—any more than the fact of a colt being foaled in a poultry yard would make it a chicken.

GALA DAY FOR THE FORD TO-MORROW

Impressive Demonstration, With Grand Parade and Banquet to owners of Ford Cars

As already announced Saturday is to be "Ford" day in Peterborough, when the first annual demonstration in this city of the Model T Ford car will be held.

From the Duffus Garage it is learned that everything is in readiness for a stirring day for Ford car owners in Peterborough. The parade on the streets by Ford car owners will be augmented by five car loads of new cars from the Canadian factory which have just arrived at the Duffus Garage, where prospects are swarming. Then there is the Model T. banquet at noon in the Oriental Hotel, for which the following menu is in preparation:

MENU
Cream of Tomatoe
Radishes Olives
Fillet of Sea Salmon
Pommes Orientel
Roast Spring Turkey
Cranberry Sauce
Mashed Potatoes French Peas
Fig Pudding Strawberry Tart
Ice Cream Neapolitan
Crackers Cheese Cafe Noir

With enthusiasm as his "spark plug," the local sales manager for the Ford starts a welcome to the friends of the Ford that will keep the Duffus Garage on "high-gear" for a record year.

Demanded Apology From John Seath

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Ont., April 24. — That Mr. John Seath, Superintendent of Education for Ontario will be called before the Bar of the Legislature and made to apologize for his criticism of the Liberal members of the house, notably Mr. Marshall, who commented upon the education administration of Ontario, was the demand made in the Legislature to-day. The Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, in making a reply, said that he declined to be mixed up in petty squabbles. A motion to make Dr. Pyne responsible for the statements of his subordinates was voted down on a straight party division. The resolution of Leader Rowell, condemning the government for not providing the Toronto University with sufficient funds to erect proper buildings was also lost on a party division.

ALDERMEN WITNESSED MUCH DISCUSSED PLUMBING TESTS

Mayor Buller, Ald. Duncan and Ald. Langford saw the smoke test that was used yesterday afternoon at two o'clock in connection with the plumbing of the National Hotel. It will be remembered that Plumbing Inspector Thompson has been on the mat several times for not demanding a smoke test in all cases. His preference for the water test made the demonstration yesterday all the more interesting. It turned out that while the smoke test showed there was some defect in the plumbing, the employment of the water test was necessary to locate the leak.

Mayor Buller to the Examiner to-day said that the smoke test was a thorough one and that he was convinced that it was of value in testing plumbing with which buildings had been equipped.

PERHAPS.

"Are you aware of the fact, Madame," he asked "that the Bible does not mention a single woman angel?"

"I suppose that is because things are arranged in heaven so that no woman has to be single."

"BUCK" FREEMAN TRIED AT FIRST YESTERDAY

New Saginaw Recruit Jumped Into Practice Game and Made Good Impression at the Corner--Two Games For the Week-end--Stirling is In Fine Condition.

Special to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 23.—The arrival of Big Bob Sterling at the training camp this afternoon completes what promises to be one of the best firing lines in the Canadian League this year. Right now, he is ready to go into a game. He has been playing handball during the winter months and as a result appears to be in grand shape. He has already pitched with several clubs in his home town before leaving for Youngstown and looks fit to start the season any time.

GIVING THEM ALL A CHANCE.

Manager Blount has not given a hint yet as to what he thinks of the recruits and is keeping his opinions pretty well under his hat. There is a slight exception in the fact that Byrne, Eddie Price and King are given a preference for the third, short-field and second-base positions. Blount keeps changing the others around frequently in order to bring out whatever stuff that is in them, That infield trio have not been shifted during the past few days. Blount is giving them every chance to work together, and they certainly have been showing class. At any rate they look like fixtures for the opening unless Curly uncovers something new.

A NEW FIRST BASEMAN.

The expected first-sacker blew in to-day in the person of Buck Freeman from Saginaw, Mich.. He donned a uniform and climbed into this afternoon's practice. From the first glimpse that was seen of his actions to-day he looks like a class performer, and may fill in the hole at the first corner.

PLAY SATURDAY AND SUNDAY.

Manager Blount has arranged a game for Saturday with the Gerard team, one of the fastest semi-pro nines in this State.

One of their pitchers is a promising youngster with a Connie Mack string on him. On Sunday the squad will meet the Pittsburg Independents if the weather is favourable, andthere is every indication that Old Sol has come out to stay. The week-end exhibition games should provide an excellent test of the Petes' present makeup.

HAVE BEEN WORKING HARD.

During the past week they have had a fair chance to get in considerable hard work, and Blount has kept them on the jump.. The first week's training was concluded to-day with a fourteen-inning practice, followed by a nice infield drill. All the pitchers took a turn on the mound this afternoon and hopped them across with more stuff than has been shown so far. From presentindications there does not seem to be much cause for worry from the battery department of the team. The one gap that must be plugged is right at first base. This new man Freeman may do,and by Monday Blount will have had a chance to get a good line on him. The outfield is going nicely. The candidates are getting every chance to come through, and the manager is taking his time before deciding whom he wants.

BELTING SOUGHT BONESETTER REESE—DIRECTED TO HORSE DOCTOR WHO GOT HIS COIN

The Boys Put One Over on Knut—The Old Telegram Game Was Worked on McClure—Some of the Sidelights of the Camp.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Special Wire to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 23. — The training facilities afforded here are good, and with fine weather the squad should show results. The boys dress at the Park club rooms which are equipped with lockers and shower baths. Owing to a break in the heating apparatus hot water has been off, but we have it sent away for repairs and it will be ready in a day or so. The park is situated about one and one-half miles from the hotel, and the players walk both ways, besides putting in about six hours' practice a day.

Weather Not the Best.

The weather has been very unfavourable so far and the boys show some sign of the usual soreness and stiffened muscles, but are not complaining, and are going at their work in the right spirit.

Curley does not drive any player, but firmly believes that the only way to get in proper shape is to get out there and hustle. He has 35 players working out. This includes several local boys who are paying their own expenses. They are mostly youngsters. Some are good fielders and fast, but all lack experience. I don't concede any of them a place on the team.

The axe will fall on a number of the boys this week and the squad cut down to about 20.

Belting and the Veterinary.

Several good jokes have been pulled. Knut Belting started out the other night to consult Bone-setter Reese about his arm which has been slow in coming around this spring. On the way he informed some person of his mission and they directed him to a veterinary surgeon, who taxed him the usual five spot for making a barber pole out of his arm with tape. He hasn't mentioned his arm since.

McClure Fell for Telegram.

McClure, the catcher, received a telegram the other night from J. M. Ward, of the Brooklyn Feds., asking him to name his own terms and report at once. He fell for it, and was flashing the telegram around when the bell-hop offered him his half-dollar back. He is just off the farm, and while he has size, hasn't the experience to make good, and will be let out. Naw, the outfielder, consulted Bone-setter Reese, who put the following questions to him. Does your arm hurt you when you are playing? He told him it did. The bone-setter then asked him if it hurt him when he wasn't playing, and he said it didn't. Reese then told him to quit playing. He quits to-morrow as Curley is letting him out.

Naw has been a fair ball player, but is slowing up now. Curley is averse to giving out any information as to the probable line-up, or on the team's chances this season until he has seen more of the players. That he is giving every player a fair chance is evidenced by the way he changes the men from day to day.

If practice will put the boys in shape they surely ought to be, as he sure does get them out.

Good Catchers.

The catching department will be strong with Miller, Ryberg and Kelly to pick from. Miller is a veteran and has been playing ball for the last eleven years, started with Mount Vernon, O. & P. League, next with Dallas in Texas League; later with Youngstown in Central and Interstate League. Has always fit well up and should be a good man in the Canadian League. Weight 185 lbs. Ryberg is lighter, about 165 lbs., is quick and very active. Has played ball around this State for the last 5 years. Kelly is younger, about 21, weight 165, fast and a good catcher; tried out last season with Erie, but had some old players to beat out and failed to make the team. Should be able to hold a position in the league.

Also the Pitchers.

The pitching end will be strong with Sterling, Tracey, Belting, Cresswell, Schettler and Tirrel to select from. All the old players are going good and the one to beat them out of a place should about lead the league. Schettler's past record alone should carry him for a time. Although he has been playing for the last 12 years, and in that time been in seven pennant winners, he still looks young, and is showing more life than most of the youngsters. Schettler is a born comedian, and never lets up from the minute he arrives at the dressing room until it is closed. Judging from the way he is cutting them loose, he will not require any past record to aid him in getting a place on the team. Lew has a reputation for work, having worked in as many as 44 games a season.

Schettler and Miller make up a Dutch battery and have a code of signals of their own. Tirrell, the Rochester boy, is young, and weighs 170 lbs. He appears to have all the qualifications of a pitcher and may be a hard man to keep off the team.

Lacrosse Sticks Will Be Here On Wednesday

The Peterborough Lacrosse Club has been held up during the past week by the inability to secure a supply of sticks. This morning Mr. Paul Trebilcock received word from the Lally Lacrosse Manufacturing Co. that the Peterborough order will be despatched on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week. Owing to the rush of orders, particularly from the west, the company has been unable to attend to them as soon as they wished. However, the sticks will be forthcoming next week and the seniors' good will receive first attention.

Need Support.

This delay in securing sticks has temporarily held up the progress of the newly organized local club, but with the first signs of the game it is expected that the latent enthusiasm will burst forth. The club will not require a large sum of money this year, but it will certainly need considerably more than has been received. Owing to appeals to the citizens for the support of other branches of sport the lacrosse fans have been diffident about approaching those who desire to foster good clean athletics in Peterborough. Still, if lacrosse is to be properly rejuvenated the club must have the support of the old lovers of the game. Membership tickets for the club have been printed and can be secured from executive members at $1.00 each.

The Game Is Taking.

An illustration of what is going to be done here this summer is illustrated by what Mr. George Robertson has been doing with a dozen of the boys who congregate in a field on Wolfe street. They had been playing baseball but Mr. Robertson collected eight sticks and introduced them to the boys. The result was that they practically forsook baseball and some of them will have a good working knowledge of the game when the main supply arrives in a short time.

Stirling Worked This Morning In Old Time Style

Examiner Special:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 24.—The feature of this morning's practice was the work of Bob Sterling, who went into the box for a while. It was a pleasure to see the big fellow going the way he went to-day. The weather was warm, encouraging the bunch to let loose with some of the fast stuff. Manager Blount let McClure and Dawson go this morning. Both these boys show promise, but they have not had sufficient experience. The squad is looking forward to Saturday afternoon's game for a good workout.

OTTAWA CLAIM A FAST INFIELD

CHATHAM, Ont., April 23.—Yesterday Manager Shaughnessy had Dolan, Smkal, Spicer and Teach working out in the infield, and this quartette looked mighty good. Spicer is as fast as chain lightning, and covers all kinds of ground. He looks a certainty for the shortstop position. Cozy Dolan hasn't worked down to it yet, but is rounding nicely into shape. Teach alternated with "Dusty" Bullock at third, and the latter will have to do some tall hustling to hang on to his position. Bullock's batting may give him the job over the new man. Spicer is not only a fast fielder, but he has showed up well with the stick, which counts for a whole lot these days. If Smykal can develop his hitting, it looks as though the infield will be Dolan 1st base, Smykal 2nd base, Bullock 3rd base, Spicer shortstop, and Teach utility.

WALTER JOHNSON DEFEATED BY A NEW JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Before a big opening day crowd, the American League baseball season for Washington was ushered in to-day, the Boston Red Sox defeating the Nationals, with Walter Johnson, pitching, 5 to 0. Rankin Johnson, Boston's recruit twirler, was invincible, allowing six scattered hits. Owing to the absence of President Wilson, Speaker Champ Clark tossed out the first ball.

Cleveland Wins at Last.

CLEVELAND, April 23.—Cleveland, after losing eight straight games, finally won to-day when Mitchell held Chicago to six scattered hits, and Cleveland found Cicotte for ten safe drives, some of them for extra bases. The score was 4 to 1. Outside of Mitchell's pitching, the playing of Wood, a recruit in right field for Cleveland, was the feature of the game. His single and triple both counted in the run getting, and hem ade several fine catches.

Another for Chance.

PHILADELPHIA, April 23. — A triple by Sweeney with the bases filled in the eighth inning decided the opening game of the championship season here in favour of New York, the final score being 3 to 2. Only one hit was made off Bush in the first seven innings, but in the eighth a pass to Walsh was followed by singles by Caldwell, Holden and Truesdale and Sweeney's triple, four runners scoring. Bush gave nine bases on balls.

BASEBALL

"Chubby" Cozos has gone back to Brantford. Traded to London for "Rube" Deneau, then traded to Saginaw for Snyder by the London club, then released by Saginaw and sent to Dayton, then back to Brantford—that has been his experience since he first left the Brantford Club. Cozos has had two good seasons in the Canadian League. He should prove a good man for Deneau this year.

Drawn Between Pulley And Belt

Special to The Examiner:

LISTOWEL, Ont., April 24.—Adam Reidt, a widower, 44 years of age, well known and an esteemed farmer of Wallace, while alone in his barn yesterday afternoon operating a 12 h.-p. gasoline engine, was drawn between the pulley and belt. This morning a neighbour was astounded to find his badly mangled body wound around the pulley. It is thought that Reidt had finished chopping and in attempting to throw off the belt with an arm was drawn in. The aged parents of the deceased, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Reidt, reside in Howick. Three brothers and six sisters also survive.

Annual Meeting Of The 57th Regt. Band

Officers Were Elected and a Number of New Members Voted Into Organization

The annual meeting of the 57th Battalion Band was held in the Band Room on Simcoe Street last night. Various reports were presented and were decidedly satisfactory to all, showing the band to be in splendid financial condition. Other business of importance brought out in the reports were discussed and a review of the past year showed that the band has had a very successful season indeed. The officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows:

President—Mr. F. C. Miller.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. Geo. Clark.
Secretary—Mr. Geo. Chambers.
Treasurer—Mr. E. Shelton.
Committee—Messrs. E. Cronk, Angus McPherson, Chas. Westbrook, Ernest Gibson, Geo. Grange, R. Heidermann and B. Pond.

A number of promising musicians who applied for membership were voted into the band. Prospects for the coming season were discussed and everything appeared rosy to those present last night as far as the future of th band is concerned.

C. P. R. HIT NEW LOW AT 188 1-2

The New York market reflected the uncertainty that is prevalent as the result of the Mexican situation. C.P.R. took the lead in the declines and continued the weakness it has during the past three or four days. It struck a new low level at 188½. Mexican Petroleum appeared to be the one sure thing at the commencement of the present week when it registered around 64. To-day it was back to 55½. There was very little support to-day and the bears were practically in complete control.

Two Hundred Automobiles In Peterboro

There are in the neighbourhood of two hundred automobiles in this City and unfilled orders will swell the number to some extent before the season is over. This is a ratio of one auto to every one hundred people in the City, or one motor car to every twenty families. It is safe to assume that few cities in the East or West, either larger or smaller, can produce a record showing a larger proportion of autos to the population than this City. As the auto is an expensive vehicle, whether used for business or pleasure, it would seem that Peterborough citizens have fared well as far as prosperity is concerned. Mr. G. K. Rackham, who issues the licenses for this City has issued 170 this season. Of these seventy have been taken out during the past couple of weeks, since the roads have dried up and the country thoroughfares become fit for motoring. Some of the local auto owners took out their licenses in Toronto and others who do not reside here have bought their licenses through Mr. Rackham. As a whole, however, the local motorists have found it a very great convenience to be able to get their licenses in town.

Warsaw Football Team Re-organize

A reorganization meeting of the Warsaw Football Club was held on Saturday evening, April 18th, with a good attendance.

The team is under the management of Wm. Bell and J. Cudland for the coming season, and although defeated last year by a Toronto referee, will endeavour to win the trophy by clean sportsmanlike play, as the Warsaw eleven are always on the square and follow the old motto, "Equal rights to all, special privileges to none."

Stock Markets

A. E. Ames & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-morrow will probably see some further tendency of an irregular character. A bullish position for a moderate recovery is now being taken in many parts of the street. Speculative quarters continue to express the belief that the market is developing into a trading status and will be irregular for a time. The undertone of a majority of the leaders show there is a disposition to avoid developments and then size up the wisdom of buying aggressively. It is conceded in most of the large commission houses that the list is oversold.

There is a great deal of discrimination in buying. It is suggested that N.Y.C., New Haven, Baltimore and Ohio have held well, and they are reported to contain large shortage.

Reading, Union Pacific and Illinois Central are favourites with conservative interests.

U. S. is now being suggested as a better buy than a sale on the ground that it has held its reaction.

Among specialties Can. and Westinghouse are being well recommended by large houses.

C.P.R. is the best purchase on the list at present level.

Erie is the best buy of the low priced stocks.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

The Hamilton Canadian League team will be known as the Hamilton Athletics. This was decided upon at a meeting of the Club directors held yesterday, the directors feeling that the club and fans could not do better than call the team after the world champions, especially in view of the interest that had been and is being taken in the local club by Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics. Thus the old Kelts pass into the ash heap, along with a lot of unpleasant recollections, and the Athletics arise to give Hamilton one real interesting year in baseball.

Operated On the Knife.

MONTREAL, April 25—Death was approaching a nineteen-year-old boy on Thursday night when the surgeon penetrated to his heart in an almost unprecedented operation and saved his life. As the boy, Bruce Moffatt, of 240 Dobbie street, felt his strength returning he spoke up from the operating table, saying: "I'm feeling good."

He is now lying at the hospital with a tube attached to his heart and there is every hope that the operation will have done away for ever with the pericarditis, or heart strangulation, from which he suffered.

RHEUMATISM AND BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Prof. Ruffner Has Quickly Relieved of Both Afflictions by Using Rheuma

If you suffer from any form of Rheumatism, remember that RHEUMA goes to work quickly to remove the cause, not simply to relieve the distress. Many years' use has demonstrated that it goes to the seat of the disease and expels the poisonous matter through the natural channels—the kidneys, bowels, liver, and skin. "For many years I was troubled with Rheumatism, also with Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I suffered untold. Tried many advertised remedies. After using your truly remarkable preparation, RHEUMA, I was fully cured."—Prof. C. J. Ruffner, Sound View, Conn.

RHEUMA is guaranteed by Warne Drug Co., who sell it for 50 cents a bottle.

Many U.S. Officials See Hope in Villa's Friendliness

FIRING AT LAREDO, TEXAS

WASHINGTON, April 25. — While the attention of the American Government, for the most part yesterday was concentrating on restoring order at Vera Cruz and expediting the departure of Americans from all parts of Mexico, a watchful eye was trained on the transcontinental boundary between Mexico and United States for any signs of hostilities from the Mexican Constitutionalists.

President Wilson and his Cabinet had a long meeting, after which optimism was conspicuously apparent both in their demeanor and in informal discussion of the situation.

There was no particular development to which feelings of hopefulness that the real war would be averted could be traced, but General Villa's friendly pronouncement, it was admitted, had impressed many officials here with the possibility that the Constitutionalists after all would remain neutral while the American Government sought reparation from Huerta.

Other officials were not so sanguine, and the army moved with precision and swiftness to protect the American boundary and reinforce the expeditionary force of marines and bluejackets at Vera Cruz.

Conferences at the State Department between Secretary Bryan and representatives of the Mexican Constitutionalists resulted in the despatch to Gen. Carranza of a telegram by the latter, strongly advising him to remain neutral, and assuring him that the American Government intended to withdraw its forces from Mexico just as soon as satisfactory reparation had been made for offences committed by Huerta. The advice given Carranza here was that by assuming a hostile attitude he would draw all Mexico into a war, Huerta would be perpetuated and the Constitutionalist cause lost in the melee.

Signs of uneasiness abroad because the United States, though not having declared a blockade or a state of war, is exercising jurisdiction at Vera Cruz between measures "short of war" and actual war, began to be apparent yesterday. Cabinet officials said no attempt would be made to interfere with the regular channels of commerce anywhere, cargoes being allowed to land at all ports. Munitions of war alone will be held at Vera Cruz if Huerta, sympathetic and other contraband supplies not being detained.

The sporadic outbreak at Nuevo Laredo, Mex., where the evacuating Federals burned the town and fled across the American border was not unexpected, but it was significantly pointed out by officials here that the American troops returned the fire merely in defence of the international line and did not become the aggressors. Both the military and naval forces are operating under this principle, defending themselves from attack, but taking no offensive move without instructions from Washington.

Congress still talked about Mexico. Senator Lodge read a long telegram from many prominent persons urging an enquiry into the Mexican situation before war was declared. Representative Fitzgerald, chairman of the House committee on appropriations, asked the President if he wanted "any war appropriations," and Mr. Wilson said "not as yet."

Secretary Garrison is practically without funds for the particular movements of the army now being made, but is drawing on the future. It is a violation of law for the War Department to incur any obligation without authorization by Congress, but Mr. Garrison smilingly said he had "floated loft" several times in the last few days on this account. Leaders in Congress have assured him they would back him up in the present emergency. The President has hesitated to approve any request for an emergency appropriation by the War Department for fear it might be interpreted as a favorable act of war.

Mr. Wilson will affix his signature probably to-day to the volunteer army bill, providing the machinery for raising a volunteer army force in any time of emergency. The possibility that the militia might be needed at this time led to an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States for decision of a pending case to remove legal obstacles in the use of the militia for volunteer service. Estimates by army officers as to the number of men the President might call for in case of war range from fifty to one hundred thousand, but not a syllable has come from the White House as to this point.

Government Aeroplanes Killed.

WASHINGTON, April 25. — The first official list of American casualties at Vera Cruz was issued to the Navy Department last night by Rear Admiral Fletcher. It placed the dead at 126 and the wounded at 195.

The American casualties are given as 17 killed and 55 wounded.

Japs Sympathize With Huerta.

MEXICO CITY, April 25.—The Japanese Legation here are making great demonstrations with flags and lanterns. They showed before the Foreign Office yesterday, and the Foreign Minister appeared on a balcony and addressed them upon the close union between Mexico and Japan.

Government Redeems Pledge to Farmers' Bank Victims

SUM NOT OVER $4,200,000

OTTAWA, April 25. — Depositors in the Farmers' Bank who lost their money are going to have it refunded by the Government. Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, has given notice that he will move the following resolution:

"Resolved, that it is expedient to provide that there may be paid out of the consolidated revenue fund of Canada a sum not exceeding $1,200,000, to be paid to persons who were creditors for money on deposit in the Farmers' Bank of Canada, the respective amounts standing to their credit in the books of the bank when the bank suspended payment."

The House spent the greater part of the day in committee of supply, steamship subsidies being under consideration.

The high rates charged by the North Atlantic combine were again brought to the Government by Dr. Steele (South Perth) and other Ontario Conservatives. Mr. Burnham (Peterboro) said that the regulation of ocean freight rates might be a difficult problem for the Government to grapple with, but if the Government were unable to cope with it they should stand aside and let some other Government take the job.

When the House got into committee of the whole on the estimates of the Trade and Commerce Department, Mr. Foster was asked as to applications for subsidies by steamship lines about to engage in the coastal service of Canada via the Panama Canal.

The Minister said in reply that many such applications had been received, but none had been taken up. Possibly some assistance would be given to a line from Liverpool to Vancouver, stopping at Halifax.

Dr. Steele (Perth) declared that the present rates charged by the North Atlantic combine were most discouraging to agriculture. The Government should at once notify the combine that it would no longer tolerate the extortionate rates. No doubt it would be a hard matter to control the rates, as so many foreign boats were doing business on the North Atlantic.

Mr. Foster pointed out that if the companies refused to reduce rates, all the Government had to do was to cut off their subsidies and they would quickly accede to the demands of the country.

Mr. Murphy (North Perth) drew the attention of the committee to the fact that Canada had endeavored to increase her trade with Newfoundland. He believed that colony could use much of our food product. He also advocated taking Newfoundland into confederation, and said that the Government should make overtures to the Newfoundland authorities with a view to bringing it about.

Lady Girouard Gets Divorce.

LONDON, April 25.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—In the divorce division yesterday, the undefended petition of Lady Girouard against her husband, Sir Edward Percy Girouard, for restitution of conjugal rights, was granted.

Sir Percy is a Montrealer, who achieved fame in military and railway engineering in Nigeria and East Africa. He has also considerable campaign record. His wife is a daughter of the late Sir Richard Tobmann, and they were married in 1901.

Yesterday's court procedure is a preliminary to a decree of divorce.

Premier's Straight Denial.

ST. JOHN, N.B., April 25. — In a statement to The Standard (Conservative) Premier Flemming says in regard to the Dugal charges in the Legislature:

"I do not fear an investigation, for I have never received one dollar nor the equivalent of a dollar, directly or indirectly from any bank holder in the Province of New Brunswick since I have been Minister of Lands and Mines."

CANAL ON WAR FOOTING.

Governor Goethals Takes Step Because of Mexican Sentiment.

PANAMA, April 25.—Col. Geo. W. Goethals, Governor of Panama Canal zone, yesterday issued orders placing the canal zone on a strictly war footing. He instructed Major Garlarett, commanding the 19th Infantry, to send two companies of infantry to patrol the Gatun locks, and one each for duty at the Miraflores and Pedro Miguel locks. The soldiers were given 100 rounds of ammunition each, and will camp near the locks.

The operating machinery of all the locks will be securely locked and the keys placed in the possession of Col. Goethals.

It is understood that coast artillery companies will be distributed among the fortifications on Flamenco and Culebra Islands, at the Pacific end of the canal, and also at Toro Point and other forts at the Atlantic end.

The action of Col. Goethals is believed to have been the result of anti-American sentiment contained in the fly sheets, which were making their appearance in the streets of Panama, and also expressed editorially in El Diario, which is strongly pro-Mexican.

FINANCES CRITICIZED

University Gets Too Little; Government House Too Much

AMENDMENTS DEFEATED

TORONTO, April 25. — On the second reading of a bill to sanction the Government's appropriations in the Legislature yesterday the Opposition renewed its criticism of the finances of the province.

Liberal Whip Bowman said the sum of the estimates along with the statutory payments of last year would involve an expenditure of $22,-000,000. Allowing for the cash balance of $2,320,000 carried over from last year and the balance available on the New Ontario loan, which, with the new loan of $8,000,000 authorized, along with the estimated receipts, would leave a shortage of three or three and one-half million dollars. The Government would soon face direct taxation.

Hon. Mr. Lucas replied that during the year ordinary revenue would exceed ordinary current expenditure and a surplus would be found at the end. The Government would never fear to go into public money markets for borrowing purposes. No class of people was suffering an undue burden and the masses were getting off lightly.

The finances of the Provincial University formed the subject of an amendment by Mr. Rowell when the education estimates were being considered. It expressed regret that the Government had failed to present proposals for the aid of the university.

Mr. Lucas replied that the grants to the University for the year would approximate $400,000 and the amendment was defeated.

An amendment offered by Mr. Sinclair, opposing the expenditure of $100,000 on Government House was also defeated.

John Seath, Superintendent of Education, recently published a letter that contained references to W. E. N. Sinclair, M.P.P., and as a result Mr. Sinclair asked in the House yesterday that either Dr. Seath be reprimanded by Hon. Dr. Pyne or called before the Bar of the House and dismissed.

Dr. James McQueen moved that the House "protest against this unfair and unfounded attack by the Superintendent of Education upon one of the honorable members of this House in respect to his legitimate work as a member," and "that this House must hold the Minister of Education responsible for this breach of the privileges of the members of the House."

Dr. Pyne, in reply, said that he would not help to air old grudges in the House. He believed Mr. Sinclair should be censured for using his position to attack a man who could not answer him.

The Liberal motion lost.

The Sudbury district is asking the Ontario Government to extend the T. & N. O. line from Elk Lake to Sudbury via Gowganda if engineers approve the feasibility of such a project. A large deputation yesterday, led by Charles McCrea, M.P.P., of Sudbury, and supported by prominent Sudbury men, waited on the Cabinet and urged the extension of a necessity to the growing north. Shipments of a thousand tons of ore per day and a flourishing pulp wood business were some of the business the line would handle.

Hon. Mr. Hearst said that the matter was under investigation, but Government resources being limited, they could not promise to build the road, but if the reports justified it $375,-000 would be placed to the building account this year.

BLAMES ANOTHER MAN.

Hans Schmidt Writes To Officials Denying Murder.

NEW YORK, April 25. — District Attorney Whitman yesterday received a letter from Hans Schmidt, the former priest, awaiting execution for the murder of Anna Annuller, in which Schmidt charges another man with the crime. He declares that the Annuller girl died as the result of a criminal operation performed by a man he named. He admitted that he had himself disposed of the body, and also admitted that he had shammed insanity during his trial.

Mr. Whitman said Schmidt also had written to Governor Glynn, begging that his sentence of death be commuted to life imprisonment. The district attorney, it is understood, placed little credence in Schmidt's new story.

Death of L. J. Cassalt.

MONTREAL, April 25.—The death occurred Thursday evening at St. Theoms de Montmagny of Mr. Louis Joseph Cassalt, who was long and well known to the Parliamentarians of Canada, as for many years an assistant librarian at the Parliament Buildings. Mr. Cassalt was a relative of the late Sir Napoleon Casault and the Very Rev. L. J. Cassalt, the founder of Laval University.

Emperor's Condition Unchanged.

VIENNA, April 25.—There was no appreciable change in the condition of Emperor Francis Joseph yesterday, according to the bulletin of the physicians issued last night. The bulletin said:

"The condition of the Emperor shows no appreciable change. His strength, heart action, and appetite are quite satisfactory."

STRIKE WAR ENDS.

Truce Called In Colorado After Sixty Lives Are Lost.

DENVER, Colo., April 25.—At the end of the most dramatic but probably the least bloody day of the five-day industrial war in Colorado, a truce was declared last night which may temporarily check the atrocities in the southern Colorado coal fields, which have startled the world for the very magnitude of their horrors.

The events of the week have paralyzed the State of Colorado. The cost in lives is not under 60; the property loss exceeds the $1,000,000 mark. Business of every kind is at a standstill.

The truce was formed late yesterday in Denver. When it was arranged the state militia was marching upon Aguilar, where the strikers were lined up more than one thousand strong to meet their attack.

Acting Governor Fitzgerald and Horace Hawkins, attorney for the miners, made the agreement. The state promises that the soldiers will not fire unless they are fired upon. Hawkins has communicated with the strike leaders at Aguilar, Walsenburg, Trinidad and Ludlow asking that they respect the agreement for a cessation of hostilities for two days.

Whether these steps taken at so late an hour will avail is doubtful. The miners, lined up to avenge what they term the "massacre of their women and children" at Ludlow by the militia, are sullen and defiant. And almost to a man the people of the state of Colorado sympathize strongly with them.

If the truce holds there will be no firing to-night. If the strikers ignore it or if the soldiers violate it no one can estimate what the result will be.

Gives $100,000 for Sport.

PARIS, April 25.—Basil Zaharoff, principal proprietor of the newspaper Excelsior, yesterday gave $100,000 to the French National Committee on Sports to cover the expense of training athletes to compete as representatives of France at the Olympic games to be held in Berlin in 1916.

Measuring Light Speed.

Even in this speed mad age we can never hope to equal the speed of light, which the scientists tell us is 186,000 miles a second. If light could not actually be measured no one would believe it.

There is a delicate instrument used in measuring light which throws a beam of light upon a revolving disk. There was some doubt about the figures obtained in this way until it was found that when the earth was in the part of its orbit nearest to Jupiter eclipses took place sixteen minutes earlier than when it was in the farthest part, whereas by all rules of astronomy they should have taken place at the same minute each time. It is deduced from this that the light was not instantaneous and consequently took sixteen minutes to traverse the diameter of the earth's orbit, a distance of about 200,000,000 miles, thus giving to light a velocity of 186,000 miles a second, which was accurately shown later by other experiments.—Exchange.

The Taste For Salt.

Concerning the African craving for salt, Livingstone gives interesting testimony. Only the rich among Bakwanis could afford to buy it, and the poor suffered from indigestion for lack of it. Native doctors accordingly made salt a usual ingredient of their medicine, and Livingstone successfully gave sufferers teaspoonfuls of neat salt. But now comes a notable point. "Either milk or meat had the same effect, though not so rapidly, as salt. Long afterward, when I was myself deprived of salt for four months at two distinct periods, I felt no desire for that condiment, but I was plagued by very great longing for the above articles of food. This continued as long as I was confined to an exclusively vegetable diet, and when I procured a meal of flesh, though boiled in perfectly fresh rain water, it tasted as pleasantly saltish as if slightly impregnated with that condiment."—London Standard.

Gear of Art Theft.

There is a picture at Hampton court which bears witness to a theft that may be termed patriotic. This is Holbein's "Field of the Cloth of Gold," which after the downfall of Charles I. Cromwell proposed to sell. But when the would be purchaser came to inspect it he discovered that the head of Henry VIII. had been cut from the canvas. He refused to buy the picture, and it was preserved to the nation. At the restoration a nobleman confessed to having committed the crime for "love of art and country." He returned the missing head, which now occupies its original position, the circle made by the knife in the canvas being still plainly visible. — London Chronicle.

A Regiment of Wrestlers.

Captain Holmes, a famous athlete in the Indian army, raised one of the finest regiments in the British service by the sporting method of challenging all and sundry to wrestle. Those wounted were to enlist, and in a short time the gallant captains was able to show a collection of wrestling prizes that were a credit alike to himself and the army.—London Opinion.

THE BABY DID IT

By EUNICE BLAKE

We live on the brink of ruin all the while without realizing it. I have read often of persons dying of starvation who had been very prominent and upon whom money had dowed like water. I can especially remember actors and actresses who have furnished such examples. But let a person find himself without money and without friends and he realizes the condition he is in. Few there are who keep their heads at such times.

Tom Williams was one of these last named persons. His father died insolvent when he was ready to enter college. Nevertheless Tom went to college. Where he was to get the money from to pay his way he hadn't the faintest idea. His pluck attracted attention and interested others in him. He was full of resource and could invent ways to get out of holes. Often he would not know where a meal was coming from, but after being graduated he could not remember his having gone hungry for any considerable time.

Having finished his college course, he concluded that a trip to Europe was in order. He had taken a prize during his last year, and with this he bought a ticket on a steamer to Naples. He walked over Switzerland and Italy and one day found himself in Genoa ready to go home, but having not a cent with which to pay his passage. A steamer was to sail that afternoon, and Tom strolled aboard of her. Besides the passengers who were booked to go over, there were persons aboard to bid them goodby. Tom envied every person he saw coming aboard carrying hand baggage.

He was standing on an upper deck on which opened windows of staterooms. Hearing a baby cry behind him, he turned and saw a woman endeavoring to soothe the child. She was a delicate looking young mother, and the child seemed to trouble her. Tom smiled at the baby, and it stopped crying.

"Let me take your baby," said Tom to the lady. "I'll walk with it on the deck. I'm fond of children."

The lady assented, and Tom, taking the child, left her, sauntering about, letting the child look at the crowds on the dock and otherwise amusing him. He heard the "All ashore that's going!" but paid no attention to it. The ship moved out into the bay, and still Tom walked the baby. When the open sea was reached he took the baby back to its mother. The child seemed to be in a very good humor. The mother expressed her gratitude.

"I must go over without a nurse," she said, "and I don't know what I shall do. My nurse left me on the eve of sailing, and I had no time to get another. I am usually seasick, and a seasick person is powerless to take care of a baby."

"Madam," replied Tom, "I am at your service. I have been making a pedestrian tour of Europe. I came to Genoa to take a steamer home, but ran out of funds. I came aboard this ship just to see how it would feel to be on a vessel bound for home. I was about to go ashore when I heard your baby cry. When those who were to go ashore were directed to do so I was amusing your child and had not the heart to obey the order. I presume I shall have to work my passage as a steward or, probably worse, as a stoker. I would much rather take a situation with you as nurse."

There was something so amusing in this stalwart fellow, who had played football while in college, strapped on an ocean liner and ready to hire himself to take care of a baby that the lady laughed. But she snapped at the proposition.

"I'll pay your passage and double nurse's wages," she said.

"The passage money will do," Tom replied.

The lady sent for the purser and was fortunate enough to secure a whole stateroom for Tom and the baby when it was necessary that he should have it with him. No sooner had all been arranged than the ship began to roll. The lady became seasick, and if ever there was gratitude to Providence from a woman she experienced it at being relieved of the care of her child.

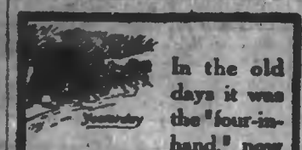
The passage was a rough one, and Tom kept the baby with him day and night. A few days before reaching the American shore the weather moderated, and the mother went on deck.

She was so grateful to Tom for what he had done and appreciative of what he had endured that she paid a stewardess to relieve him occasionally when off duty. This enabled him to sit on deck with his employer, and he learned something about her. She was a well to do widow about Tom's age.

And Tom told her all about himself—how he had got through college, how he had made a tour in Europe and how he now proposed to go to work. She asked him if he were not going to get a profession in the same way, but he said he was tired of running on down to the wind and was going to work.

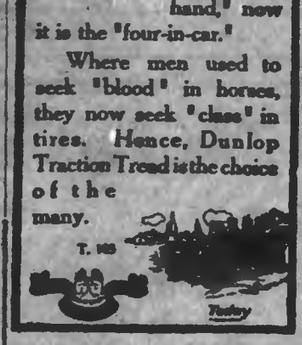
However, the widow asked him to call upon her after they reached port, and Tom accepted the invitation. He had not known her long before she proposed to furnish him with the means to study law. This offer, of course, Tom rejected with thanks, whereupon the widow told him that she wished him for a husband and preferred that he should be a lawyer.

Tom studied law, making his way while doing so, and married the widow. He now has a large practice.



In the old days it was the "four-in-hand," now it is the "four-in-car."

Where men used to seek "blood" in horses, they now seek "class" in tires. Hence, Dunlop Traction Tread is the choice of the many.



English Greetings.

Erasmus, coming to England in Henry VIII.'s time, was struck with the deep heartiness of our wishes—good, aye, and bad, too, but he most admired the good ones. Other nations ask in their greetings how a man carried himself, or how doth he stand with the world, or how doth he find himself. But the English greet with a pious wish that God may give one a good morning or a good evening, good day or "god'e'en," as the old writers have it, and when we part we wish that "God may be with you," though we now clip it into "Goodby."—Falswell.

His Foolish Father.

"I suppose you keep hard at work these days?"

"No. I'm not doing anything just now."

"I thought your father had given you a position in his bank?"

"He did. But he wanted me to earn my salary."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Polish.

"You have a bright look, my boy," said the visitor at the school.

"Yes, sir," replied the candid youth. "That's because I forgot to rinse the soap off my face good."

Giving Her Away.

"Uncle, we want you to give the bride away."

"Very well. I'll announce to the gathered assembly that she's thirty-two."—Boston Transcript.

The Double Chin.

To reduce a double chin both hands must be used at the same time, beginning at the point of the chin and rubbing up hard toward either ear. Dip your fingers in a massage cream before beginning the exercise, and let the movements be vigorous, so that the fat will really be worn away by friction. The chin should be massaged for at least 10 minutes each day.

A DARING PATRIOT

Feats of a Little Known Hero of Revolutionary Times.

JACK JOWETT'S BRAVE RACE.

It Saved Jefferson and the Virginia Assembly From Capture by Tarleton's Dragoons and Gave General Washington Valuable Information.

Most of the Revolutionary heroes have been immortalized in song or story, but there is one whose fame has never spread, as it should, beyond the region of his birth. His name was Jack Jowett. In the little city of Charlottesville, Va., there is a tablet on the building that stands on the site of his old tavern. But that simple bronze is the only memorial of his name and deeds.

In Revolutionary days young Jack Jowett kept the Swan tavern in Charlottesville. He was a patriot at a time when patriotism was dangerous, for Cornwallis was in possession of tidewater Virginia, and Tarleton and his cavalry were sweeping back and forth over the inland counties.

In June, 1781, the Virginia assembly abandoned Richmond, which Cornwallis threatened, and came to sit in Charlottesville. Among its members were such men as Patrick Henry, Richard Henry Lee and Benjamin Harrison, and the governor was no other than Thomas Jefferson. One bright morning when the state assembly was in session Jack mounted his thoroughbred mare and rode out to look over his farm outside the town. As he rode along he caught through the trees a glimpse of a British uniform flashing down a crossroad. He put his horse over the low stone wall and confronted the rider. It was one of Tarleton's troopers.

With a big pistol pointed at his head, the Englishman thought it wise to obey Jack's command to turn in at the gate of a nearby house and change clothing with him. Under threat of death the soldier divulged the fact that Tarleton was in the vicinity. Jowett at once galloped away in search of the enemy. The day passed without result, and Jack stopped at an inn to take a few hours' rest.

In the night he heard the tramp of horses and, looking out of his window, saw that the yard was full of British soldiers, led by Tarleton himself. The troopers entered the tavern and sat down to drink and talk, quite unconscious that an enemy was on the stair above listening to every word. From their conversation Jowett learned that Tarleton commanded an advance guard that was halting to wait for the rest of the troop. Then they planned to dash on to Charlottesville and capture the Virginia assembly.

Jack Jowett sat out at once in the cool of the dawn. Once he was chased by some troopers who trotted in from the pike that crossed his path, but his bay mare soon outpaced theirs. Like the wind he raced through lanes, over low stone fences, up the side of the hill to beautiful Monticello, the home of Governor Jefferson. He warned Jefferson of the approach of the British, and then, with a fresh horse, he dashed down the steep mountain road into Charlottesville. Rushing into the hall where the assembly was in session, he called to the members to flee, for Tarleton's dragoons would soon be at their heels. In a few moments the hall was empty, and the members were on their way across the mountains to Staunton, where they would be safe from pursuit.

Jack rode on to his tavern, but found there a wounded officer of the Continental army—General Stevens. He dressed the sick man in a suit of his own clothes, carried him downstairs and put him on the fresh horse, with bags of corn in front and behind—the very picture of an old farmer going to the mill. Side by side Jowett and Stevens rode out of town, which by 10 o'clock was in the possession of Tarleton's men. Pausing as he reached the top of a hill, Jack saw his own tavern in flames.

The British, who had reason to suspect the young man in a uniform, set out in chase of him, but Jack's horse was again too speedy for them, and he got safely away to Washington with the news that Tarleton was no longer acting in support of Cornwallis—a bit of information that was of the greatest value to the commander of the Continental army.

To Jack Jowett's quick wit and daring the author of the Declaration of Independence and many another hardly less famous patriot owed their liberty and perhaps their escape from a traitor's death upon the scaffold.—Youth's Companion.

Search In France.

Twenty years ago a clean shaved Frenchman was pretty sure to be set down by his compatriots as either a priest or an actor. Nowadays smooth faces are favored by the younger generation of Frenchmen partly as a result of the growing cult of athletics. It appears, however, from a portrait published in Le Journal that not a single member of the new cabinet is clean shaved, and four out of the twelve wear full beards and mustaches.

A Little Inconsistent.

She was a British militant suffragist who, after an eight months' absence, turned up in a state of indignation against the British postoffice. The postmaster general, she complained, had been obstructing suffragettes' correspondence from the past! Some of them hadn't received their notices duly. "Abominable!" The consultant had just "done time" for setting fire to letter boxes and destroying the mail bags.

A Marshal's Retort.

It is on record that the Prince of Orange, filled with rage because he had been beaten at Fleurus, Leuze, Steinkerque and Nerwinde, alluding to the Marshal of Luxembourg:

"Can it be that I shall never beat that hunchback?"

"How does he know that I am a hunchback?" said the French marshal. "He never saw my back; I always saw his."

Misgivings.

LEARNING TO FLY.

It Is Not Difficult if Care and Good Judgment Are Used.

All the men who have now learned to fly are not, it is obvious, endowed specially by nature for their task—are not men with some rare gift which enables them alone to navigate the air. Flying, in a word, is not difficult. If a pupil is carefully taught and accomplishes at first only in calm weather, he finds the piloting of an aeroplane a matter of surprising ease. All a man needs should he wish to fly are ordinary activity and generally sound nerves, but it will facilitate his progress if in addition he has sound judgment, a certain amount of patience and an eye for distance and speed.

To the equipment of a superlatively fine pilot there go other qualities naturally, such as an abnormal delicacy of movement and sense of contact with his hands. But we are concerned for the moment with air men of an ordinary competent type, which is all the average pupil can aspire to become. That glamor and mystery which in the early days clung to the piloting of an aeroplane has now been completely dispelled, and it is recognized that, under fair weather conditions, a well built machine requires little control. What it does, it may also be said, is to fly itself.

But, though he experiences few difficulties in learning to fly, the novice should remember always that no liberties can be taken. Every instant he is flying a man needs caution. The greatest masters of flight no matter how great their skill, have never lost their respect for the air. Hence it is that Orville Wright, Blériot, Farman and others of the pioneers are still with us today.—Claude Grahame-White in National Review.

Whistler and a Supper.

Though frequently hard up, Whistler had an income which seemed princely to students who lived on nothing at all. If Whistler had money in his pockets, Mr. Ionides says, he spent it royally on others. If his pockets were empty, he managed to refill them in a way that still amazes M. Oulevey, who, in proof of it, told us of the night when, after the cafe where they had squandered their last sous on kirsch had closed, he and Lambert and Whistler adjourned to the Halles for supper, ordered the best and ate it. Then he and Lambert stayed in the restaurant as hostages while Whistler, at dawn, went off to find money to pay. He was back when they awoke with 300 or 400 francs in his pocket. He had been to see an American friend, he said, a painter, "And, do you know, he had the bad manners to abuse the situation; he insisted on my looking at his pictures."—"The Life of James MacNeill Whistler," by E. R. and J. Pennell.

MIXED MARRIAGES.

Canadians Have Received Advice Regarding Weddings With Foreigners.

The following important statement regarding the marriage of British women with Hindus, Moslems, African negroes, etc., has been sent from Downing street to the Canadian Government. It has been prepared by the registrar-general of Great Britain:

The marriage of a woman of British nationality professing the Christian faith with a Hindu or Mohammedan even in a case when it is valid in all respects in this country, is not necessarily so when the husband returns to India or his own Mohammedan country. In India he is subject to what is known as his "personal" law of a Hindu; this law would probably not recognise the marriage at all, and in the case of a Mohammedan the fact that the marriage took place under forms prescribed by British law only, might give rise to doubts in a Mohammedan country as to the validity of the marriage, or at least place the parties in a position of some difficulty. The Indian courts would in such cases be able to offer very inadequate, if any, protection to the wife of such British marriage, while her position under a foreign court would be presumably worse.

In neither case is the marriage one that necessarily implies (outside Great Britain) the voluntary union for life of one man and one woman to the exclusion of all others, for under his "personal" law the Hindu and under Mohammedan law the Mohammedan husband may, if he desires, take other wives in addition to the first without consulting his Christian wife in any way. Even if the Hindu or Mohammedan husband had entered into a covenant with his Christian wife, such a covenant could not prevent him from taking another wife in India or a Mohammedan country if he so desired.

The forms observed at a marriage under English law before a registrar are not necessarily recognized by Mohammedan law as giving any legal effect or validity to the marriage relationship, and afford no protection to the wife in a country where Mohammedan law is observed. Where a marriage relationship is constituted which the Mohammedan law will recognise a Mohammedan husband may, under Mohammedan law, divorce his wife at will without any legal formality beyond that of repudiating her, while should he return to his own country, leaving his Christian wife, the difference of domestic domicile might be equivalent to divorce under Mohammedan law. In either case such divorce, while not dissolving the marriage in Great Britain under British law, would be operative in the Mohammedan country.

In the case of a woman of British nationality professing the Christian faith who marries a Mohammedan who is not a British subject, but is a subject or citizen of a Mohammedan state, she loses her British nationality on the marriage, and when the husband and wife land in any Mohammedan country (not being in the dominions or under the protectorate of his Britannic Majesty) they both become subject to the Mohammedan law. Further, the wife having lost her British nationality would appear to have become disentitled to the protection or assistance of any British authority, consular or otherwise.

African negroes are in many cases in their own countries subject in certain particulars to native law and custom which may permit of polygamy.

OLD TIME "ADS."

When 10,000 Fine Healthy Swedish Leeches Arrived In York.

When Toronto was York and York was a town, the commodities which our enterprising shop-keeping forbears retailed to its ever-growing community were doubtless as cheap as they are interesting, says H. P. Rossiter in The Toronto Star Weekly. Some little curiosity might be aroused to-day, for instance, if a merchant announced that he had just received a consignment of able-bodied leeches. Yet, rather less than 100 years ago, a local pioneer newspaper contained the advertisement of a firm stating that they had just received by express a fresh supply of 10,000 fine healthy Swedish leeches!

A brief glance shows that the following notice does not announce the sale of Pan's pipes: "One pipe and six octaves of superior Madeira. Low for cash." Two others of the same date possibly indicate that this was a sociable community; for example, "30 barrels malt whisky, 50 barrels common do, very cheap by private sale." And "4,000 gallons Scotch whisky of great strength and delicious flavor for sale by the subscribers." They were giants in those days.

While the electric light problem did not vex the early settlers, the lighting question was evidently not entirely satisfactory. For in an issue of 1830 we find: "To the dissatisfied users of lamp oil the undersigned offer a very superior bleached elephant oil equal to sperm.

A good number of the present generation could no doubt confess to obtaining a surreptitious pinch from a grandfather's snuffbox. This advertisement would seem to indicate that snuff-taking was fairly prevalent in the early twenties: "1,000 jars Macaboy snuff and five barrels of Scotch do, very fine and fresh, for sale." It would be a nice problem to calculate the number of sneezes in that consignment. Geese, both dead and alive, are still greatly in demand when the per pound consideration is reasonable, but the notice of "live geese feathers low for cash" in the Colonial Advocate of 1832 — ugh, feather beds!

The shoe merchant seems also to have hit upon a modern method. "Mud boots and shoes. Received direct from Quebec, an extensive supply of the above, warranted waterproof when varnished. The varnish the subscriber can furnish at so low a rate as 2s. 6d. a pint."

A confectioner of York, in 1829, "respectfully informs the ladies and gentlemen that he is now supplied with 1,100 bottles of cordials of various descriptions, 200 bottles of lemon syrup, and a superior quality of confectionery neither imported from France or England, nor smuggled in from the United States, but prepared by himself. After relating his unfortunate business mishaps, he continues "by way of advice to the public he cautions them in the use of soda water, for from calculations made in New York out of 500 who died in one week 250 were the victims of strong soda-water." Alas! there are many victims of strong soda-water nowadays.

It is comforting to know that the trained flea of to-day was also the entertainer of yesterday. This advertisement was clipped from an issue of 1835: "The extraordinary exhibition of Illustrious Fleas from England, just arrived in this city, and will be open for exhibition at the Steam-Boat Hotel this day. Admittance 1s. 3d., children half-price." The flea may be industrious, but hardly illustrious.

The Correspondent and Advocate of Nov. 5, 1835, contained this pathetic note: "The absence of the Editor from the city will unavoidably occasion till his return the want of editorial matter in this and future numbers."

Offers Body For Sale.

"For sale—a man's body!" That is the substance of an advertisement that appears in a recent issue of a Toronto paper, and, according to the man who inserted the "ad," he is entirely serious about the matter. The advertisement states that he desires to will his body to the anatomical institution which makes the highest bid upon it, provided the lowest offer is not less than $100. The object of the insertion of this rather novel advertisement is to procure some ready money in order to enable the man to pay the expenses of a very serious operation, performed upon his wife at the General Hospital, and to pay his house rent. In order to do these things without accepting charity, he is willing to forego the privilege of burial upon his death. No word of the success of his scheme is yet at hand.

Society Formed To Protect Indians.

The securing of their rights by the native races of British Columbia in the present dispute with the Provincial Government was strongly urged at a luncheon under the auspices of the newly-formed society for the protection of native races in Toronto recently. One speaker said that the title of the Indians to the land in Northern British Columbia was recognised by the Dominion Government at the time that province entered the Dominion, and it is purposed to have the question settled in the courts, if the machinery for putting legal action into operation can be set going. Ottawa has been urged to act as well as Westminster.

Lets Like That.

A certain famous skyscraper builder said in his New York office the other day apropos of costs and values:

"Costs and values get confused because there are so many men who, if sunshine had to be paid for, would swear that gas gave a much more brilliant light."—New York Times.

One For Each Life.

"I want a good revolver," began the determined looking man.

"Yes, sir," said the salesman. "Six chambers?"

"Why—er—you'd better make it a nine chamber. I want to use it on a cat next door."—London Express.

How Many Times Have You Heard the Remark

"I Must Take a Spring Medicine"

Do You Know Why This Remark is Made?

The reason for this is that your liver is sluggish, your bowels inclined to be constipated, and your blood thick and impure.

This is caused by the amount of rich and heavy food you've eaten during the winter months to keep your body warm.

"Is it not enough to clog the sytem up with waste and poisonous matter"? What you need is something to put the blood into proper shape and prepare it for the hot summer months.

Disraeli's Splurge With Canes.

Speaking of walking sticks reminds us of young Disraeli. Writing from Gibraltar, and telling his sister to inform their mother what a sensation his waistcoats and studs were making among the officers, he added: "I have also the fame of being the first who ever passed the straits with two canes, a morning and an evening cane. I change my cane on the gun fire and hope to carry them both on to Cairo. It is wonderful the effect those magical wands produce. I owe to them even more attention than to being the supposed author of—what is it? I forget." The fault of many walking sticks is that they are too short. Walk with a stick that seems at first intended for a man taller than yourself and you acquire an upright carriage. A Brighton shop that I pass occasionally is selling any number of sticks through pushing the testimony of a well known doctor as to the health advantages of long walking sticks.—London Chronicle.

Smoke and Soot.

Soot, the principal trouble maker in smoke, is the product of incomplete combustion, and is formed partly by the mechanical removal of ash by the chimney draft and partly by the decomposition of the volatile portion of the fuel which is formed by the process of destructive distillation. The character of soot varies with the distance from the grate at which it has been deposited, as well as the temperature of the furnace, amount of air, and method of firing. The acids contained in soot attack mortar, masonry, woodwork, metal work and building material generally. In many European cities it has been found that soot causes the rapid disintegration of statuary and public monuments. The damage done to inside decorations appears to be no less important than the effects upon the exterior of buildings. Smoke is visible proof of imperfect combustion of fuel, and consequently evidence of waste and inefficiency.—New York American.

GARDEN NEWS

With the coming of the first warm days of spring—who is not attacked with the Wanderlust? We yearn to get out of the house, indeed this is one of the first symptoms of spring fever, and is only natural after a long season of winter's cold and bluster, during which we must be an unwilling prisoner from our outdoor pleasures.

To dig in the soil and plant something—that sums up our main desires on these first warm days. Spring is the one time in the year when hope smiles strongest into tired eyes and brains from every peeping bud and blossom. Make this your garden motto for this spring, and see how much pleasure you derive from it: "Now, therefore, I will plant a plant just to see it grow. I will plant at least one kind that I have never grown before. At least a part of the garden I will prepare and till with my own hands. I will see that every tree and bush and herb on my place is given the very best opportunity to make the most of itself."

WITHIN REACH OF ALL

If you haven't a garden into which you can go and forget the little kitchen worries—then you know 'way down in your heart you wish for one—own up—don't you? Then start a garden right away, it may be just a little plot, but get out and in it, start with a few simple flowers and your return in pleasure and rested nerves will be so great that your garden will grow larger—never smaller. Every woman loves flowers and wants some of her own, and flowers are something that are not placed out of reach by price—every woman can have them.

Some women have said, "I'd love to have flowers in my garden, but it's a rented place—and what's the use—for some one else to enjoy?" What's the use to surround yourself with something you love to look at—because some one else might also enjoy them some day? Isn't this a poor argument? I would rather have my garden running over with flowers, even though the place be a rented one, it is my home while I'm there and their bloom will brighten my life—be enjoyed by every passer-by and be a source of much pleasure to the owner. Plan this spring to dig in the soil and drop a few seeds that will show others you loved the beautiful though it is on rented ground. Naturally one takes more enthusiastic interest in dressing up the grounds of a permanent home.

Providing the microbe of spring fever has got into your system, the only real remedy is to get out and plant things, watch them and study them if this year you would live the fullest life. You can start the first real outdoor work of the year—perhaps you are fortunate enough to have a hot bed to delve in. But if nothing else is possible, a few flats or seed boxes in the kitchen is decidedly better than nothing. Whatever it is, get at it right away.—The Gleaner.

ABOUT MEAT

Meat, when used fresh, is more palatable and desirable than when salted or cured. On the farm, where there is no ice or cold storage of any kind, it is very difficult to keep meat fresh during the summer months, and only a small amount can be handled at a time. It may, however, be kept for a few days, or even a week, in a cool cellar, where there is a free circulation of dry air, and flies and insects cannot get at the meat.

A very convenient means of keeping a supply of fresh meat, most of the time, is where two farmers kill a veal or sheep every week or so, and divide the carcase. After the meat is cut into convenient-sized pieces, it may be sprinkled with salt, which will greatly add to its keeping qualities.

During the winter months there is usually no difficulty in keeping fresh meat. It can be frozen or packed in snow, and kept in good shape. The most convenient way is to cut the carcase into desirable pieces for home use, and then put them out to freeze. Lay each piece out separately, so that it will freeze thoroughly. After this it may be packed in a box or barrel and kept frozen.

To freeze a quarter of beef, and hang it in some place where it will remain frozen solid, is not so satisfactory as cutting it into small pieces, because it is more difficult to handle when a piece of meat is desired. Avoid alternate freezing and thawing of meat, as that makes the meat flabby and also makes it lose its flavor.

USE NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE IN TIME AND YOU WON'T NEED ANY FALSE HAIR

Wearing artificial hair is a harmless deceit of which many ladies are guilty. These women are all objects for sympathy rather than criticism.

Early neglect in the care of the scalp has caused the loss of so much hair that their personal appearance is sadly marred. To correct this defect they resort to artificial hair.

Most ladies would resent any imputation of personal carelessness and neglect. And yet very many women permit their natural hair to become so dull, brittle and lifeless that it looks no better than the artificial.

All this is as unfortunate as it is unnecessary. Hair that is unsightly or thin may usually be attributed to the malevolent activity of the dandruff germ. This vicious germ burrows down into the hair follicle, shortly destroying its life. The hair becomes dead, loose and finally drops out.

There is a remedy sold by all druggists, the intelligent use of which will remove all traces of dandruff. It also cleanses the scalp of all accumulations and makes the hair shine with the lustre of life and beauty.

That remedy is Newbro's Herpicide "the Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer."

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications may be obtained at the best barber shops and hair dressing parlours.

The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich., will send a nice sample and booklet to any address upon receipt of 10c in postage or silver.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES

CHOCOLATE TAFFY.

One cup sugar, one cup molasses, one-half cup milk, one-half cup grated chocolate. Boil until it snaps in cold water. Pour in buttered pans, marking in squares when partly cool.

DOUGHNUTS.

One and one-half cups of powdered sugar, one large spoonful of lard, half cup of mashed potatoes, two eggs, one and one-half cups sweet milk, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder; roll out and fry in lard; add a little cinnamon.

STUFFED BAKED BLUEFISH.

Stuff the fish with breadcrumbs, salt, pepper, butter, and parsley, mixed up with the beaten yolk of an egg. Fill the fish with this and sew it up. Pour water and a little butter over the fish. Bake as you would a fowl.

NOODLES WITH PRUNES.

Soak a pound of prunes in cold water for two hours. Stew in enough water to cover, with a slice of lemon, until tender. As you take them off the fire, stir in a scant cupful of sugar. Boil in a five-cent package of noodles 15 minutes and drain. Serve prunes warm with the noodles hot.

SPICE CAKE.

One cup brown sugar, 1 cup milk, 1 cup molasses, ½ cup butter, 3 eggs, 3 cups flour, 1 cup raisins, ½ cup currants, 1 teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon cream of tartar, ½ teaspoon each of cinnamon, nutmeg and salt. Cream butter and sugar, add molasses, milk and beaten eggs. Mix and sift dry the ingredients. Dredge fruit with flour and add all to first mixture. Bake in a moderate oven. Cover with boiled frosting, made as follows: One cup sugar, ½ cup water, white of 1 egg, ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar, 1 teaspoon flavouring. Beat white of egg until frothy, add cream of tartar. Beat until stiff and dry. Make syrup of sugar and water until it threads. Add 3 tablespoons slowly to egg, beating in well, pour the rest in, add flavouring and beat until cool enough to spread.

For The Evening Dress

The new materials are quite at Minor Leagues, ad that he had retractive. The most popular ones are well known by name: Golfine, garbardine, moire, taffeta and Chinese crepe. One rarely sees these staple fabrics omitted in any dressmaking house.

They are manipulated in various ways, chosen in many colours, and combined with still other fabrics, but one is sure to find them.

There is also a weave of silk which is exceedingly fine and soft, and is widely used here for separate short coats, for waistcoats, for Turkish girdles, and sometimes for skirts.

It is rarely plain, and usually bears the imprint of broad stripes in strong colours, which is a revived design from Revolution days. It is usually called satin for want of a better name, but it is really not the same weave. If one does not care for its broad striping in costumery, let me assure you it makes admirable sofa cushions. When they are three feet long, eighteen inches wide, very simply stuffed and edged with a deep border of black satin ribbon, they are one of the first novelties of the season.

Of plain satin, there is little. Everyone laments its departure, and there may be individualists who will continue to wear it. Here and there one sees evening gowns of it such as a wonderful royal blue made by Cheruit without a single touch of ornament or lace or crystals. The entire beauty is in the skillful draping, and it is kept from the skin of the neck and arms by a band of white tulle.

There is no disposition on the part of the manufacturers to drop tulle. Miles of it are used this season, as entire gowns and in connection with other fabrics. Lace plays a dominant part in gowns for the afternoon and evening, and that artistic design of vermicelli lace, invented by Callot, is widely used over coloured satins or taffetas, or as an overdress for tulle.

The objection against this lace is its expense. Callot asks $325 for a gown of it, although she will substitute an imitation of the best weave for $250. These prices, by the way, will show you that France has not decreased the value of her clothes this year, although there has never been more talk of a bad season, of impending bankruptcy and of the crashing of some big houses.

Of the popularity of taffeta there is no use to talk. America may, or may not use it, but Europe is enthusiastic over it. When one asks why, the answer is that it "bunches up" well. This statement, in itself, is an evidence of the fashion tendancy. We are certainly 'bunched up' in the back, for the pannier, the minaret, and the bustle have resolved themselves into this huge puff just below the waistline.

Doucet has a remarkably clever lace designer who has invented a trimming that may be called lace for want of a better name. It is a fine silk net on which are applied flowers of thicker net, outlined with a tiny silver thread, or sometimes a white silk thread.

The house uses this in deep ruffles on linings of satin or taffeta. It is also made into loose short capes that are gathered to a neckband and hang over a decollete evening gown.

What is known as la-me lace — pronounced in two sylables with the accent on the 'e'—is growing in fashion. It was invented last summer, and is quite effective with its flat, thinly rolled silver thread applied in lace design to a net surface.

The new crepes are so strikingly like calicoes that the American cannot refrain from smiling at their appearance on smart women. The weave is exceedingly soft, but the colouring and the formation of the figures have the same primitive stamp as the five cent cotton calico which has been worn for two centuries by the negroes on Southern plantations.

This crepe is used for informal gowns. Although the material is light enough to be comfortable on a hot day, the colouring is vivd, and for this reason may be objectionable to those who like cool colours in hot weather.

There are many other crepes, however, that are light in colour, but they are not so attractive. They have pink roses or blue circles on a white ground and are very, very youthful.

AMONG THE NEW HATS

Faille and moire are much used for facing.

* *

Both glossy and lustreless straw braids are in fashion.

* *

Flat pump bows, that band around the crown and the bows on each of the four sides are seen on smart New York sailors.

* *

Quills, grapes in varied tones, feathers cut into all sorts of fanciful shapes, ornaments that imitate wings, flowers, cabochons are varied trimmings from which to choose.

* *

Glycerined ribbon, that looks like a supple piece of oilcloth, has precedence over all other trimming materials for the tailored type of hat and two faced ribbon is also very smart in New York.

THEY ARE TALKING MUCH ABOUT STRIPES THESE DAYS.

One of the leading motifs in summer materials is stripes; there are striped voiles, striped crepes, striped sponges, striped nets and numberless other striped fabrics that are cool and becoming. The sponge suitings show a hairline stripe of black or color; some of the imported cottons have a wide stripe of white chenille edged with a line of black or colors, and then there are the very popular awning stripes. These awning stripes are used for both blouses and frocks and are very effective. No. 8165 illustrates the awning stripe in an afternoon gown; the material is a French printed net and is priced at 75 cents a yard. A two-piece, gathered tunic is a feature of this dress and a gathered guimpe of plain white net.

This dress requires for a girl of 14, 4½ yards of 36 inch materia'

The panniered gown sho the other figured is fashioned f pe in which there is a fine line of bright green; collar and trimming sections are of bright green voile, and the girdle is green velvet. The crocheted buttons and loops are effective as trimming.

This dress may be copied in size 36 with 6¾ yards of 36 inch material.

NEW FILMY LACES

Of gossamer transparency are new lace fabrics. Shadow laces are replaced by filet of the French kind, that is, very light and open, and by silk and cotton laces of such transparency that at a short distance nothing but the embroidery shows; he mesh becomes invisible.

A third kind of lace is Breton embroidery on net. The pattern is such that there is a curious illusion of bad relief of the embroidery, which seems to be sculptured on the net.

These laces come in different flounce widths. Those suitable for ruffles are from 18 to 27 inches wide, just right for the skirts that are made of two or more superimposed ruffles.

One of the most striking of the new laces is a silk two-toned flouncing. The mesh is of cobwebby fineness and a pale gold ecru tone, while the embroidery is white. Over a tinted ivory, pink, or blue foundation dress the mesh does not show at all, because it is so fine and transparent and the embroidered design looks as if it were painted, cameo like, on the foundation dress.

These real French filet laces are as different from the Italian filet—which is more solid and heavy in effect—as one could imagine. Their graceful, sheer delicateness makes them very attractive for dresses. The square mesh is very large and the designs flow in graceful patterns.

Besides Breton embroidery on net it is also used on sheer batiste or soft fine organdie. Even though made by machinery, this embroidery has the air of being made by hand, so fine and imitative is the process. Semi-made robes and tunics of the Breton embroidery on net need but little work to transform them into a dress. A foundation skirt of crepe, satin or taffeta, an underdressage of silk muslin or chiffon, is all that is necessary.

Even the taffeta or satin girdle or cravat of a contrasting colour is attached to these tunics and dresses with the pretty loops already tied. The tunics are in the new note and include some very Frenchy little style touches, bright sashes, tiny bows, etc., that immediately suggest the colour combinations of the foundation dresses.

In other semi-made dresses, taffeta, filet and embroidery are combined.

A very interesting detail in some of the lace designs is that the embroidery design is extremely narrow for the width of the flouncing. In deed, it is so narrow that it is little more than a border in some. They remind one of some of the old Empire Alencon designs and eighteenth century Mechlin laces. Some laces have straight edge borders in these styles, and some have scallops, shallow or deep. In any and all they have an entirely new and original look and an artistic elegance that will make them popular.

An original lace is one that has a sort of raised ratine or sponge figure that will go well with some of the rough weave material, both in silk and cotton.

The most important use of these various embroidered net flouncings, in the afternoon gowns made of silk, satin and crepe, is in the drop or underskirts. Over the flounce that is attached to a foundation skirt the pretty overdress of silk is slashed, caught up or made shorter than usual skirt length. From under this silk peep forth these pretty flouncings, often unlined so that the ankles are seen through the lace.

YOUNG WOMEN MUST GRASP THE TRUE MEANING OF HOME

Men Have Specialized in Procuring Wealth — Most Women Enter Matrimony Unprepared to Guide Spending Department.

There has been a growing conviction that far too many women matrimonially inclined undertake the responsibilities of home building without a comprehensive investigation of the problems that will arise when the honeymoon has waned.

Miss Helen Louise Johnston, speaking at the Women's Club in Toronto this week, stated that most of this old world's tribulations have come about through women not having understood the full portent of the idea expressed by the word "home."

Men have taken it to mean the production of wealth. They have made their business the getting of wealth together. But women have not been taught how to spend that wealth. Men spend years fitting themselves for their life work, but how much time does the average girl spend on getting ready for a career as a wife and a mother. Practically none; for it is a popular belief that such work comes natural to women.

How many people know what home means? Most of us regard it as a mere eatatory or sleepatory. But if it were merely this, hotels or boarding houses would be wiser, for it would be cheaper than numberless small dwellings. Again, if it were simply a place to be born in, hospitals would be more efficient, as many people are discovering. But Home as defined by Miss Johnson is a place where personality has a place to develop. The economic end of a home is to increase the natural vitality and human efficiency.

Why Many Homes Fail.

How many women have realized that? How can we not understand why so many "homes" are such failures? Miss Johnson is not one of those who place all the blame for the world's miseries on men, for she says they have her most profound sympathy. However, she declares that it is the men who have been responsible for the educational systems in our schools and our girls have not been given a chance.

Lessen Cost of Living.

Miss Johnson scored women for being as saxacious as sheep. They followed the leader, afraid to do anything independently for fear they would fall down a chasm. But women must begin to realize they formed half of mankind and their life work was even more important. An economic expert had pointed out that the high cost of living could only be lessened by (1) More production. (2) Wiser selection. (3) More intelligent consumption. Now the first was done by man, but women looked after the latter two. Therefore in them was the salvation of the country.

No woman need feel that housekeeping makes here a drudge if she will but use the intelligence given her, declared Miss Johnson. But if freedom be woman's cry she will find that it only comes with a margin of time or money. And the more skillfully a woman does her task the more freedom results.

In dividing the household budget she should consider time and strength just as we do money. If you cannot go to a luncheon and the theatre and still run your house and take care of your children, you must decide which you are going to leave out. The proper spending of time and strength saves money. The proper spending of money saves time and strength.

A Proper Division.

Miss Johnson divides the family budget under five headings: Rent, including taxes, insurance and care; operating expenses of home, including laundry and domestic service; food, clothes and the higher life. The latter includes everything outside of absolute needs—things that feed the soul. What these are each family must decide for itself. And that is the big question. And the expenditures in the other four divisions all contribute to this last question.

If you must live in a more fashionable quarter than you can afford do not put all your expenditure down as rent, cook to really "Higher Life." Or, again, if you buy more food and richer food than your really need that should not be placed in the food account; it is your "Higher Life."

Will be a Boon.

In conclusion Miss Johnson declared now, when she looked back into the past, we saw things that we thought ill at the time were best for us now. So in the future we might find out that the high prices of the present might be of much use to us if we but saw it. For if they taught us to eat simpler foods, lead simpler and purer lives and opened our eyes to the beauty of self-sacrifice they would be a boon to this generation.

GOOD LUCK WITH CAKE

Baker's cake is well enough in its way, but nothing quite takes the place of home-made cake, providing, of course, that it is good cake, and not the down-trodden, soggy mass which is seen on some tables.

But I never have any luck at all with cake, I hear some readers say.

My dear lady, there is no such thing as luck in cooking. Every cake would be perfection if the habit of taking pains were stirred in with the other ingredients. The woman who does her cooking in a slap-dash style may make a successful dish once in a while, but she always makes her direst failures when company comes and she is particularly anxious to do her best.

By remembering and applying a few simple rules, a perfect cake can be turned out of the oven at every trial. There is no excuse nowadays when food is so expensive for spoiling good eggs, butter, flour and sugar, by careless mixing and baking. The first thing to bear in mind is that the cake must never be kept waiting while a forgotten ingredient is rummaged for, or the pan is greased or the oven gets hot.

This course of action will surely make the cake heavy and indigestible. The best way to be certain of always having 'good luck' with cake is to take out your cook book and then get everything together that the recipe calls for, checking off the ingredients to make sure that none are forgotten. Then grease the pan, which can best be done with a twist of clean tissue paper or a piece of a white crepe paper napkin. Next pay a little attention to your oven so that it will be ready for the cake. The heat of the oven must be graduated somewhat in accordance with the size of the cake. Never put a large cake into a very hot oven, for if you do the outside will not rise propperly or possibly the top will burn before the inside is done. Drop cakes and other small cakes which are baked without pans to support them should be put in a quick oven about ten minutes before your cake is ready to put in and then turn on the rts of the burners when you shut the oven door the heat should be about right for a medium-sized or large cake.

After the cake is once in the oven it is well for the first fifteen or twenty minutes to emulate the Chinese cook in San Francisco, who, when his mistress asked him how he made such delicious cakes, said: "You put him in the oven, then you go away, mind your own business, cake he mind his."

In twenty minutes after a large cake has been put in the oven and about fifteen after a smaller cake it is well to see how it is doing. Open the door very gently not more than half way and try the cake in the centre with a clean broom straw. If it comes out clean the cake is done. If the cake is cracked open in the centre it shows that the oven is too hot and the heat formed a crust over the cake that did not allow the air to escape. If the cake browns too fast on top put a piece of greased paper over it. Layer cakes bake much quicker than loaf cakes and require a hotter oven. Never shut the oven door after the cake is in the oven, for if you do you will surely create a draught that will cause the cake to fail.

Cakes that contain butter should be beaten vigorously to make them fine grained. In creaming butter and sugar together always heat the mixture bowl in commencing operations and you will find that the task can be accomplished much more quickly and easily. This can be done by pouring in a little hot water; after a moment pouring it out and then wiping the bowl dry. Now, put in the butter, and rub it with a silver spoon until soft and creamy; then all the sugar gradually, and continue beating until it is a soft cream.

I want all women to know how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food helped me. Mrs. M. A. South

A Message to Women

From one who has learned to appreciate Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Modern life whether in the office, factory or home means an enormous strain on the more delicate nervous system of women. Whether it is the girl behind the counter or the lady going the round of society functions, the nerves are at high tension and require an abundance of rich, red blood if health is to be maintained.

Because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new rich blood, it is eminently successful in curing the ailments which cause the greater part of woman's suffering and has become duly popular among those who have learned of its merits.

Mrs. M. A. South, Grand Prairie, Alta., writes:—"I cannot begin to tell you how much good Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me. I was all run down, had no appetite, and suffered each month in a way only women will understand. After having followed this treatment for some weeks I feel like a different woman, sleep well, have a good appetite and am able to do my own work, even during the time that I formerly had so much suffering. I have no pains whatever now, which is an entirely new experience for me. You may publish this letter as I want all women to know how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has helped me, and I feel sure it will do as much for any woman."

Dr. Stohr's Kephaldol

THE GREAT UNFAILING PAIN RELIEVER

In all cases of NEURALGIA, NEURITIS, SCIATICA, GOUT, RHEUMATISM, etc., especially in acute form where maddening pain makes life almost unbearable, KEPHALDOL offers that which will evoke heartfelt gratitude—relief, prompt and certain, with speedy cure ahead.

KEPHALDOL is no injurious drug, no charlatan nostrum—thousands of medical men all over the world, including all representing the clinical opinion of Vienna (to which City belongs Dr. Stohr, KEPHALDOL'S famous discoverer) have pronounced this remedy to be a means not merely of alleviating, but of stopping pain without risk of injury to the heart or other organ of the body.

MRS. A. E. TURNER, 35a, Willoughby Street, New Lenton, Nottingham, writes:—

"I must say Kephaldol seems to charm away the pain like nothing else does. I have tried a great many things for Rheumatism, but Kephaldol eases the pain quicker than anything I have ever had."

MR. LAWRENCE WINDLEY, Cranfeigh, Dane Road, Luton, Eng., sends the following letter;—

"I had rheumatism in my leg, and had to go about with the aid of a stick. I took two Kephaldol tablets at 10 a.m., and by eleven all trace of pain had disappeared and I have not had it from that day to this. All you say of Kephaldol is true. It is a pain killer. The remaining tablets I gave to a friend suffering with acute Neuralgia, and they have positively cured him."

A letter from MRS. BEATRICE COSSEY, Brookfield, Eng., is worth repeating:—

"My experience of Kephaldol as a pain killer is absolutely marvellous. I had a fearfully acute attack last year of Neuritis, Sciatica, and Lumbago, and it did wonders for me. I shall always feel most grateful for what it has done, and I am most happy to let others know of its wonderful effects as a pain destroyer."
